Fred Graham

CBS correspondent to speak at VWC

Fred Graham, law correspondent for CBS News, will be the featured speaker at Virginia Wesleyan College's fall convocation on Thursday, October 4, at 11:30 a.m. in the Cunningham Gymnasium. The program is free and open to the public.

Graham will speak on "The Supreme Court: Antidote to Revolution," according to Dr. Stephen Mansfield, chairman of the convocation committee.

Graham graduated from Yale University in 1953 and served in the United States Marine Corps from 1953 to 1955 as an intelligence officer. In 1957 and 1958 he was a reporter and later a full-time staff writer for the Nashville Tennessean. In 1959 Graham received an LL.B. degree from Vanderbilt Law School, where he served as editor of the Vanderbilt Law Review. He attended Oxford University on a Fulbright scholarship and was awarded a Diploma in Law by Oxford in June of 1960.

Graham practiced law in Nashville, Tennessee, for three years before becoming Chief Counsel of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Constitutional Amendments. After serving in several other government positions, he joined the New York Times in 1965 as its Supreme Court Correspondent. He left in November of 1972 to become Law Correspondent for CBS News.

Graham is the author of two books and has received three Emmy awards for his coverage of Watergate and the Agnew resignation, as well as the Peabody Broadcasting award for his coverage of the Watergate cover-up trial. He serves as a trustee of the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press.

Tidewater cities renew interest in TVDC

Tidewater jurisdictions are interested in reorganizing and revitalizing the Tidewater Virginia Development Council, Mayor Patrick L. Standing told Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon.

He said the mayors and chairmen of county boards of supervisors have worked out a formula to determine the financial contribution of each jurisdiction by using the land area as well as the population.

The late Norfolk Mayor Fred Duckworth spearheaded the organization of the TVDC 20 years ago as an agency which would promote new industry in the area.

Standing said that the present executive director is leaving Oct. 1 and that he would be asking council to agree to the new formula next Monday. Virginia Beach now contributes $7,000 a year to the TVDC and is getting little for it, he said. The new formula will bring the contribution up to $20,000, but Standing said he hopes to get more for it. He said that the activities of the TVDC can be redirected so that the private sector is involved.

Councilman George R. Ferrell asked whether the TVDC would be a duplication of effort since Virginia Beach has an Economic Development Department.

Beach mayor looks to state in search for equitable tap-on utilities fees

Have the state legislature provide the funds to make tap-on utilities fees more equitable in Virginia Beach, suggested Mayor Patrick L. Standing.

Since a state agency, the Health Department, requires much of the sewers for health reasons, have the state fund the difference in the fees which now exists. "If they fund that, we'd be happy to change our schedule," Standing said.

He offered the suggestion as an alternative to present when the inequitable utility fees are discussed at a public hearing called by State Senator Peter K. Babalas on Oct. 4.

City Manager George L. Hanbury said that Babalas has proposed having refunds from the City's General Fund for people who have paid higher rates than others. In this case, Hanbury said, citizens who do not have utilities will be paying for them. The city has three rates from $440 to $780 depending on when the resident signed a contract with the city. Residents have complained about the inequity, but the city feels compelled to honor its contracts.

Hanbury said the city can't do anything retroactive. Councilman John A. Baum noted that everybody in the system is subsidized.

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. said, that "in fairness to Babalas, the people approached him." He said that citizens complaining about the higher fees ran into a brick wall here and then went to the state.

Hanbury said that he planned to make a presentation at the Oct. 4 meeting and that the city also would be represented by a member of the city's legal department.

Housing program for low income families made possible at Beach by HEW grant

An innovative housing program will give low income families who live outside Virginia Beach the opportunity to take their place in line for subsidized units in the city.

The Southeastern Virginia Planning District (SEVPD) is one of 22 selected throughout the country to participate in a demonstration project which will permit low income people more freedom in moving from one city or county to another. Andrew Lester, a city planner, said that this year the program will be more symbolic. Four of the city's 41 existing units approved for subsidies by HUD this year will be open to non-residents under the Section 8 program.

Lester told Virginia Beach City Council Monday at an informal session that the SEVPD has worked out a formula for the "Regional Mobility Program" to reserve 10 percent of Title A funds for the low and moderate income families from other areas.

Lester said that the program will help city people as well as those from other cities. A directory of available units and a map of locations of schools, jobs and hospitals will be maintained by the SEVPD and a hot line will be available. The program has been made possible by a $75,000 grant from the Department of Health Education and Welfare. He said the district has recognized that housing in an regional program and that more access should be provided for people.

The 41 units were approved by HUD this year which are in addition to the 75 approved last year.

Lester said that the localities will be opened up on a reasonable basis. Other localities in the district are likewise expected to open up diluting to some extent the impacted areas.

Since the city does not know what kind of demand will develop for the program, the plan calls for a reservations for the four units be held for nine months. If no one registers an interest, the units will go back to city residents.

Applicants, who will probably appeal to the Social Services Department, will be placed on a waiting list. Lester said there is always a waiting list to get into any apartment in the beach. He said the program was "not a wholesale relocation from one city to another."

'The Green Run Run'

A 10,000 meters men and women's run will be held this Sunday, October 7, at Green Run Elementary School in Virginia Beach. Sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Green Run and the Tidewater Striders, the run will begin at 2 p.m. An awards ceremony will be held at 3 p.m. Trophies and medallions will be presented to winners in each category. All runners will receive T-shirts. Participants may register the day of the race beginning at 11 a.m. at the Green Run Club House. Cost to register is $5.

Pier expansion would reduce amount of available publicly-owned beach Believe it or not, said attorney Grover Wright, not all the people who visit the Beach like the sun. Therefore, who not allow the Virginia Beach Fishing Pier, Inc. to enlarge its structures on the beach and provide a little shade?

Bill Eagan, part owner of the Dunes Motor Inn between 9th and 10th Streets (the pier is at 14 Street), disagreed. "I can't conceive of cutting off one foot of beach. The people come here for the sun."

City Council wanted to find out about effects of more pilings on erosion and deferred action for 30 days.

The Pier had applied for a conditional use permit to expand the existing facilities by approximately 3500 square feet by encroaching on the beach on a 3.19 acre parcel on the east side of Atlantic Avenue, north of 14th Street.

Although the Planning Commission commended approval, City Manager George L. Hanbury said that the council should not grant an encroachment any further west on the beachfront property than what now exists. Expansion to the west, he said, would reduce the amount of available publicly-owned beach for recreational purposes. He recommended that any expansion be eastward of the existing structure. Besides the city doesn't allow commercial activities on the beach, Hanbury added.

He said that more extensive building would interfere with sunbathing "while we're trying to get more public beach."

Wright said the Pier owners say that the beach underneath the structure is used by people who want to get in the shade. "It's the only place where you can find shade."

Wright said that Langley and McDonald, engineers for the Erosion Commission, recommend replacing the pilings and putting in more substantial pilings farther apart. A tentative plan is to remove 49 pilings and put

City foots bill for developers

The City of Virginia Beach will foot the $193,000 bill for subdivision improvements at Level Green which should have been taken care of by the developers.

City Manager George L. Hanbury pointed out that although the city obtained a judgment against the Level Green Corporation, he did not expect the improvements to be made by the company which has been dissolved. He said one of the principals of the corporation Rocco Lassiter, had agreed to pay $48,200, but not until 1981.

He said that subdivision procedures have been tightened to avoid a recurrence of the situation.

Council Monday appropriated the funds which will correct drainage deficiencies, install a sidewalk along Level Green Boulevard, pave Level Green Boulevard from Indian River Road to Tradewinds Road and provide 15 street lights along Level Green Boulevard.

Off-street parking ordinance limits commercial vehicle parking

An off-street parking ordinance approved by Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon prohibits parking of a commercial vehicle in residential or apartment districts except that one commercial vehicle of one ton or less may be parked on any lot by the resident of the premises located there.

The restriction does not apply to commercial vehicles during the normal conduct of business or in the delivery or provision of service to a residential area.

Approval of rezoning allows apartment house construction

A ten-unit apartment house will be constructed on a .542 acre parcel at the southwest intersection of Pleasure House Road and Lookout Road in Chesapeake Beach.

Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon by a vote of 6-1 approved the rezoning which will make the construction possible. Richard S. Foster, who applied for the change of zoning from B-1 to Business-Residential District to A-2 Apartment District building on the property and build 10 apartments.

Robert Smith, President of the Chesapeake Beach Civic League said the league objected to the density and preferred two duplexes or a quadplex on the site.

Voting for the rezoning were Councilmen R.L. Riggs, George R. Ferrell, J. Curtis Payne Jr., Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. and Mayor Patrick L. Standing. Voting against rezoning was Councilwoman Barbara Henley. Absent were Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf and Councilmen Clarence A. Holland, Reid Ervin and Donald Merrick.

Virginia Beach expects to be #1 in state in 1980 U.S. Census Virginia Beach, which expects to be Number One in Virginia in the 1980 U.S. Census, is thinking about establishing a committee to make sure everyone is counted.

Like it said in the Dr. Zeuss book, "Let every Who holler, let every who shout."

But in Virginia Beach the citizens won't have to go that far. All they will have to do is fill out the census forms and return them to the census takers.

City Manager George L. Hanbury told City Council Monday afternoon at an informal session that the Planning Department has already prepared population estimates of 273,000 to 275,000 which could mean that the Beach will be the largest city in Virginia.

The figures are important, he said, because federal appropriations are often based on population figures.

He said that the census will be taken by mail — no door-to-door canvassing — and unless an effort is made to get the people to fill in the forms and mail them in, the city will lose money.

Census day is April 1, he said, and Hanbury suggested an overall advertising campaign and a special committee to oversee things. He added that the military will be counted in the Beach census if they live at the Beach; those who are stationed on ships will be counted in the Norfolk census.

Hanbury suggested a committee of seven or eight. In Whoville, in the Zeuss story, it was the littlet Who who put Whoville on the map. In Virginia Beach it may be the littlet who will put the city in the lead.

Pastors' wives work at liberation

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

In the event that you do not know, pastor's wives have been working at their own liberation. This spirit has been felt in all areas of our society, and now it is very much in the church.

Part of this new spirit is reflected in a book which has been written to help the minister's spouse find herself, to be an authentic person and yet meet the expectations of a very difficult role. This book is published by Abington Press and entitled, "An Underground Manual for Minister's Wives, and Other Bewildered Women." The book cover also has an editor's warning, reading very much like that found in cigarette ads: "Warning, this book can be dangerous to your hardened categories."

It is an insightful sharing from within the paragon walls which is basically directed to the younger sister of the authoress, Bonnie. The younger sister is married to a United Methodist minister, and is an extremely talented young lady used to living a full, open and very creative life. She went through a traumatic adjustment fitting into the different and demanding situation of being a wife to a man who had chosen to be a minister.

The book is written to Bonnie in a rather tongue-in-cheek style, but the writer is a deeply dedicated minister's wife herself, and also happens to have been the head counselor at California Lutheran College and has just completed her doctorate at the University of California at Los Angeles. Her name is Ruth, and she writes the book under the pen name of Irma There.

Ruth says that a pastor's wife was expected to be a part social worker, evangelist-mother, religion expert, and is not just married to the man she loves, but in some sense to the church itself.

Charles Merrill Smith, in his recent book, "How To Become a Bishop Without Being Religious," misses the point when he advises, tongue-in-cheek, that a pastor must consider most carefully before he selects one of his most important pieces of equipment — his wife. This is precisely what is being rejected.

The way things are today and the cultural changes which are taking place demand that the expectations and realities of being a pastor's wife have to be updated. In 1969, my wife participated in a study which was reported in William Kail's book, "The Pastor's Wife." This was a research project which surveyed 5,000 pastor's wives from 30 Protestant denominations.

The survey listed some of the patterns of behavior. The first type of woman was the supportive, trouble-avoiding personality. This type of pastor's wife is usually a person with a high level of energy and a sense of calling and dedication to her role. She is obviously supportive of her husband, church, and recognized by the community.

The woman on the other end of the graph takes part only in those church activities that seem of worth to her. She resents being a functionary rather than an individual. She often thinks of the congregation in the category of a critical mother-in-law, rather than a large family of a caring community. Often she was shown by the study to be intellectually idealistic, and even detached from the hypocrisy of the expression of the Christian faith, but not from her faith.

This 1969 study has shown an increasing trend. The social researchers noted that with each year of her husband's ministry, the first woman was moving more and more toward the second woman's point of view. To put it in simpler terms, it was that many women were simply giving up trying to meet unrealistic expectations.

William Kail wrote his conclusion: "The image of a pastor's wife is not only historically impossible, but theologically questionable. Cultural stereotypes, especially when expressed through congregational expectations, tend to produce unrealistic and unhealthy guilt, self-pity, rebellion, or passive conformity." Women's Lib is most certainly invading the paragonage. It has permeated the congregation, has entered the seminaries, and sooner or later the church hierarchy will have to give it more than lip service.

The emerging role of women throughout Tidewater and across the nation is helping the pastor's wife to accept her individuality and get away from the stereotype expectations. Pastor's wives, certainly with other bewildered women, married to hardworking professional men, will begin to go back to work, to further their education, to become more deeply and meaningfully involved in community activities, not necessarily sponsored by their husband's churches. They are writing the role instead of living it!

TRT begins bus service from beach to ODU

Tidewater Regional Transit (TRT) has announced plans to begin new express bus service to Old Dominion University from Virginia Beach.

Effective this month, two morning and three afternoon trips on TRT's route #20-Virginia Beach Boulevard Express will be extended to serve the O.D.U. campus.

The new service is in direct response to the results of a transportation survey conducted by the university. This survey indicated a large number of O.D.U. students living in the areas served by route 20. The alternation of the route will provide these students with direct express service to and from O.D.U.

"Through this change," said John R. Sears Jr., chairman of the Tidewater Transportation District Commission "we are providing the students with a viable alternative to driving to and from class each day."

Those wanting further information should call the TRT Transportation Information Center at 623-3222.

Director of Continuing Education - TCC

Reading is perhaps the most basic educational skill. Students who do not read well have trouble with almost all other learning areas. Improvement in reading skills almost always results in improvement in other areas of school work.

At the Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College, students are able to improve their reading skills through courses available in the Reading Laboratory located in Building D.

Reading Improvement, English 08, is a combination remedial and developmental course primarily designed for older adolescents and adults who have already mastered basic language skills. Emphasis is on comprehension and vocabulary.

The course consists of drill materials, lectures and practice sessions designed to improve perception, comprehension and methods of vocabulary building. Classes meet five hours per week, one hour daily. The five-day schedule is designed to give students adequate practice time, which is the most essential factor in improving reading skills.

Because of individual differences in ability, the group and lecture work is limited to 25 percent of weekly class time and provides practical instruction in procedures and use of laboratory materials. The remaining 75 percent of class time is used by students to work on their reading skills at their own rate.

The goal of the reading improvement course is for students to read at a twelfth grade level. Statistics show the average student improves his reading skills by two years in one quarter's work, although there are many instances of students upgrading their reading level by four, five, or six years in one quarter.

In Advanced Reading, English 118, emphasis is placed on structural analysis, critical reading and study techniques for the development of individual skills. As in reading improvement, goals include improving vocabulary and comprehension, with the added, more sophisticated skills of learning to read critically and to interpret figurative language. Students learn to distinguish fact from opinion, to recognize an author's intent and attitude as well as bias and the use of propaganda, to recognize faculty reasoning and to make critical judgements of the author's style. In learning to interpret figurative language, students are able to approach imaginative literature confidently, with an awareness of what is expected of the reader in each case.

The two reading courses offered at TCC's Virginia Beach campus provide students an opportunity for improvement in skills which carry over to other areas of education. The individual student works at his or her own rate and gains confidence as skills improve. The reading laboratory operates in a structured environment, with the instructor on hand to answer questions and provide guidance, but it is a self-help program.

Pretests are given to determine reading ability. For further information about improving your reading skills, contact the Virginia Beach campus at 427-3070. Today College Counts!

Richard E. Hoehlein is the new director of continuing education at the Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College. His responsibilities include coordination of evening and off-campus credit courses, non-credit courses, community services and community relations for the Virginia Beach campus.

Hoehlein comes to TCC from East Lansing, Michigan, where he served as coordinator of community education.

He holds the bachelor of arts, master of arts and education specialist degrees from Michigan State University.

Noted researcher to share facts on Va.'s settlers

Dr. Ransom B. True, Director of Historical Research for the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, will be the speaker for the Great Bridge Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution, October 4, 3 p.m., at the Larchmont Branch Library on Hampton Boulevard in Norfolk. Dr. True will discuss "The Virginia Settlers Research Project," of which he is the coordinator.

Dr. True received his Ph.D. from the University of Virginia and is the author of numerous articles and manuscripts on Virginia's history and court records. The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities semi-annual publication, Discovery, carries his column, "True Relations". He has been responsible for the research program which relates to the APVA's seventeenth century properties of Jamestown, Lynnhaven House, and Bacon's Castle.

Mrs. Clyde W. Bradshaw, Regent of Great Bridge Chapter DAR, said that since the national theme of the National Society DAR for the year is "A Tapestry of Service", the program is entitled "A Tapestry of Seventeenth Century Days - A Computerized Service for Researchers".

Dr. True is being presented by Great Bridge Chapter's Genealogical Records Committee which was established in 1913 for the purpose of preserving valuable records of a genealogical nature.

A DAR chapter has the responsibility of copying or abstracting records in its county and then sending the material to the National DAR Genealogical Records Office in Washington, D.C., stated Mrs. William B. Wingo, Committee Chairman.

Although Dr. True's Virginia Settlers Research Project is not related to the Revolutionary War period, Great Bridge Chapter DAR feels that because of its magnitude and significance as a research tool in providing a wealth of information and data for historians, genealogists, and researchers alike, it deserves widespread recognition.

The purpose of the Virginia Settlers Research Project, which was begun June 19, 1978 in the basement offices of APVA's Castle House in Richmond and funded by a $84,000 grant, was the collecting and processing of historical data necessary to the compilation and publishing of a comprehensive biographical dictionary of all those who came to Virginia between 1607 and 1660.

The result is a 3,200 page, seven volume printout of 97,000 entries, 33,000 names in 126,000 lines of print.

To assist him in this ambitious project, Dr. True trained and supervised nineteen employees. Dr. True and his staff obtained information from handwritten court records and English records of the period as well as from published documents pertaining to Virginia and recorded this data on cards, listing the first and last name of the person, date and place of the event, and the source of the information.

Through the process of coding and key punching, the cards have been processed by a computer, which gathered in an alphabetical listing all the information for each person. Entries include birth, death, arrival in Virginia, marriage dates, office held, land holdings, and other pertinent data if that information exists in the documents researched. During this research more than was previously known was learned about the residents of Lynnhaven House in Virginia Beach as well as those who lived on Jamestown Island, according to Dr. True.

A by-product of the research project is the publication of A Guide to Seventeenth Century Court Handwriting by Kent P. Bailey, Vernon A. Bourisique, and Ransom B. True (Richmond: The Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, 1979).

Because the seventeenth century documents were often written in Middle English, an in-depth study was made of this reading problem to aid in deciphering the old records. Abbreviation of ordinary words as well as names was a common practice. Punctuation was not consistent, and many letters were written alike.

Numbers were written differently from the way we write them today. Roman numerals were often found in the old records. Often Latin terms or their abbreviations were a carry-over from the British or European practices.

Spelling was not standardized, much of it being phonetic. Many settlers could read little, and some could write less.

Dates presented a problem when the calendar was changed from the Julian to the Gregorian system in 1752 in Great Britain and its British possessions. Under the Julian, or ecclesiastical calendar, New Year's Day fell on March 25. Because of this, a system of double-dating is used. Whenever a date fell between January 1 and March 4 before 1752, it was recorded to indicate both the ecclesiastical and the historical (Gregorian) calendars.

Dr. True said that the researchers who compiled the handwriting guide became highly skilled at reading the seventeenth century handwritten court records and at writing calligraphy. He also noted that there were a few surprises in the research.

There were more Virginians here than previously believed, and more came here and returned to England than had been reported. In the 1650's indentured servants who usually served seven years if they went to other colonies, served only four to five years in Virginia.

Librarians and DAR Regents from Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, and Portsmouth have been invited to attend the meeting. Anyone desiring copies of the handwriting guide or photocopies of the pages from the printout may write to the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, 2705 Park Avenue, Richmond, Virginia 23220 (Phone 804-359-0239) for information or contact Mrs. William B. Wingo, Genealogical Records Chairman, Great Bridge Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution.

Virginia Beach Junior Woman's Club prepares for Home Craft Show and Sale

The Virginia Beach Junior Woman's Club is preparing for its eleventh annual Home Craft Show and Sale to be held on October 12 and 13 from 9:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. and Oct. 14, from 12 noon to 6 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Civic Center (Dome). The show features 90 craftsmen from the Tidewater and surrounding areas with crafts ranging from needlework, woodworking, leather, glass and silver, along with Christmas decorations and many other crafts. Many of the crafters are homemakers who work and plan all year for their exhibits in the show.

The Craft Show is the club's major ways and means project, with the proceeds being divided between ways and means recipients, some of which are The Virginia Beach Crisis Intervention Home, The Girls Group Home, and ASK (The Association for Research in Childhood Cancer). Many benevolences are also added each year. Among these are Camp Easter Seal-East, Virginia Beach Safety Council, Birthright, Emergency Medical Service of Virginia Beach and the Kidney Foundation of Tidewater.

The show is one of the largest of its type in the east and receives many thousands of visitors each year.

Plans for the Home Craft Show and Sale begin in June and involve many hours from each club member. The club's kitchen committee organizes and selects the food that will be prepared and sold to visitors. These services are all provided by the Juniors on a volunteer basis.

Admission to the show is $1.50 for adults and $1 for senior citizens. Children under 12 are admitted free.

VIRGINIA BEACH PUBLIC NOTICE NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT

Notice is hereby given that the City of Virginia Beach has conducted an environmental review and has made a FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT for the George Washington Park (Doyletown) Street Improvement/Drainage 5th program year (1979-80) activity.

The City proposes to utilize federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-383), reauthorized and amended by Congress as of 1977, for the Doyletown street improvement/drainage activity.

ACTIVITY: The scope of the Doyletown street improvement/drainage activity involves the following:

- (1) improving drainage in the target area by providing a storm drainage system or by other appropriate means (including cleaning out existing drainage ditches); (2) widening streets where feasible - in this case some right-of-way acquisition would be required; (3) providing for efficient vehicular flow through effective street planning; (4) providing cul-de-sacs, where feasible, to enable cars to turn around adequately at the end of dead-end streets; (5) providing street paving base material of an appropriate selection; (6) providing curb and gutters if appropriate and feasible; and (7) considering the provision of sidewalks within the target area after review of the scope, necessity, and feasibility of such an activity.

The George Washington Park (Doyletown) target area includes the following streets: Doyle Way, Gilbert Drive, Hermes Street, Marlboro Street, Pritchard Road, and Robert Jackson Drive. In the case of acquiring property for street improvement right-of-way purposes, the property owner sells the land to the City in which the City has "Fee Simple" (full title) ownership of only the property used for the right-of-way purpose.

FUNDS: The City proposes to request from HUD through a REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS ADVERTISEMENT AND CERTIFICATION that $275,000 be released from the fifth year CDBG Program funds in order that this activity be implemented.

FINDING: Through evaluation of the scope and purpose of the George Washington Park (Doyletown) street improvement/drainage project, the City has determined that this activity will have NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT. Therefore, the City has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (Public Law 91-190), and no further environmental review of this activity will be conducted unless future information is determined to have a significant impact which would bring just cause for adding information to this assessment or for the development of a more detailed review called an Environmental Impact Statement.

REASONS FOR FINDING: From the City's review to date, the George Washington Park (Doyletown) street improvement/drainage activity - (1) will have no adverse impact on the geological, cultural, archaeological, architectural, or historical aspects of the target area; (2) is not adversely affected by a flood plain, coastal zone or wetlands area; (3) will not disrupt wildlife in the target area; (4) will only produce short-term air quality problems (dust, etc.) during the street improvement/drainage construction activities; (5) will produce short-term low-to-moderate level noise during the construction activities; (6) will aid in improving air quality and water flow conditions upon completion of construction activities; (7) will only produce short-term disruption of pedestrian and vehicular flow during the implementation of this activity; (8) will improve vehicular flow throughout the target area upon completion of the activity; (9) has the support and endorsement of the target area residents and the City Council of the City of Virginia Beach.

Pursuant to Section 104 (b) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, amended as of 1977, and the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (Public Law 91-190), an Environmental Review Record has been prepared for the George Washington Park (Doyletown) street improvement/drainage activity which may be examined at the Office of Housing and Community Development, 382 Twenty-second Street, Virginia Beach, Virginia, 23451, between 9:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday, except on holidays. Written comments on the above environmental review record will be received by Benjamin C. Moore, Assistant to the City Manager for Housing and Community Development, at the above address no later than 5:00 P.M. Friday, October 26, 1979.

APPLICANT: City of Virginia Beach, Virginia

Oct. Chesapeake Bay celebration sponsored by Virginia Beach Friends of the Library

The month of October will be devoted to a celebration of the Chesapeake Bay throughout the Virginia Beach Library System.

The celebration, "Hooray for the Bay!" is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Friends of the Library in cooperation with the Beach Library System.

Events include lectures by authors who have written about the bay; film and slide presentations on the bay; related craft workshops; seafood recipe ideas; a performance of sea chanteys and an exploration of the life of the bay on a Virginia Institute of Marine Science boat.

Many of the branch libraries will feature displays and exhibits geared to the bay. The children's story hours will reflect the celebration also. Book lists on the bay for both adult and children are available in all branches.

The celebration is in conjunction with Bay Appreciation Days, sponsored during the month of October by the EPA-funded Citizens Program for the Chesapeake Bay.

The grand opening celebration of "Hooray for the Bay!" will feature a lecture by author-historian Parke Rouse Jr., sea chanteys and guitarist Tom Wisner and a seafood reception.

The grand opening will take place on Oct. 7 at 3:30 p.m. in the Oceanfront Branch Library, 1811 Arctic Ave.

Rouse, author of Roll, Chesapeake, Roll, will speak on the history of the bay. Rouse, who lives in Williamsburg, also has written several other books on the history of the Tidewater area.

Wisner, a resident of Solomons, Md., is known as the Chesapeake Bay's John Denver. His songs are all original sea chanteys about the bay.

Clam chowder, crab claws and seafood spreads and dips will be served at the reception. Wine will be available.

Admission tickets for $1 apiece are available at all branch libraries through Oct. 5 or until sold out. No tickets will be sold at the door.

A film, "The Restless Sea" will be shown at 11 a.m., Oct. 6, at the Virginia Beach Oceanfront Branch Library.

The documentary film presentation is suitable for ages six to adult, and is open to the public free of charge.

Other events scheduled as part of the "Hooray for the Bay!" celebration follow. All events are free, except where noted.

Tuesday, Oct. 9 — "Chesapeake Bay Seashore Life," slide presentation by Seashore State Park Naturalist

Kris Kamandulis; 7:30 p.m., Oceanfront branch.

Wednesday, Oct. 10 — Sandcasting demonstration by Betty Banks; 10:30 a.m., Oceanfront branch.

Trustee-purchased annuity

By JUDITH G. RHOADES

According to the Internal Revenue Code, pension and profit-sharing plans may buy a tax-deferred annuity for a terminating employee with no income tax consequence to the employee until payments are received. The qualified plan must allow for an annuity distribution.

If your plan does not at the present time, it can be amended. In most instances, it is more advantageous to fund your distribution, with a tax-deferred annuity rather than using an IRA Rollover. The major reason is flexibility, as there are fewer restrictions which makes it far easier to change investment objectives. Both the employer's and participant's contributions may be placed into a tax-deferred annuity. Unlike the IRA, a participant may elect to withdraw funds before age 59.5 without paying a penalty. Also funds may be left to accumulate in a tax-deferred annuity up to that age of 75, or for 10 years.

An individual selecting a tax-deferred annuity, as a means of investing a lump sum distribution, has numerous advantages over many other investments for the following reasons. The investment is safe, as it is not geared to the stock market. It is a liquid investment, and guaranteed 100 percent for each dollar invested. There is an income tax exclusion of $5,000 in case of death. It will help to avoid cost and delay of probate in case of death.

The tax-deferred annuity has many options as to how the individual can eventually receive the money. Most annuities allow for 100 percent of dollars invested as there is no load or commission charge. The annuity also has competitive long-term interest rates.

As an example, the following will show the rate of accumulation by a tax-deferred annuity using a 7.75 percent interest rate:

For $10,000 distribution, at 7.75 percent for seven years: $16,685.50, for 10 years: $20,808.70, for 15 years: $30,104.90, for 20 years: $43,608.50, for 25 years: $63,219.70.

For $50,000 distribution, at 7.75 percent for seven years: $84,135.50, for 10 years: $105,187.50, for 15 years: $221,602.50, for 20 years: $321,738.50.

For $100,000 distribution at 7.75 percent for seven years: $168,448.00, for 10 years: $210,661.00, for 15 years: $305,846.00, for 20 years: $444,095.00, for 25 years: $644,887.00.

Remember, if you have a plan which is terminating, that in order to purchase a "trustee-purchased annuity," this must be done prior to receiving a cash distribution from the qualified plan which is being terminated.

Who is eligible for this "terminal" type of funding? Eligibility is usually at your retirement, but may occur as a result of termination of your employment, or as was said before, by the termination of a company's retirement plan.

How can I join a trustee-purchased deferred annuity plan? Various insurance companies offer an arrangement whereby an individual who is eligible for a lump sum settlement from any qualified pension or profit-sharing plan can obtain either a deferred annuity at very favorable rates without creating taxes, or an immediate annuity which will also offer favorable rates. These plans can be purchased through agents of the insurance companies, or from brokerage firms who also market them as part of a total securities program.

How will the plan benefit me? The feasibility of the program, in terms of both tax consequences and annuity rates, rests on two important points. First at your request, the trustee of the plan must pay the check for the lump sum directly to the Insurance Company, as you an individual cannot write the check personally. Second, a trustee or other employer representative must countersign the annuity application. If you follow these two important rules, you will have your plan in effect without having to have paid these taxes on your lump sum distribution.

Thorough rustproofing can prolong car life

Rust, the oxidation of metal due to exposure to air and moisture, costs car owners billions of dollars each year in repair bills and premature scrapping of cars. Car rusting is especially prevalent in northern climates, because of the heavy use of salt to control snow and ice, and in coastal areas where the air is salt-laden. Knowing this, thousands of car buyers and owners wrestle with the decision of whether or not to rustproof their automobiles, either at the time of purchase or at some later date.

The Better Business Bureau says that before spending money on rustproofing, car owners should be sure they are dealing with reputable firms that provide clearly written warranties to back their work.

Cars rust inside out

A "complete" rustproofing application can slow or eliminate the rusting process. Effectiveness depends upon the make of the car, climate, chemical pollutants in the air, and the care of the car. The cost can vary from around $150 to as high as $300.

Generally, rustproofing is not to be confused with undercoating a car. Undercoating is basically a sound deadening treatment and usually is not applied to the car's enclosed "boxed in" areas such as door assemblies, "eyebrow" sections above headlights, rocker panels, and other critical internal seam areas. Because a car's body rusts from the inside, proper rustproofing involves drilling access holes into all the boxed-in areas and then spraying rustproofing sealant to cover the metal and, most important, to penetrate into corrosion-prone seams.

Getting the right warranty

Car owners considering rustproofing should be sure they are buying the service from a company with a good reputation — a firm that will be in business in the future when any rust problems are likely to appear. The company should provide a written guarantee, stipulating what steps will be taken in the event of accident-related damage and what the firm will do if repairs are needed.

Often rustproofing warranties call for a checkup after a number of months, years, or miles. The car owner should be sure to take the car in for this inspection; otherwise, any rights under the warranty may be forfeited. If rust does develop, the car should be taken back to the rustproofing for repair immediately.

Car owners would be smart to do comparison shopping for rustproofing, basing their decision not only on cost but on the type of sealant used and the method of application, making sure the dealer plans to drill into and thoroughly spray boxed in areas. After the job is done, it is a good sign if some sealant has dripped from the vehicle. This indicates penetration. The car owner also can check the number and location of the rubber plugs used to reseal drilled holes.

The Better Business Bureau suggests that car owners perform routine maintenance on their cars, particularly in winter months, to help stop rust and corrosion. Regular washing and waxing, periodic inspections, and repainting and repairing scratches in the paint or metal work can help reduce damage.

Reports on medicare facilities available

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration

Your decision about where to get health care services under the Medicare program is primarily up to you and your doctor. But sometimes you may have to select the facility in which you, or a member of your family, will receive health care services.

For example, if you need skilled nursing care or home health services after a hospital stay, you may have to select the skilled nursing facility or home health agency.

Before you pick a facility, you should make sure it participates in Medicare. If you aren't sure, ask someone at the facility.

You also might want to consider how well the facility meets Medicare standards. Information on Medicare facilities is available at local Social Security offices.

All health facilities participating in Medicare — hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies, independent laboratories — must meet certain health and safety standards specified by law. These facilities are inspected before they can participate in Medicare. Then, they are reinspected periodically to assure that they continue to meet the health and safety standards required by Medicare.

Inspection requirements differ, however, for hospitals which have been accredited by the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals or by the American Osteopathic Association. These two private organizations have standards considered equal to those of Medicare. But, a sampling of accredited hospitals is inspected periodically to assure quality.

Generally, the inspections are made by State Health Departments under contract with the federal government. A report of any deficiencies and the facility's plan for correcting the deficiencies is available for inspection at the Social Security office in the area where the facility is located.

The state survey covers such standards as kinds and quality of equipment, number and qualifications of personnel, conformance with fire safety and protection standards, dietary service, and other essential factors. The standards each type of facility must meet are available to the public.

You should keep in mind that it's not always possible for a facility to meet all Medicare standards all of the time. For example, it might have a temporary problem getting qualified personnel, or the building may need upgrading or maintenance. The fact that a facility has shortcomings to correct does not mean that there is any immediate danger to the health and safety of its patients. If a facility did have serious deficiencies that could endanger its patients, the facility could no longer take part in Medicare.

As long as the facility is correcting the problems found, there is no reason to think that it cannot provide an acceptable level of health care. Also, the facility may have already made improvements between the time the inspection was made and the time you see the report.

Information from these reports cannot be furnished over the telephone. If you want to see the report on a particular Medicare facility in your area, contact the nearest Social Security office. The people there will be glad to arrange for you to read the report and answer any questions that you may have. The Norfolk Social Security office is located in the Federal Building, Room 600, at 200 Granby Mall. The phone number is 441-3401. The office hours are from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Use self-clinching nails for roofing

By GENE GARY

Q. The nails holding the wooden shakes covering the ridge of our roof are protruding an inch above the shakes and need to be replaced.

Is there a way to treat the nails to prevent them from pulling loose? — A.G.K.

A. Replace nails with spiral or serrated ringed nails at least one-half-inch longer than the present nails.

Unless mailing strips were used, and if the shakes were nailed over insulated sheathing board, they will pull out. To have nails hold in insulating sheathing, without nailing strips, use self-clinching nails, as mentioned above.

Q. My Virginia Beach home has a cinder block chimney covered with cement. This chimney is used for my wood-burning fireplace.

My problem is that the cement finish has been painted and the paint blisters and comes off in big sheets. I have to scrape off the loose paint and repaint the chimney every year.

When one of the major paint manufacturers came out with a "super latex" house paint, I wrote to them and they said this paint would end this problem. Needless to say, this year the paint is coming off in larger sheets.

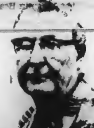

Can you help me? What can I do to solve this problem? — Edward B.

A. Peeling of the paint is undoubtedly caused by moisture from the chimney coming in behind the paint. Lining the chimney with a fire clay or stainless steel flue lining should correct this condition.

Also a sealer of the type that is primarily used in basements before repainting could correct the problem, or at least partially remedy the trouble.

Make certain to wire brush the area to be treated to remove all old loose and scaling paint before applying the sealer. This sealer is manufactured by several firms under different brand names — a few are Epox-Seal by Magicolor Co., Devcon Epoxy Sealer by Devcon Co., and Eposite by Ted Bates Co. Consult your Virginia Beach paint dealer for the product.

Q. I recently made a cocktail table of walnut plywood.

The directions called for finishing with sealer and several coats of wax. However, I used paste wax in the cracks in the pattern of the wood grain. It is white and looks awful.

How can I remove the wax without ruining the wood? — M.W.T.

A. Wood filler should be applied to open pore woods such as walnut before finishing with the sealer and desired finishing material. Apparently, you omitted this step, which would have closed the grain, preventing the wax accumulation.

Paste wax, of good quality, is the proper wax to use. It should be applied in very thin coats and well-buffed after each application.

For best results, remove the present finish down to bare wood and refinish. To remove the wax in the grain, use fine steel wool grain, use fine wool and turpentine.

Room geared to young lady's interests

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Decor score

Q. Our teenage daughter wants to change her room from a traditional bedroom into a bed-sitting room that reflects her new interests in entertaining, music and studying.

I don't feel we can go out and buy a lot of expensive things. However, I would like to help her shed her "little girl" room and create something more appropriate for her growing years as a young adult now.

Please give us some ideas for a do-it-yourself room that is keyed to the needs of a teenager. — T.B.

were covered in a handsome print combining the blue of the walls, the green of the carpeting and yellow and white in accessories.

Providing a built-in look at the foot of the mattress is a do-it-yourself room divider with book space and a writing area.

The window blind is a combination of stripes of jungle green, white and chrome yellow.

Additional throw pillows covered in the pretty print do away with the need for chairs in the room. Fabric and the Anso nylon carpeting were treated with a soil repellent for easier maintenance.

This kind of arrangement in a room provides the flexibility most teens want in a room and leaves a large portion of the center of the room open so the feeling is uncluttered.

For additional storage of clothes and treasures, give considerable planning to the closet. Often times a chest in the closet and double bars for hanging clothes will customize the closet space and provide better use of what is available. Threat the closet as an integral part of the room using coordinated paint colors or fabric.

Q. I want to change the gold carpeting in my living that your gold carpeting did.

Another possibility would be an oatmeal or off-white combination with some beige and gold. This would be harder to keep looking nice but the light color might please you.

To add more to your room, you might find useful some small ottomans in a green, gold and white stripe — a fabric you could also use on chairs in your dining room if you have need for fabric there.

Vary your use of greens and gold — the variety is almost endless and that adds more variety and decorating interest. Of course, green plants would add a lively touch to your room.

Please send questions for Decor Score to the Virginia Beach Sun.

Water heaters and windows also need maintenance

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications, Tidewater Builders Association

Having started with the A's some months ago, we've finally worked our way down to the end of the alphabetical glossary of home maintenance suggestions. I close today with water heaters and windows.

Water heaters. Hot water heaters normally collect small quantities of scale and dirty water. This can easily be removed by first shutting the water intake valve and then opening the valve at the bottom of the heater and allowing the tank to drain itself clean. Consult the manufacturer's literature for more specific information.

All hot water heaters have a control mechanism to govern water temperature. Here is an efficient way of shaving some more dollars off your annual utility bills. The dial should be set at approximately 120 degrees or on normal. Your family's individual preferences are the governing factor for hot water temperature.

Every three or four months you should check the temperature and pressure relief valve on your water heater to be sure the lever works properly. If the thermostat should fall to work, this valve would prevent a dangerous increase in water temperature and pressure.

Windows. Your windows may be framed in a wide variety of materials including aluminum, steel, wood, solid vinyl, and vinyl-clad wood. Wood frames should be painted whenever the house or trim on the house is painted, about every four to six years. Aluminum, vinyl, and vinyl-clad wood do not need painting. Steel frames should be painted with a rust-inhibiting paint. Aluminum can be left to age to a uniform gray. The oxidation (or graying) will protect it from the elements. If you prefer to keep the brighter new look, a coat of wax will work well. To restore aluminum that has turned gray, polish with steel wool, but prevention is easier than polishing.

If the outside of the glass is extremely dirty, use a piece of crumpled newspaper and wash with a solution of one tablespoon of household ammonia (or three tablespoons of denatured alcohol) to a quart of warm water, or use a commercial glass cleaner containing ammonia. Lightly soiled windows will usually respond to a solution of a cup of vinegar to a gallon of water. Apply the cleaning solution with a lintless cloth or sponge and dry the glass with a chamamois, lintless cloth, or paper towels. If you have one, a rubber squeegee will speed the drying process. The frames can be cleaned with a mild detergent solution. Most stains on marble sills can be removed by scouring the marble with a paste of baking soda and water.

Wire screening may be shelled or varnished every three or four years or coated with boiled linseed oil annually. The screens should be thoroughly washed and rinsed before either is applied. Nylon screening needs no preservative.

Wood windows may need repainting occasionally. Remove cracked, loose, or dried-up putty, clean out dust and dirt with a clean dry brush. Replace any missing glazier's points. Roll some fresh putty between your hands to stretch it out. Fit it against the glass and the wood with your fingers and smooth it with a putty knife. Oil paint can be mixed with the putty to color it or it can be painted. For a broken window, remove remaining glass (using gloves), all old putty, and glazier's points. For a broken window framed other than in wood consult a supplier for advice on replacement.

If a wood window does not slide easily, rubbing the channel with a piece of paraffin should help. An old candle will do. The same treatment will work for sliding wooden closet doors too. For metal doors and windows, use a silicone lubricant available in aerosol form.

Apartment modes

Filling up a large apartment

By LESLIE AYERS

If you have moved into one of Virginia Beach's many large apartments and have more space to fill than furniture, don't despair.

By arranging your existing furniture differently, you can make the rooms look full.

Don't begin by thinking that you have to line your walls with furniture in the old traditional way.

For instance, in the living room, use a loveseat and sofa to make a conversational grouping. Place the loveseat at an angle from the wall perpendicular to the sofa wall and facing the sofa.

Then place a sofa table or a standing screen behind the loveseat to reinforce the angle. With two loveseats, angle them both from a large wall with a console table between symmetrically lined on the wall.

The opposite wall might have a fireplace. If there aren't any architectural features to create the balance, consider placing a large armchair here. Add a couple of small tables and some plants, and the room is complete.

In the bedroom, try placing the bed on an angle from two adjoining walls. Remember, however, that an angle should not be an isolated thing. It must be repeated by placing some furnishings on the diagonal and some straight. Even the placement of your accessories can help support this arrangement.

Try some experimenting

MARKET PLACE
The classified section of your hometown newspaper is essentially the bulletin board and market place of the community. It locates the interested customer as no other advertising can do. This is because the customers in your neighborhood turn to the classified paper and search out the advertisement for what he or she wants to buy.

Ideas on fall lawn renovation

By PATRICK DENTON

Late summer and early fall is the best time, according to the experts, to seed a new lawn or renovate an old one. So if you have a new lawn to plant or your existing one needs some improvement, now is the time to get going.

If your existing lawn has some scrawny patches, you can reseed parts of it once the intense heat of summer has slackened. Just be sure to provide places in which the new seed can lodge and come into firm contact with the soil. Scratch up the soil by drawing a steel rake across the surface to be reseeded. Spread the seed with a spreader for even results and economy.

Once the seeding is done, rake the patch twice, each raking at right angles to the other, and roll the area if possible. You can use a light scattering of fine lawn mowings for a bit of a mulch. The dead grass dries up and disappears into the soil once the new grass starts growing.

If you time it just right, Virginia Beach's late summer rains will begin just as you have finished seeding, and the seed bed will be constantly moist — an absolutely necessary condition for the seed to germinate. Before winter this reseeded patch should be up and flourishing, and ready to take off to a good start early in the spring.

There are a few other things to remember that will help it go into winter well prepared and green up early in the spring.

As the weather cools, lower your mowing height by a half-inch or so. Make sure your grass goes into winter a bit on the short side to reduce messy matting, and the possibility of disease.

Also remember not to send your lawn into winter dry. Keep it supplied with about a half-inch of water twice a week until the grass stops growing — unless rainfall provides this necessary moisture.

If you have a whole new lawn to plant, you certainly don't have to wait till spring. The warm days and cool nights of late summer and early fall are just right for the growth of grass seedlings.

Once you have determined the future lawn area, the soil needs to be dug over or rototilled deeply. First you would be wise to obtain a soil sample of the area for analysis by the Virginia Beach Department of Agriculture office. Phone them to find out how to take a sample.

This exercise is well worth the trouble, because the results will tell you specifically whether the soil will support a flourishing lawn. And if it is lacking in any nutrients that are necessary, the test analysis will recommend what you need to add to the soil.

Once the area is thoroughly and deeply dug, it needs to be raked. Aim for a grade of a fall of a quarter-inch per foot away from the house on all sides.

When the lawn site is raked, it will need to be rolled. Lawn rollers are easily rented. The rolling will reveal bumps and depressions in the area you thought was perfectly even, so don't be discouraged. Just go over these and even them out, rolling again.

Next you can lay down a light dose of lawn fertilizer with a spreader — a 20 percent superphosphate at about 20 pounds per 1,000 square feet. It is well to go light on the fertilizer in the fall. You can always fertilize again once the lawn is well thickened and established in the spring.

Lay the seed with the spreader next. Again, the Beach Department of Agriculture will be able to recommend the best lawn seed varieties for Tidewater. Rake the seed in twice, each raking at right angles to the other. Roll again, and keep moist during the germination period.

and Council.

Standing said that all cities have development councils but some of the counties don't. He said, "We need an areawide organization to promote Greater Hampton Roads and to promote this part of Virginia." The organization will be helpful in getting a fair share of state funds, he said.

City Manager George L. Hanbury suggested that the north side of Hampton Roads might be included and that a name change could be considered.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

Notice is hereby given that by October 15, 1979, the City of Virginia Beach will submit to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) a request and certification for the release of $275,000 of the City's Fifth Year (1979-80) funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, reauthorized by Congress and amended as of 1977. The request and certification for the release of funds pertains to the George Washington Park (Doyletown) Street Improvement/Drainage activity.

The scope of the Doyletown Street Improvement/Drainage activity involves the following:

- (1) improving drainage in the target area by providing a storm drainage system or by other appropriate means (including cleaning out existing drainage ditches);
- (2) widening streets where feasible — in this case some right-of-way acquisition would be required;
- (3) providing for efficient vehicular flow through effective street planning;
- (4) providing cut-de-sacs, where feasible, in order for cars to turn around adequately at the end of dead end streets;
- (5) providing street paving base material of an appropriate selection;
- (6) providing curb and gutters if appropriate and feasible; and
- (7) considering the provision of sidewalks within the target area after review of the scope, necessity and feasibility of such activity.

The George Washington Park (Doyletown) target area includes the following streets: Doyle Way, Gimbort Drive, Hernes Street, Mariene Street, Pritchard Road, and Robert Jackson Drive.

The City of Virginia Beach will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of HUD under Title I of the Housing and Community Act of 1974, reauthorized by Congress and amended as of 1977. The City of Virginia Beach is certifying to HUD that the City of Virginia Beach and George L. Hanbury, in his official capacity as City Manager, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of this certification is that upon its approval, the City of Virginia Beach may use the Block Grant funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is in one of the following cases: A) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer of the applicant; or B) that applicant's environmental review record for the activity indicates omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (Title 24, Code of Federal Regulations, Part 58), and may be addressed to HUD at 701 East Franklin Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219. Objections to the release of funds in excess of those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objections received after 5:00 P.M. on October 28, 1979 will be considered by HUD.

The City of Virginia Beach has prepared an environmental review record regarding the above activity for which the release of funds is sought. This record may be reviewed in the Office of Housing and Community Development at 362 22nd Street, from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday, except on a City holiday.

Hunting season calls for eye examination

Hunters who came home empty-handed last season ought to check out their eyes before starting out this year, says the president of the Virginia Optometric Association. According to Dr. George Gillespie, many hunters have vision problems that interfere with their sport. "Often the problems are not noticeable in daily living but in a sport that requires great precision, they can make a difference."

Hunters need sharp, clear distance vision for spotting game; clear focus both near and far for sighting; fast and accurate depth perception for judging distances between themselves and their prey; good side vision; and effective color vision.

Northeast brings spot to area; dove hunters having good season

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach News Columnist Writer

Last week's northeast might have blown some of the fish out of the bay, but it also blew some of the season's largest spot into the area. I have been getting reports from some of the area hot spots on spot being caught up to 30 oz.

Over at Wachapreague things are looking pretty good. Paul Carter at the Wachapreague Marina told me that the charter boats are catching plenty of trout and croaker. The boats were only bringing in small trout so they cut a couple of them up and started catching larger fish on the cut bait. According to Captain John Kline the best place is outside Wachapreague Inlet.

Down at Oyster, trout fishermen are having pretty good luck. Captain Erving Wyatt of Cape Charles caught plenty of fish on Thursday and Friday, but I have been unable to get up with him since then. Knowing Captain Irving, he is probably out fishing.

You can pretty well count on some good trout and channel bass fishing on the Eastern Shore's seaside for the next two or three weeks. The fall run on channel bass is just getting started. I have already had a few reports of red drum being taken on the beaches of the barrier islands.

If you are planning a rail hunting trip to the Eastern Shore you might want to carry along some trout fishing equipment and double up on your trip. I have done this several times and never regretted it — going both ways takes the bite off that $7 toll.

On this side of the bay, there still seems to be plenty of large spot being caught. Anglers fishing the area piers are having pretty good luck, but the best seems to be down at Rudee Inlet. Ann Morgan of Virginia Beach caught herself a 16 oz. citation spot fishing from the shore. Eugene Farra, also of Virginia Beach, landed himself a 16 oz. citation.

The only effect the season's first northeast blow had on the marlin fishing was to keep the boats dockside for a few days. The first report I received came the day after the wind settled down, and it was from the "Hustler" out of the Virging Beach Sports Fishing Center.

Pat McGhee told me that the charter aboard the "Hustler" came back with three citation fish. Robert McGuire of Virginia Beach landed a 57 lb. white marlin, Jerry Powell of Virginia Beach landed a 56 lb. white marlin, and Robert Powell of Virginia Beach landed a 48 lb. wahoo.

On the off shore wrecks, the charter boat "Seasport" also had good luck. Alvin Baker of Hampton caught a 5 lb. citation sea bass and Velma Wong of Newport News landed a 5 lb. 4 oz. citation sea bass.

So it appears that we still have some good off shore trolling and wreck fishing left, and weather permitting, maybe a few more boats will be able to get out.

Down at Nags Head, N.C. the northeast was just what the doctor ordered. The storm blew plenty of spot, croaker and trout into the inlet and surf. Damen Tatem, of Tatem's Bait and Tackle Shop told me that surf and pier fishermen are catching all the spot they can handle. Damen said he weighed in two large spot on Thursday, one weighed in at 30 oz. and the other 26 oz. He said that the majority of the spot being your best."

Dr. Gillespie urged hunters to wear hunter orange clothing to make themselves highly and safely visible to others under all weather and light conditions. He noted that, since most animals are color blind, it makes no difference to them what color hunters wear. But to other hunters, it means a great deal in helping to prevent accidents.

caught weighed close to a pound.

Damen also said that there are plenty of taylor blues, trout and puppy drum in Oregon Inlet but that none of the larger blues showed up yet. Mid October should yield plenty of the large blues as well as channel bass.

On the fresh water scene, things are getting back to normal after the storm. Otis Nelson, at the Northwest River Campgrounds, told me that last Wednesday Rowland Marshall, and Mr. W. Dean of Chesapeake caught 13 crappie and two bass and had to return just when the fish started biting because of motor trouble.

Also on Wednesday, "Rugder Fish of Chesapeake caught bass and bream (quantity unknown) and on Thursday, Reverend Carter of Norfolk caught six bass. As the water settles down from the storm, I am sure that the action should even pick up some more.

Since the majority of fish being caught now are spot, I think it is only appropriate that I give you a few recipes for spot. Everyone usually has their own recipe for frying or baking spot, so here are three that area a little different:

Flaked spot

(for casserole recipes and salads)
2 pounds filets from large spot
1 quart of water
1 tablespoon salt

Skin filets and place in boiling salted water. Cover and return to boiling point; simmer 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Flake and store in container in refrigerator until needed.

This recipe should yield four cups of flaked spot.

Spot fritters

2 cups cooked, flaked spot
3 well beaten egg yolks
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
2 teaspoons onion juice
1 tablespoon minced parsley
3 stiffly beaten egg whites
Deep fat

Beat egg yolks and combine fish, flour, salt, pepper, onion juice, and parsley. Fold in beaten egg whites. Drop by tablespoons into hot fat (380 degrees) and fry until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Serves four.

Spot cakes

2 cups flaked spot
2 cups hot seasoned mashed potatoes
2 eggs, beaten
fat

Mix well the flaked fish, hot mashed potatoes and beaten eggs and mold into flat cakes. Fry slowly in little fat until both sides are crusty. Serves five to six people. (Recipes courtesy of the Virginia Institute of Marine Science)

Dove hunters have been having excellent hunting this season when the weather permits. Danny McCoy of Chesapeake went Wednesday afternoon on the Big Entry Hunt Club and shot his limit. I hunted with Danny on opening day and we both got our limits that day also. Danny is real anxious to try a little rail hunting on the Eastern Shore, so I probably will be taking him over there during the next northeast we have.

This week I am leaving for Atlantic City, N.J. where I will pick up the 85 ft. motor yacht "Devon". I will be piloting the boat from Atlantic City to West Palm Beach, Florida, by way of the Intercoastal Waterway. With a little luck, next week's column will be mailed in from somewhere along the route and I will have some of the more interesting events that we encounter for you.

Have a good hunting or fishing trip whatever the case may be, and remember safe boating and hunting is close adherence to safety rules and common sense.

Voters may decide issue in referendum

Line fees dispute continues at Beach

A new proposition making line fees in Virginia Beach more equitable have all users of sewer lines pay for the differences in higher service charges.

Councilman Reid Ervin told Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon that the plan he had in mind should cost no more than $2 million and that the voters should make the decision in a referendum.

His plan, he said, would not make line fees equitable throughout the whole city but that they would be equitable within a subdivision.

At present, property owners pay $440, $575 or $780 for the first 100 feet of sewer line, depending on when they signed a contract with the city.

The Ervin plan would apply only to existing subdivisions served by septic tanks where 51 percent or more of the property owners petitioned for service and signed contracts with the city.

Under Ervin's proposal all property owners in a subdivision would pay the same fee as the 51 percent or more who signed contracts with the city. If the 51 percent or more have a $440 contract, all the residents of the subdivision would pay $440. If the contract holders had a $575 contract all the property owners would pay $575. All others would be paying $780, which is the current line fee.

For those who have already paid a higher line fee than their neighbors, Ervin suggested a rebate.

Since the mandatory hook-up ordinance was passed in 1978, the city has had no contracts with property owners who are required to hook up within a year after the service is available at the going rate.

In areas which have been declared health hazards by the Health Department and where no contracts have existed because 51 percent of the property owners did not petition the city, the property owners are required to hook up within 60 days after the service is available they have no choice. Under Ervin's plan, the people would be charged the same fees in effect when the system was completed in the area. Therefore new residents, who may not have had a chance to sign a contract at a lower rate, would be charged the same fees as their neighbors.

Ervin said that only 26 older subdivisions would be involved. He said that the city did not go to those people and tell them that if they didn't sign a contract they might have to pay a higher fee later. Ervin believes the city has a responsibility to those people because of its failure to properly inform them. People in an area were notified through civic leagues, he said, and if a resident didn't go to the league meetings he might not learn that lower fees would be available to him whenever the service was available if he had a contract with the city. He said that new residents of older subdivisions had no way at all of knowing.

Ervin, who served on council when the $440 rates first went into effect, said, "I don't think anybody realized that what started out as pollution abatement would have a flaw. We didn't think it would take this long."

If the sewer lines had been completed earlier, as expected, he said, the problems of inequity would not have arisen. As it is now, although everybody in a subdivision may be paying line fees at the same time, they are paying different rates, although the cost to the city is the same.

Ervin said that he suspected that the cost of equalizing the rates within subdivisions would actually be closer to a million dollars than two and that he didn't think it would add more than $4 a year to per customer cost.

His idea is to have a referendum on a special revenue bond which would pay for the difference in line fees charged within a subdivision property. Users, who would be paying the cost, would decide whether they wanted to do it. He said that he would be willing to pay a little extra so that his neighbor could pay the $440 he paid.

Ervin suggested that the referendum be on the same ballot as the projected double-barreled bond referendum for water and sewer improvements which is coming up, probably in the early part of 1980. The two referendums would be separate so that the success of the double-barreled bond referendum would not be jeopardized.

Property owners have complained to council over the inequities but were told that the city had to respect the older contracts. In the meantime, fees have increased with costs. City Manager George L. Hanbury, at an

Beach bikeway system to be largest in state

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sea Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach expects to have the largest bikeway system in the state with the execution of a plan which uses the 14-mile Norfolk-Southern Railway right of way as the main east-west arterial. The plan has been developed by Jack Jennings, member of the Parks and Recreation Commission; Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. and city planning director Robert Scott. Jennings was instrumental in establishing the city's first bikeway in Seashore State Park in 1972, said at an informal meeting of City Council Monday, that the plan avoids "bikeways to nowhere" and emphasizes safety.

The city plans to hold a public hearing on the bikeway plan after receiving a commitment from the railroad. Jennings said he expects the project will get under way by January and that the basic features will be available within a year.

City manager George L. Hanbury said that instead of a high-speed monorail on the Northern-Southern right of way (as has been discussed in the past), the city was thinking about a low speed bike path. He said the most important criteria of the plan is safety and that the right of way will serve as an arterial connecting other bike paths in the city.

Hanbury said that the bikeway will not always follow the right of way and will sometimes be directed to more attractive areas running parallel to the tracks and residential streets like Southern Boulevard.

The plan will eventually link all of the city's major parks and recreation areas. The right of way path will cross two bodies of water over existing bridges and will have to be paved and signed. Preliminary estimates of the cost are $2 million, Hanbury said, for which the city will try to get some help by applying to the State Commission of Outdoor Recreation for Federal funds.

He said no state funds are available and bike trails have not been funded by the State in the past.

Hanbury had considered a public hearing in two or three weeks until Councilman Reid Ervin suggested that he first get a commitment in writing from the railroad.

Hanbury said that he had talked to a railroad official who gave tentative approval and had indicated that similar bikeways have been approved in other parts of the state. However, he said that the city would have to submit a detailed drawing before the railroad could consider the matter more formally.

The bike system would be adaptable to people who bike for transportation to work, to shopping centers and for recreation, Hanbury said, and would be safer than bike trails provided as part of a highway. Hanbury said that when bike trail signs are put up on the highways, people get the sometimes false impression that they are safe.

Ervin also suggested that the city discuss with the City of Norfolk the possibility of having the bikeway continued along the right of way into Norfolk.

The plan may eventually include bikeways along the George Washington Canal banks, McCoy said, and Councilman John A. Baum suggested bikeways along existing drainage canals. The E-W Bikeway Turnpike would extend from Newtown Road to the beach and divides the population of the city almost in half, Hanbury said. Connecting roads will include residential streets which are already used for bike-riding. As an added benefit, the old right of way would be cleaned up, Hanbury said. The bikeway would have to be paved, lighted and signed. When completed, Hanbury said the system will be the largest in the state.

The rail is used occasionally by the railroad but the right of way is so wide, 80 feet in parts, that there is enough room for a bikeway, Hanbury said. He added that the city has also considered using the Vepco right of way which runs alongside the rail right of way.

Hanbury said that the use of the right of way by the city would not be precedent-setting for the railroad.

Jennings said that the bikeway committee is also discussing use of the abandoned Southern Railroad tracks and others in the city.

United States Army Field Band brings jazz, popular music to Virginia Beach Oct. 11

The Jazz Ambassadors of the United States Army Field Band of Washington, D.C., will bring its varied repertoire of jazz and popular music to Virginia Beach on October 11, at 7:30 p.m. at Plaza Junior High School.

Comprised of the most versatile musicians in the United States Army, the Jazz Ambassadors plays a blend of young ideas, original compositions and arrangements. The members of the band have been brought together from major recording centers, name bands and leading universities throughout the country.

The concert is being sponsored by the Virginia Beach Jaycees. Free tickets may be obtained at the Virginia Beach Chamber of Commerce building at Pembroke Mall. Call the chamber for information at 491-1221.

Area deadline extended to Jan.

The Virginia Beach Utilities Department has extended the deadline for line fees for Sherry Park area property owners whose septic tanks have been declared health hazards and who have no line fee contract with the city.

Utilities director Aubrey Watts said that letters will go out Friday, Oct. 12 informing those people who would have been required to pay by Nov. 4 that the deadline has been extended to Jan. 1.

The extension does not include property owners in the area who have a contract with the city to pay fees of $440 or $575 (for the first 100 feet). These contracts are considered binding, Watts said, and the people will have to pay by Oct. 12, 60 days within the date the utility was first available.

Previously, everybody in the area which includes MacDonald Park, Ballylinn Shores and Indian River Gardens had received letters requiring them to hook up by Nov. 4 because they were in a health hazard area.

Since then, Watts said, a lot-to-lot inspection has been made to determine whether health hazards existed. On some of the properties, he said, no health hazard was found to exist and these people will be notified that they have until Oct. 12, 1980 to hook-up.

The inspections were carried out after residents of the area, especially Ballylinn and MacDonald Park maintained that their properties had never been

Local workshop to discuss Tidewater water reserves

"Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink"! This well known remark is particularly relevant to our own Tidewater area. We are surrounded by water, inundated with waterways, yet have some serious problems related to our drinking water reserves.

The League of Women Voters of Virginia, funded by a grant from the Environmental Protection Agency, is currently presenting five state wide public participation workshops aimed at developing citizen awareness, encouraging legislators and citizens to brainstorm together and providing community education. These workshops are being held in Norfolk-Virginia Beach, Richmond, Lynchburg, Falls Church and Hampton, but are regionally directed.

The local workshop is being held on October 13, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. at the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission office's conference room located in building 16 of the Koger Executive Center. Keynote speaker will be Paul Fisher, project director of the Hampton Roads Water Quality Agency. Following his presentation, the audience will break into groups to discuss and prioritize the topic.

This workshop is free and legislators are being invited. For further information call 486-4103.

Yoga center holds Sunday gatherings

The Aquarian Age Yoga Center, located at 620 14th Street in Virginia Beach, will hold Sunday gatherings at 5 p.m. throughout the fall and winter. Free and open to the public, the gatherings offer an evening of meditation, chanting and a vegetarian pot luck dinner (no meat, fish or eggs).

The center also offers several courses that will begin this month. Call 425-9414 for further information.

Grow up, not older in your life

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

A question I asked a friend in Windsor Woods who had just celebrated her 50th birthday was, "Where are you now in your life?"

She understood what I was asking and shared with me some insights about how she was living her life.

Dorothy first laughed and then confided she found it a relief to know that at 50 she did not just start falling apart, and that she found that there was still an opportunity for more growth. She spoke about being thankful for what she has learned in the last few years, and also that she is getting used to the idea of being a grandmother.

As Dorothy talked about what she thought being 50 would be like when she was younger, I could understand and well identify with the things she was saying. She thought she would be white-haired, mostly senile, and dressed mostly in gloomy blacks.

I do not know if she is white-haired, but Dorothy certainly is much more exciting than quiet, and wears anything but dark, somber colors. Her excitement came out of the discovery that 50 is approaching the pinnacle rather than the decline.

Many people are expanding, not collapsing after 50. Dorothy has a strong faith, and she feels very much like the First Psalm — her tree of life is planted by the waters.

After many hours with Dorothy, her progress of arriving at this stage of her life can be roughly outlined as follows: Her first step was accepting her own uniqueness, past, present, and future, and learning to underline her strengths and to be aware of her unique weaknesses. When she got over the hurdle, she was no longer comparing herself with other people or wishing to be someone else.

She had to find a new attitude toward her parents' whom she now sees as individuals. She finds herself appreciating their strengths and forgiving their weaknesses. Then she could no longer hold them responsible for her life, and this was her next breakthrough.

This allowed her to let her children be themselves, free to choose their own way of life and putting no entangling apron strings around them. She said she next grew when she understood that her life was her responsibility and no one else's. She found that her life held ever-increasing possibilities and no effort to develop or expand herself was ever wasted.

Then almost with tears in her eyes, she spelled out her majestic realization of the inter-relationship of her life with all of life and that she is a part of the whole and the whole is a part of herself. "I feel very much a part of God's work in this world, both redeeming and lifting both the suffering of my brothers and sisters and leading and helping as I can."

The eminent psychologist, Abraham Maslow, has a school of thought which is dubbed "self-actualization." He writes about the need for persons who are mature to work continually on fragments of their own immaturity until there comes a point where a person can see all of the strands of life coming together.

I felt excited as this non-gray-souled grandmother in her own wisdom had touched some very real fibers of what life is all about. I also have a very real feeling that her great-grandchildren will say that she had it all together and knew what the score was when it came to life — do not just grow older — grow up, and up, and up.

Beach woman appointed to human rights committee

Elizabeth Irving Merwin, R.N., M.S., of Virginia Beach has been appointed to the State Human Rights Committee, Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Mrs. Merwin, who is unit coordinator of the adolescent treatment unit at Tidewater Psychiatric Institute, Virginia Beach, will serve a three-year term on the nine-member human rights committee.

The human rights committee serves as the highest review committee to hear any unresolved complaint of rights' violation, lodged by patients or residents of facilities operated by the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. The state board is the final authority, according to human rights regulations put into effect in all the department's institutions in 1978.

Mrs. Merwin received her bachelor of science degree from Radford College in 1976 and her master of science degree with a major in psychiatric mental health nursing from the Medical College of Virginia/Virginia Commonwealth University, earlier this year.

Before joining the staff at the Tidewater Psychiatric Institute, Mrs. Merwin was a staff nurse at Chippenham Hospital, Richmond; in the adolescent psychiatric unit of the Community Mental Health Center, Norfolk, and in the inpatient psychiatric unit at Norfolk General Hospital.

Persons sought to serve on citizens advisory committee

The Hampton Roads Water Quality Agency Board is seeking applications from persons interested in serving on a citizens advisory committee.

Interested individuals must reside in Chesapeake, Franklin, Hampton, Isle of Wight, James City County, Newport News, Norfolk, Poquoson, Southampton, Suffolk, Virginia Beach, Williamsburg, or York County. The advisory committee provides input to the Agency on technical and policy matters.

The HRWQA, a consortium of the Hampton Roads Sanitation District, Peninsula Planning District Commission and Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission has been conducting water quality management planning since 1974, pursuant to Section 208 of the Clean Water Act.

Federal Regulations require that the advisory committee consist of substantially equivalent proportions of the following four groups: private citizens; representatives of public interest groups; public officials; and representatives of economic interest groups or organizations having a substantial economic interest in the plan or project. Four positions are currently open in the "private citizen" category.

Persons interested in applying or desiring more information should contact Mr. Paul Fisher, Project Director at 1436 Air Rail Avenue, Virginia Beach (460-1753). The HRWQA Board will make the final selection of appointees to the Committee. Letters of interest must be received by October 19, 1979.

Litter known facts

Did you know research shows that people habitually litter where trash is periodically picked up, like the sports arena; where they feel no sense of ownership for the property, like the park; or where trash is already accumulated, like a restaurant parking lot?

Let's clean up our city by changing those bad littering habits. When you have trash to discard, be a good citizen and can it!

Help keep Virginia Beach clean.

Love Is...

Love is...a tiny seed
God planted in the mind;
It blossoms into flowers
And makes a person kind.

Love is...compassionate
Has hope for those who fail;
Love is the effective,
Most Christ-like way of all

Love is...not resentful,
It readily forgives;
It brings great happiness
To those with whom it lives.

Love is...over patient,
It's found in trustful hearts;
It is most unselfish,
The finest of all arts!

Love...like the sunshine —
It shines on good and bad,
It dispels the darkness
And makes the whole world glad!

Love is...the childlike way —
Secure in Father's care,
For God is almighty
His love is everywhere!

Two Beach men observe service anniversaries

Two Virginia Beach residents, William F. Booker Jr. and John J. Imbert Jr., have joined an exclusive group of employees at Norfolk

William F. Booker Jr.

Naval Shipyard who have logged 40 years of government service.

The two men observed their career 40th anniversaries in special ceremonies conducted by Captain Alfred Kurzenhauser. The Shipyard Commander commended and congratulated them and also presented each man a 40-year service certificate signed by the Secretary of the Navy and a 40-year service pin with ruby inset. Booker, a GS-13 supervisory welding engineer in the Quality Assurance Office, is continuing a federal career he began as an auditing clerk with the Treasury Department in 1939. In 1940, he came to the shipyard as a junior physical science aid. He advanced through the ranks by serving as junior welding engineer, assistant welding engineer and welding engineer. He entered the supervisory ranks in 1961 when he attained the GS-12 rating.

Imbert's service is a combination of 20 years in the Navy and 20 years in civil service at the shipyard. He is a WG-13 mechanical systems inspector in the Quality Assurance Office. His shipyard career began at the shipyard as a warehouseman in 1959. Promoted to stockman, he later became a marine machinist in Shop 38. In 1974, he was promoted to mechanical systems inspector.

American Heart Association sponsors blood pressure screening at Oceanfront branch library

The American Heart Association will hold a blood pressure screening at the Oceanfront branch library on Thursday, October 11, at 12 noon to 4 p.m.

High blood pressure is a major health problem in the commonwealth today, affecting 1 in every 6 Virginians. The disease has no symptoms but is a major contributing factor to heart attack, stroke and kidney disease. A blood pressure check is simple, painless, and only takes a few minutes. This service is free and open to the public.

The Oceanfront branch of the Virginia Beach Public Library is located at 1811 Arctic Avenue at the beach. For more information contact Rosemary Houseknecht at 428-4113.

Mathematics laboratory offers help to students

Director of Continuing Education - TCC Virginia Beach

Students needing help with mathematics courses or with individual math problems can find it in the Mathematics laboratory located in room C-105 at the Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College. In addition to faculty members who are on hand in the lab for special classes, two instructional assistants are available to help students with problems on a drop-in basis. The lab is open during the hours of 8 a.m. - 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. on Friday, and 9 a.m. - noon on Saturday.

The mathematics lab is the setting for special developmental programs in Math 06 and Math 07, the equivalents to first and second year high school algebra. While regular sections of 06 and 07 are taught in the traditional classroom setting, with a teacher providing lectures, tests, and a structured approach, students have the option of taking the developmental math courses in the laboratory setting, in which students work at their own rate and progress according to their own schedule.

The laboratory classes use a special programmed textbook with an individualized approach to math. An instructor is available to provide guidance and to answer questions. Response from students indicates the individualized study program is a popular and successful way for students who are uncertain of their abilities to gain confidence.

The math lab seems to be most helpful to students who have been away from the classroom for several years and who are not sure how much math they remember. Working at an individual rate, the student is able to refresh and re-acquire mathematics skills as quickly or as slowly as he feels comfortable doing. Some students are able to finish all of Math 06 and part of 07 in the course of one quarter, while others are not able to complete all of the initial 06 course. One advantage of the laboratory courses is that the student does now feel pressured to complete work within the framework of a structured class or the time frame of the quarter.

Students who feel the need for assistance do not have to be enrolled in math courses to obtain help. Any and all TCC students are invited to bring problems with math, chemistry, business math or just plain day to day numerical puzzles to the math lab. Someone is always there to answer questions.

For further information, contact the Mathematics and Natural Sciences Division at the Virginia Beach campus, 427-3070, extension 152.

Second phase of The Parkway Center at Beach announced

The developer of The Parkway Center, a new office complex in the Oceana West Industrial Park in Virginia Beach, announced the completion of the project's first phase, plans for developing the second phase, and the purchase of additional land in the park for a third phase.

Parkway Associates of Virginia Beach announced completion of the 16,000-sq.-ft. phase one at 2697 International Parkway, and celebrated with an open house and dedication for the building.

Original plans for the center called for the first phase to consist of only 8,000 sq. ft. The space was doubled to accommodate anticipated demand, according to Tim Barrow, a general partner in Parkway Associates. Total cost of the first phase was $600,000.

The Parkway Center is 400 ft. from the intersection of Lynnhaven Parkway and International Parkway at the principal entrance to the Lynnhaven Shopping Mall, which is under construction. While space in the center is being leased, the project is designed so it can be converted to condominium space available to smaller users who cannot currently locate in the industrial park because of lot size requirements.

Space in The Parkway Center is for office use primarily, although it is readily adaptable to distribution or light assembly uses as well. The initial occupants of the first phase are Tidewater Title Insurance Agency; Tim Barrow & Associates; Walsh, Ashe & Dills, AIA architects; and attorneys Robert H. Bennett and James Gallagher.

As soon as the balance of phase one space is leased, construction will begin on phase two, Barrow said. The building will be the same size as phase one, he added, and it will be built between the first building and International Parkway.

Barrow also said Parkway Associates has purchased an additional two acres of land in the industrial park from the Virginia Beach Development Authority. The parcel is located just east of The Parkway Center site. Plans call for building two 16,000-sq.-ft. phase three buildings on the site.

Barbizon School of Modeling opens doors in Virginia Beach

The Barbizon School of Modeling and Fashion Merchandising officially opened its doors to Virginia Beach and surrounding area residents October 3rd with a grand opening ribbon cutting ceremony and fashion show at its new location, #3 Lynnhaven Executive Park, Potters Road and Wesley Drive.

Participating in the ribbon cutting ceremonies were: Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr., Virginia Beach Vice Mayor; Francine Marlowe, international director and vice president of Barbizon International; Louis A. Esposito, president of the new school; and Janet L. Moore, executive director of the Virginia Beach Barbizon School.

The grand opening fashion show, entitled "Barbizon Thru the Ages 1939-1979", was performed by Barbizon models modeling fashions reflecting the four decades the Barbizon School of Modeling has been in existence. The latest fashions were provided courtesy of J.J.'s. Esposito, president of the Virginia Beach and Washington, D.C. Barbizon Schools of Modeling and Fashion Merchandising, has been associated with the New York-based company for the last ten years.

He said, "Virginia Beach was chosen for a new Barbizon location because the Tidewater area is recognized as the third fastest growing community in the country. As a result, many career opportunities are becoming available in the local fashion industry. Barbizon is here to provide training in modeling and other fashion related careers to prepare its students to be immediately productive in Tidewater's and the nation's expanding fashion career market."

The executive director of the Virginia Beach Barbizon School, Mrs. Janet L. Moore, said that over 50 students are already enrolled in the first Barbizon modeling program now underway.

JA participation high

Over 3,200 Tidewater teenagers have applied for participation in the Junior Achievement program announced Alan Veck, Executive Director of Junior Achievement of Tidewater, last week.

The breakdown by school is as follows: Norfolk, 710; Virginia Beach, 1,909; Portsmouth, 478; and Chesapeake, 194.

"The 3,291 participants mark a record interest in Junior Achievement here," Alan Said. This is an increase of more than 700 students over last year.

The Junior Achievement program will begin this year during the week of October 1 when 75 JA companies with 25 to 30 members per company will hold their first meeting at the JA business center at 1118 Azalea Garden Road, Norfolk, Virginia 23502. The teen-age participants will receive guidance of advisers from local plants, businesses and industry in forming their own small-scale companies.

Junior Achievement is a nonprofit, economic education program which sponsors the high school JA program in which participants form a company by selling stock. They then operate the company by selecting, manufacturing and marketing a product; electing officers; paying miniaturized wages, salaries, sales commissions and taxes; and keeping records. At the end of the JA year, the companies are liquidated. While in JA, teens have the opportunity to learn about business in terms of its influences within the American economic system.

"It is believed," Alan said, "that Junior Achievement helps young adults look at various careers and approach their role as consumers far more realistically than in any other youth organization".

Tuesday, Oct. 30 -- "Books of the Chesapeake Bay," book talk by Extension Services Librarian John Stewart, 11 a.m., Oceanfront branch.

Many of the branches will feature displays and exhibits around the bay and the children's story hours will reflect the celebration. Call library information, 340-5200, for an up-dated schedule each week.

Auto show set for Sunday at Beach recreation center

Don't be surprised to find the parking lot of the Virginia Beach Recreation Center-Kempville Sunday, October 14, turned into a large parking lot. Classic autos, custom cars and vans as well as representatives from Tidewater car clubs will all converge from 1-6 p.m. at the recreation center. A wide selection of Corvettes, Z's and some road cars will be on display.

This event is free to the public. Musical entertainment will be provided throughout the day. For further information contact the Adult Services staff of the Virginia Beach Recreation Center-Kempville at 499-1281. This event was originally scheduled for September 30 but was postponed due to rain.

'Showstopper' auditions open

Bring out your dancing shoes and dust off those old Broadway tunes. It's time to get your act together - audition for "Showstoppers '79", a Broadway revue sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Parks & Recreation Performing Arts Unit.

Dancers will audition on October 13 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.; singers must audition with material from a Broadway play and should come October 13 and 14 from 1 to 5 p.m., Virginia Beach Recreation Center-Kempville Theatre, 800 Monmouth Lane, Virginia Beach. For further information contact Tom Magee, 499-1281 or Vicki Magee, 467-4884.

Beach scout sells first ticket

Rear Adm. Carol C. Smith Jr. purchased the first ticket for the Tidewater Council, Boy Scouts of America Show "Enterprise '79" from Cub Scout Tim Lowery of Virginia Beach this week.

Smith's interest in the show, which is scheduled for November 17, was twofold since he is a former skipper of the USS Enterprise and an Eagle Scout. Cub Scout Lowery is a member of Pack 493, sponsored by Wyckoff Presbyterian Church.

Tickets for "Enterprise '79" are now officially on sale. Scouts from Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and North Carolina will be calling door to door selling tickets.

"Enterprise '79" will feature a variety of action displays, stage shows, contests, and exhibits from the U.S. Navy and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It will be produced by Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers in the area.

Singers and dancers are: Linda Almborg, Gladys Beddingfield, Scott Britton, Dona Connor, Marianne Hahn, Kelly Parson, Mary Lou Robertson, Judy Vogan, Chip Vogan, Carl Hansen, Kevin Crawford, Gail Becker, Karl Cairns, Ellen Duffy, Tanya Muhammed, Kim Newsum, Susie Hansen and Dorinda Oliphant.

The production staff includes Henry Clarke, director; Jean Washburn, assistant to the director; Jay Justice, music director; Roxanne Webster, assistant music director; M. Ashley Wood, stage manager; Jacques Warren, costumer; Judi Hatcher, choreographer.

This popular musical opened on Broadway in 1943, starring Mary Martin. The story concerns a three thousand year old statue of Venus which comes to life in present day New York City when an innocent barber inadvertently places a ring on her finger - which greatly multiplies his problems, since he has a girlfriend on Long Island and the girlfriend has a mother. Whitelaw Savory, owner of the modern art museum who bought the statue in the first place, further thickens the plot. All of this takes place amid a large cast of singers and dancers. Songs from the production include "Speak Low When You Speak of Love," "Westwind" and "I'm A Stranger Here Myself."

The Beach theater production features Mac Macmanus as Whitelaw Savory, the museum owner; Shirley Becker as Venus, the statue who comes to life; V. Ragan as Savory's very efficient secretary/assistant; and David Nastal as Rodney Hatch, the innocent barber who starts it all.

Other featured players are Ross Gottstein as Taxi Black, Don Wilhoite as

'Chicago Currents' on display at Virginia Beach Arts Center

"The distinctive postwar tradition in the visual arts in Chicago" is the theme of the October-November exhibition, "Chicago Currents: The Koffler Foundation Collection," at the Virginia Beach Arts Center. As such, it helps define the American Contemporary art scene of the last quarter century because of the energetic influence of Chicago on artists in other parts of the country.

The Koffler Foundation Collection encourages emerging as much as it celebrates established Chicago artists. Covering the period of the early 1950's to the present, its 34 pieces range from traditional oil to contemporary assemblage, from figurative to funk.

Circulated by the Smithsonian Institution, "Chicago Currents" is sponsored here by the City of Virginia Beach through its Arts and Humanities Commission. It is open to the public at no charge daily except Sunday, 11-4, from October 15 to November 14, at 1711 Arctic Avenue.

Mail-A-Book program begins fifth year of operation at Beach

Mail-A-Book, a free book-lending service by mail for rural and homebound persons in Virginia Beach, is beginning its fifth year of operation. To mark this achievement, the Department of Public Libraries will present copies of the 1980 Mail-A-Book Catalog to Mayor Patrick L. Standing, Councilwoman Barbara Henley and Councilman John A. Baum at the City Council Meeting on Monday, October 15. Mrs. Henley and Baum will accept a catalog on behalf of all homebound persons residing in Virginia Beach.

Users of the Mail-A-Book service receive a catalog describing over 800 popular paperback books that may be borrowed from the Virginia Beach Public Library through the mail. The library pays all the costs of postage and packaging. Persons who use the service throughout the year receive quarterly supplements to the main catalog which include approximately 100 new titles. Books in the catalog and the supplements are selected for all age groups and all interests.

The 1980 catalog will be mailed to all present users during the week of Oct. 15. Participants in the service during the past four years have borrowed over 20,000 books through Mail-A-Book. In many cases this is the only way Virginia Beach residents can borrow books from the library.

For additional information about this service, or for individuals who would like to participate in this service, call the Library Extension Services Division at 340-7798.

Seniors get special deal on selling home

By JUDITH G. RHODES

Q. We are in our late 50s. My husband and I are both planning to retire in the next couple of years at which time we plan to move to Virginia Beach.

Somewhere I read an article which said that people could sell their house and not have to pay taxes on the profit. We live in an area which is being renovated and though our home is very tiny, the property has appreciated substantially. Am I right that we don't have to pay taxes when we sell? M.K.

A. What I believe you are referring to is the capital gains tax exclusion on the sale of a house after you reach age 55. If you have lived in your house for three out of the past five years before you decide to sell it, you will be eligible for up to a $100,000 exclusion.

A. My daughter and I have been talking about my going back to college. Is there anywhere I can read information as to which jobs might be in the field. I would hate to return to school and graduate, only to learn there are no jobs available in the field I have chosen. Thank you. A.W.

A. I am certain that as a re-entry woman, you will find counselors at the colleges in Virginia Beach and Tidewater will be more than willing to help you. There are special programs designed for women in just your same circumstance.

You might also want to write to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009, and request a free copy of the Labor Department's regular publication, "Occupations In Demand." Good luck.

If the gas crunch and the decline of the dollar have been affecting you, you might be inclined to think about trading in your full-sized car. In a recent survey conducted on cars and depreciation, it showed that some gas-guzzling cars dropped in trade-in value almost twice as much as they would have in normal times during the first three months of the gas crisis. Lowest on the list was the Dodge Monaco which is worth only 30 percent of its price when new.

Even the best of the big cars, the Continental Mark IV is only worth 43.1 percent of its original cost. That performance was reversed by small American cars, which on average gained in value by about $90 between April and June of this year.

According to Money Magazine who conducted the research, small foreign cars have fared better because the dollar's drop in value against foreign currencies has raised the prices of new imported cars, pulling up the value of old ones, too. As a result, 1975 foreign models have held 55 percent of their value compared to 45 percent for American cars. The biggest winner was the Porsche 911S, still worth nearly 83 percent of its original sticker price.

Bucking the trend is the Corvette, which only averages 13 miles per gallon. It is one of four cars of that year (1975) which Money says actually gained in value over the last 12 months. Also in that category is the Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme which has retained 55.6 percent of its original selling price.

The survey concluded that you would be wise to wait out the current furor over gasoline supplies, as the prices for big cars may rebound.

Special hints on wallpapering bathrooms

By GENE GARY

Q. About 30 years ago we added a bathroom in our oceanfront home using Marlite walls, including the shower stall. When the walls of the shower gave out, we had that portion tiled.

Now we would like to re-do the walls in the remainder of the bathroom.

Our question: Can we paint or wallpaper over the Marlite? Or do you have any other suggestion? — Mrs. L.A.K.

A. Paper should be satisfactory over Marlite. First go over the surface with an electric sander, using coarse sandpaper to roughen the slick surface. This permits the paper to adhere better. After sanding, size the walls with sizing available at your paint dealer.

In a bathroom, I would recommend using a canvas-back vinyl finish paper and add some white glue to the wallpaper paste or a special adhesive additive. In rooms where moisture will be present, do not use ready-pasted wallpaper.

Q. I have had trouble this last year with water on the inside roof of the attic. At first, with all the rain we have in Virginia Beach, and want to know if there is any type of sealer that we can coat the statue with, which will not alter its appearance. — M.K.

Here's how

A. The easiest way to repair the cracks is to fill them with an epoxy resin material, containing a filler, and follow label directions carefully. This is available at masonry dealers and large hardware stores. Or fill the cracks with equal parts of litharge and powdered red lead, mixed with glycerin to form a paste. This is slow in setting, but dries very hard.

After repairing the cracks, you could apply a coat of clear terrazzo-type sealer, which should not change the color and would also help prevent future cracking.

Q. We have an antiquated wrought-iron railing that needs cleaning. What is the best way without spoiling the finish? — R.B.

A. Clean the surfaces by rubbing with linseed oil. Then wipe off the oil with clean dry cloths.

Questions on building, home maintenance and repair may be sent to Here's How in care of the Virginia Beach Sun.

I thought the roof was leaking. There was also water on the walls of the attic, so it looked like condensation.

I have lived in the house for 20 years and previously have always had a dry attic. There are no vents, but there are two double-hung small windows, one at each end of the attic. These have always been closed with storm windows in the winter and opened in the summer. There are no heating pipes in the attic.

Last June, I have a new roof put on, and a week or so later I found the attic, although drying in places, is still wet.

Can you tell me what I should do? It doesn't seem to dry even with both windows open. The insulation is old. Do you think I need new insulation on the floor? Would this help? Why this after 20 years? — Janice D.

A. Moisture from inside the house rises and gets into the attic where it has

Water conditioners: improving household water quality

Rare is the household with a water supply of excellent quality. Municipally treated water often is too hard or too soft, tastes or smells bad, or has too much iron, "sulfur," or acidity. This is because city water, while invariably safe for drinking, is also used for sprinkling lawns, washing cars, fighting fires, flushing toilets, and industrial processes. These activities account for eighty per cent of water consumption.

But water quality can be improved, and experts agree that the place to do it most effectively is at the "point of use," where the water line enters the home, with a water treatment appliance. This equipment may be purchased or rented for a home or apartment. Its use can result in savings for the consumer; smaller quantities of soaps and detergents are needed and household water systems last longer.

Correcting problems

The Better Business Bureau advises consumers to determine what their particular water problems are before buying or renting water treatment equipment. Because many factors are involved, a consultation with a water conditioning specialist is usually best. Consultations with a water utility company or local health board also are suggested.

First the water should be sampled and analyzed. The water sample must be taken properly so that it will be representative of the supply. Some tests can be made on the spot, or the specialist may decide to take a sample and send it to a laboratory to be analyzed. Water hardness must be determined because it is directly related to the size of the equipment necessary. It is also important to determine whether other water impurities, such as iron, are present and in what amount.

Buying a conditioner

No single type of conditioner will cure all water problems. Be sure to buy from a reputable dealer who can help you decide on what equipment is needed and on the best location for it in relation to the plumbing system. The dealer may also determine the need for bypassing outside faucets, and the accessibility for salt delivery and maintenance. Buying a well-known, nationally advertised brand generally is reasonable assurance of continued after sales service. In addition, larger manufacturers have qualified analytical laboratories and water treatment engineers to provide consultation and backup for local dealers.

In buying a water conditioner, allow for family growth and for guests. It is better to have equipment that is oversized, rather than undersized, because the latter can create problems of insufficient flow during periods of high water usage. Correcting water problems, rather than price, in fact, may cost less to operate and be more efficient. Be sure to get a detailed estimate of equipment, installation and operating costs.

The Better Business Bureau advises that some water conditioning equipment bears the Gold Seal of the Water Quality Association which indicates that the association has judged that the equipment complies with the specifications of the industry standards for water softeners.

Campaign launched to educate elderly on wise use of prescription drugs

A regional campaign to educate the elderly to wise use of prescription and over-the-counter drugs has been launched in Tidewater. Information ranging from a new Virginia law that broadens consumer choice in buying generic drugs to ways of substitution difficult-to-open safety caps is being shared with groups of senior citizens.

The Committee on Substance Abuse Prevention of the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission has been coordinating the effort in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Western Tidewater as a way of treating one of the most serious drug misuse problems today. Eleven percent of our population is over sixty-five, yet these older Americans are taking 25 percent of the prescriptions written each year. Additionally they are consumers of a large number of over-the-counter medications. Therefore, many seniors are using several different drugs at one time which may interact dangerously if not taken properly. In fact, 30 percent of visits to doctors for those over 65 are for adverse drug reactions.

A wide range of resources has been packaged into a two hour presentation which instructs seniors on ways to improve communications with their doctors and pharmacists, along with methods of organizing their drug taking. Alternatives to drug therapy for conditions of loneliness and depression are explored.

Providing the basis for this program are a film and accompanying pamphlet entitled "Elder Ed: Using Medicines Wisely." These were researched and produced by a Chicago group of senior citizens in cooperation with the National Institute on Drug Abuse. Additional pamphlets and posters are provided through a private drug manufacturer. Volunteers from Tidewater service agencies have been trained to this program and are currently engaged in meeting requests for presentations to residents in homes and apartment complexes for the elderly, nutrition education sites and activity centers.

Home ownership's effect on society studied by ODU

The American Dream. For generations of Americans that's meant a big family, a good job, and a comfortable home.

At least part of that dream, however, now seems as remote as ever for many people as the distance between a paycheck and the price of a house grows farther and farther apart.

"If home ownership is becoming a thing of the past for the average American, we want to find out what we as a society are missing," said Dr. Garland F. White, an associate professor of sociology at Old Dominion University.

White heads an ODU research team that has just launched at $274,000 study of home ownership for the National Institute of Mental Health. ODU was one of three universities chosen by the institute to study metropolitan issues. Others were the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Wisconsin.

If the researchers find that home ownership is all that it's cracked up to be—namely, that it's the foundation for good citizenship and family solidarity—then our society will be missing a great deal.

"There's a good deal of scientific literature to suggest some relationship between owning a home and being happy," White said. "Home ownership is generally thought to promote closeness in the family, involvement in the community, productivity on the job, and a lot of those middle-class values that society holds important."

"These are the kinds of things we'll be looking into," he said.

The test subjects for the ODU study will be 240 home owners and renters, including 60 low-income families buying townhouses in the Belle Diamond and Wellington Oaks developments of Norfolk. The low-income

A feminine room for a young lady

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. Our daughter is 14 and wants a frankly feminine bedroom but one that she can have as her very own.

Her bedroom in our Kempsville home has one large window on one wall, a large closet on another and doors into the hall and bathroom on the third. The fourth wall is where she has placed her twin bed.

She wants a blue and white color scheme and plans to create her own quilt-comforter when we decide on fabrics. I was thinking about perhaps a canopy effect over her bed—however, she doesn't want a traditional canopy bed.

Please could you give us some direction on how to proceed. —M.M.

A. To highlight the window of your daughter's room, you might consider a rather elaborate window treatment with a window seat for lounging. You could accomplish this rather easily by utilizing eaves or built-in shelves at each end of the window. Between the shelves build a plywood platform that you could carpet over or simply cover with a fabric pad and duster.

An interesting window effect can be created by using standard curtains or draperies. On a curtain rod in the center where the two draperies meet add an additional and perhaps contrasting fabric in a narrow width that can be tied back across the side draperies. The effect, luxurious and eye-catching, could be repeated over her bed.

Your daughter sounds like she's clever about decorating. When she makes her comforter, choose some fabrics that will blend well with each other in your blue and white scheme. Often, you can find elegant companion fabrics—a small print, a larger print, a geometric, and stripe and a plaid. The colors are usually coordinated in these package fabric designs.

Perhaps you could find a white background with blue checks for the outer draperies and the dust ruffle and a blue background with white checks for the inner draperies and the comforter.

Line the closet with one of the fabrics—applying fabric directly to the wall—for extra decorating drama. Add the necessary items such as bulletin board, desk and chair, mirrors, and chest or dressing table.

To create a feminine dressing table, circa 1940, you could add more of the fabric to it for skirt and top. Consider applying a heavy urethane sealer to the top to make it impervious to spills.

Q. We live in a house in Pungo that's much smaller than I'd like. The rooms are large but there aren't enough of them.

I like to sew but I have no place to keep my thread, patterns, material and sewing equipment. I'd like to figure out something in our bedroom in See DECOR SCORE, p. 7

Notes from the shelter industry

A depression? Not likely

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications Tidewater Builders Association

At the Home Buyers School held last Thursday night a telling question was raised for the first time in the two years Tidewater Builders Association has been holding these classes. The question from the audience was, "If I buy a home now, what's going to happen when the depression comes?"

A depression is extremely unlikely for a number of very good reasons. Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders with which TBA is affiliated, was in Tidewater recently, and he outlined some of those reasons.

The current economic situation is very different today from that of the 1930s. The money supply during the Great Depression was allowed to fall by one-third. Monetary authorities would not allow this to happen again; if anything, more money would be printed and put into circulation.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and state insurance agencies insure bank deposits today. There would not be the wholesale bank failures of the 30s.

Nowadays it's tough enough to find a nice single family house, let alone one on a big lot with plenty of mature trees. Not at Hidden Cove or Garden Walk. You'll find a variety of big, single family houses that are priced from $62,950 to $73,950. And each house is set on heavily wooded lots. What's more, you get a built-in value with a livable design that made Sir Galahad Virginia's leading home builder.

Fall chores pay spring dividends

By PATRICK DENTON

There are still a few odd jobs to do around the garden between now and when Virginia Beach's wet and cold set in. Most of these fall chores pay large dividends in the spring, with all the tidying-up jobs all cleared away.

Here are a few reminders.

ROSES: Remove some of the oldest growth on your climbing roses. Tie in new shoots. Cut down your brush roses just a bit, taking off especially any extra long shoots. This is so that the winter winds will not be able to whip the long growth about and damage the bush.

After a few light frosts and before hard frost, mound up the base of rose bushes with garden soil. Even in an extra severe winter when the bush is killed to ground level, there will still be some live cultivated rose growth below the mounded soil line and you will not have lost your rose bush.

LILIES: Do consider growing lilies in your garden. Many lilies are perfectly hardy and now is the time to buy and plant them. An ideal location is at the back of your perennial border.

Their regal stature and spectacular blooms make lilies a center of attraction in the garden. Many are exotically perfumed, so that when cut and brought into the house the sweet scent permeates the room. Outstanding are the Aurelian Lily Hybrids, Pink Perfection being especially beautiful and fragrant.

CUTTINGS: If you haven't done so already, take cuttings from your geraniums to start new plants over the winter for next spring's garden. In March you can take cuttings off the new plants for a second batch.

EVERGREENS: The fall is a good time to plant or transplant evergreen shrubs. Keep them well watered and their foliage soaked daily to give them a good start, and send them well moistened into winter — as with your deciduous trees.

Backyard gardener

BULBS: Plant your spring-flowering bulbs any time now to get them established before hard frosts.

CLEANING UP: When you are ready to wrap up the garden, and before the weather turns impossibly unpleasant, clean out your summer bedding plants. All your glads, dahlias, tuberous begonias need to be dug and stored.

Clean up the vegetable garden as well, and remove all refuse. Dig over as much of the garden as possible. Use a long-handled shovel and turn over large shovelfuls intact, so that the cold and rain get at as much soil surface as possible for soil health.

Remove top growth from perennials. This is most important with phlox and peonies, to prevent the spread of disease.

Remove or dig in fallen leaves and any remaining spent plant life, to eliminate as many places as possible for garden pests to hide in over the winter.

LAWN: Remember to lower the cutting blade on the mower to one and a half inches for the last cut, again to send it clean into the winter season to lessen the chance of matting and winter kill.

RASPBERRIES: As with roses, top off any extra long canes that will inevitably be whipped about in the winter winds and injured. If you haven't already done it, remove all canes that bore fruit this year. Cut these out at soil level, and thin out this year's shoots if they are crowded.

existent 30 years ago. In a time of economic downturn, these programs would not only buffer the impact but would also serve to support the family unit.

In an economic slowdown, taxes could be cut to stimulate the economy because quite frankly, there's a lot to cut from. This was not the case in the 1930s.

The complexion of the labor force has changed in the last 50 years. The number of workers in service employment has doubled while the number of persons in manufacturing has fallen. Employment in the service sector is not as susceptible to sharp drops as is employment in manufacturing.

Specific legislation has been passed since the Great Depression to help insure that the economy will not stagnate. VA and FHA insurance and guarantees and supports in other sectors of the economy all serve: to protect us against economic collapse. Today there is a substantial body of information available about the economy on which to base decisions. The housing industry itself is closely monitored, and economic changes can be adequately predicted in time for the industry to adjust.

There seems to be really very little evidence to support the theory that housing prices will fall dramatically in the near future. An 11 percent decline nationwide is predicted for housing construction in 1980, but the local picture is considerably brighter. Tidewater's starts will probably be down only six and half percent, an indication of the area's strong stable economy and continued housing demand.

New home prices in Virginia Beach and Chesapeake will continue to rise next year, but instead of the 15 percent increase we saw this year, there may be only a 10 percent rise in 1980.

I wouldn't gamble that there will be a crash or an abrupt fall in real estate prices in the near future. Buying a house is still the best investment you can make, and a depression just doesn't seem to be on the horizon.

'Pick up your own sod' brochure available

Fall is the season for lawn care and pre-grown sod can play an important part in lawn establishment and maintenance.

After the prime seeding time of September 1 - October 1, it may be too late to correct seeding failures with more grass seed, according to Dr. Jack Hall, agronomist with Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. This is where sod comes in, providing an instant weed-free lawn and protection against winter erosion.

Consumers are urged to take advantage of the Pick Up Your Own Sod program developed jointly by the Virginia Cultivated Turfgrass Association, VPI & SU and the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services (VDACS). There are 11 sod growers throughout the state who offer consumers easily-handled rolls or strips of sod. They are listed in the "Pick Up Your Own Sod Directory," available free by writing SOD, VDACS, Division of Markets, 203 North Governor Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219. Copies may also be obtained from the Virginia Beach Extension office.

The directory includes basic instructions, types of sod available and a map showing the locations of the sod farms in Virginia.

one corner. I have the floor and wall space but I don't want to sleep in a sewing room and I know my husband would object, too.

Do you have any ideas on how I might conceal my sewing objects in one area? - R.P.

A. Why don't you do a sort of sewing wall - building shallow shelves above and wider ones below on which you could stow your supplies. In front of this wall, hanging from the ceiling, install a floor to ceiling venetian blind in an interesting color coordinating with your room scheme.

Pull up the blind when you are working and lower it when you are through.

If you have the space you and your husband might install a piece of plastic laminated wood for a work space that could function as a desk for him and a cutting board for you.

Families seem to need working space for paying bills, reading, writing reports, figuring income tax and all the other paperwork that goes with contemporary living.

And this could provide you with a functional and yet attractive addition.

Hechinger opens store near Pembroke Mall

Do-it-yourself enthusiasts in the Virginia Beach area are being introduced to a new home improvement shopping concept this week as the Hechinger Company, a Washington, D.C.-based building supply/home improvement firm, opens its first store in the resort city at 4485 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

The new store, located opposite the Pembroke Mall Shopping Center, will be dedicated in ceremonies Saturday, October 13, at 9:15 a.m. followed by its grand opening at 9:30 a.m. Hechinger Chairman of the Board, Richard England, and John W. Hechinger, president, will join city officials in the traditional Hechinger log-cutting event that takes place at all dedications for what the regional firm calls "the world's most unusual lumber yards."

The Virginia Beach store is typical of the prototype Hechinger design which provides 60,000 square feet of retail space and 20,000 feet of outdoor garden and storage area. The store stocks about 40,000 items of building materials, garden supplies, hardware, tools, plumbing and electrical fixtures, casual furniture and housewares.

The store will employ about 80 persons and anticipates nearly $5 million annually in retail sales.

Ninety-five percent of all species in the animal kingdom are invertebrates - spineless creatures such as insects, worms, and crustaceans - according to the National Wildlife Federation. Among vertebrates, there are about 12,000 species of fish, 8,500 species of birds, 4,000 species of mammals, and 3,000 of amphibians.

Informal session of council Monday, said that it would cost the city "a good $5 or even $6 million, not counting administrative costs and legal costs, if charges in the older subdivisions were reduced to the lowest charge of $440.

The people then went to State Senator Peter K. Babalas, who last week held a senate subcommittee hearing on the city's fee system which packed Kempville High School auditorium.

Among the most vociferous are the people of Ballyllyn Farms, a subdivision included in the Sherry Park area which was declared a health hazard. Their complaint is that they were not notified at the time the low rate was in effect and that there is no proof that their situation is a health hazard. The community, like others, was just tacked onto Sherry Park when it was determined a health hazard.

However, the people in Sherry Park had the advantage of a lower line fee while Ballyllyn residents have to pay the going rate. The people in Ballyllyn had appealed to council to at least extend the hook-on deadline to a year rather than the 60 days required for a health hazard areas. The rationale was that if the area has been a hazard for five years when sewers were not available, one more year won't make much difference.

Ervin asked Hanbury whether there was any record that these people had been notified. Hanbury said that he had no records which show that they had.

Ervin said that "at least one subdivision, maybe two, were declared health hazards without notice. I don't know that they got any notice." The people got tied to Sherry Park without their knowledge, he said.

"In my neighborhood (North Virginia Beach)," said Ervin, the only notice was through the civic league newsletter."

Hanbury said that in 1975 when the $375 rate went into effect, the city placed a full-page ad in a newspaper, but Ervin said that if the people did not get this paper, they did not get the message.

Hanbury said the problem arose because of council's genuine intent to hook up to sewers as rapidly as possible. "When we got rid of the fixed charge, there was a gap between those who signed and those who did not."

If Babalas' suggestion to call the $440 contracts null and void for more equity were put into effect, Hanbury said, "I told Babalas he would have three times as large an audience" made up of people with contracts.

He presented three alternatives:

- Hurry up and expedite all sewers with fixed contracts and charge the different rates.
- Call in contracts for $440 null and void and charge everyone the same.
- Make refunds to everybody in areas where contracts have been in effect since 1971 where people have paid more than the minimum charge.

He said the only thing he could recommend was to keep the present system, regardless of inequities, because others would be more inequitable. At any rate, with the city paying an average of $3700 per lot to install lines, the citizens are getting a sizeable bargain, he said. Ervin pointed out later that the users, rather than the city, pay for the fees through service charges.

Ervin said he had always placed a lot of emphasis on proper public notice. "If we can do it within our pocketbooks we should do it."

Mayor Patrick L. Standing said, "We can go just so far in being benevolent until we give the sink away."

Hanbury said that revenues are received not from line fees but from service charges. "The higher service charge subsidizes the low rates."

Ervin said later that sewer rates are expected to increase to $84 a year by 1981 and projections are for the charges to be $104 by 2003.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland wanted to know what the city was doing about the 1500 to 2000 people who are required to hook up but who haven't. Hanbury said that letters are being sent this Friday to those living in health hazard areas.

Councilman George R. Ferrell said the people at the Babalas hearing were from one little section, the Sherry Park area.

Holland said that he saw the Ervin plan as "very divisive."

Councilman George R. Ferrell said that since Babalas said the contracts were illegal, the city should go to court to find out.

When Councilwoman Barbara Henley said the recommendations were confusing, Hanbury said that "it would not be more confusing than now."

inspected by the health department.

Virginia Beach property owners are required to hook up within one year after the service is available, except that in health hazard areas, the period is shortened to 60 days.

City manager George L. Hanbury told Council Monday afternoon, at an informal session, that the letters would go out Friday.

In effect, the people who are being given the extension are those who will be paying the current line fee of $780. Although, some of the properties have been exempted from the health hazard designation, Watts said these were few.

'Circle Calling' offers reduced rate calling

Continental Telephone Company of Virginia filed with the State Corporation Commission a proposed concurring tariff for a new interexchange calling plan. This tariff is the same as the one filed recently by C&P Telephone.

Dennis O'Hearn, Customer Service Manager in Princess Anne said the telephone industry has been working with the Virginia General Assembly and the State Corporation Commission to meet the special needs of those customers who place a high volume of calls to communities close by.

Dennis O'Hearn said the service is called "Circle Calling." This service will provide one-way calling on a banded basis up to a radius of 28 miles. The calls will be at a reduced rate which will mean lower toll charges for a short haul long distance call.

"Circle Calling Service" calls for each message will be rated on one minute increments based on time of day and distance similar to the present long-distance schedule. Each "Circle Calling Service" message rate, according to the plan, is lower than a comparable long distance message rate.

The Customer Service Manager said "This is a trial plan for 12 months to see if our customers wish to subscribe to this type of "Circle Calling Service."

An artist's rendering of the Minitree Building

Minitree Building under construction at Pembroke Professional Park

Minitree Partnership has announced the construction start of a 5,000 square foot office building in Pembroke Professional Park. Modeled after an original 17th century design, the Minitree Building is unique in its attention to authenticity of design combined with modern efficiency. Yates & Berley Associates of Portsmouth are the consulting architects.

"The maximum in energy efficiency is featured, with individual heat pumps serving each suite, double-glass insulated windows, concrete floors, and a heavily insulated exterior" according to James Beal of the Holland Construction Corporation of Virginia, contractor for the job. Scheduled completion date for the office building is around November 1, 1979. Financing is by V.N.B. Mortgage Company with leasing handled by Goodman, Seagar, Hogan.

Centrally located on Independence Boulevard between Pembroke Mall and Bayside Hospital in Virginia Beach, Pembroke Professional Park consists of 14 individual office sites suitable for 4,000 to 6,000 sq. ft. office buildings and a restaurant site. The Minitree Building is one of seven already located in the park which consists of eight acres of landscaped park-like surroundings. Real estate sales are being handled by Jim Owens of Pembroke Realty & Insurance Agency, Inc.

Robert G. Hirsch

Beach shipyarder recognized

A shipyarder from Virginia Beach recently received outstanding recognition when his Naval Reserve sea power presentation team was awarded a special Chief of Naval Operations' (CNO) award for making 3,000 presentations.

Robert G. Hirsch, head of the Norfolk Naval Shipyard's Quality Assurance Office's Welding Engineering Division was among the team members told, "You have been truly heeding the Chief of Naval Operations' request that you speak out in your communities on the importance of the Navy."

Hirsch, a retired Naval Reserve captain, has given 462 sea power presentations in the last five years. He has placed Naval Air Reserve Unit (NARU) Norfolk in totaling a nationwide high of 3,000 presentations. NARU has received three CNO Golden Centurian Awards.

Only one person, a retired warrant officer on the West Coast with 700 appearances, has topped Hirsch in speaking to civic clubs and other groups.

"Any time I can get 12 or more persons together, I'm ready," Hirsch said. "I've shown it to my neighbors and to friends of the people I've visited in Florida and other places. I find tremendous interest in the Navy everywhere."

Hirsch, who has held his NNSY position since January 1963, is a 1946 Naval Academy graduate who transferred to the Naval Reserve in 1948 and was recalled in 1950 and 1961 for a pair of two-year tours.

Virginia Beach Reading Council membership drive is open

The membership drive for the Va. Beach Reading Council, an affiliate of the International Reading Association, is underway. Membership in the council is open to all persons engaged in teaching at any level, to parents, and any others interested in supporting the field of reading.

The council provides nationally known speakers at meetings, workshops and demonstrations, conferences, publications, and newsletters to members.

Dues are $50 per year payable by November 8. This includes Virginia state membership as well as the local membership. For additional information, contact Rose Lijo at 428-9260 after 5 p.m. colleague, research associate Michele Rittenmeyer, will conduct their study through regular interviews with the 240 test families over a three-year period. Each will be monitored for things like divorces within the families, participation in community organizations, changes in attitudes toward their jobs, and over-all satisfaction with their lives.

The study will be especially significant, they said, because it will focus on low-income home owners. "There have been other studies into the social significance of home ownership," White said, "but because owning homes has typically been for the middle and upper classes, we don't have a very complete picture."

"After all, people with higher incomes may be happy and fulfilled for a lot of different reasons. In our study, we will be able to follow these families as they adjust to home ownership, and hopefully draw some conclusions about how their new status has changed other aspects of their lives," the ODU researcher said.

"Indirectly, our research may help someone here or in Washington determine whether these kinds of programs pay off," said Dr. Paul T. Scholte, an assistant professor of sociology and co-principal in the research. "Our only interest, though, is in determining the meaning of home ownership." They and a third

Infant care course offered

Are you about to have a baby? Or, do you just want to be prepared for a visit from your new grandchild? The American Red Cross, Tidewater Chapter is offering an infant care course for parents, grandparents and parents-to-be. The free class will begin Saturday, October 13, and will run three consecutive Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the United Way Family Center in Virginia Beach.

Participants will learn to properly bathe, feed and diaper an infant. For information and enrollment contact the Virginia Beach Red Cross Office at 499-2311.

VWC has record fall enrollment

Virginia Wesleyan College has begun its 14th academic session with a record enrollment of 804, according to College Registrar Douglas E. McIntyre. (This figure includes 779 full-time and 25 part-time students.) Just over 350 students live on campus, and 51 are housed in college-arranged apartments and townhouses adjacent to the campus. There are approximately 400 commuting students.

This year's enrollment is up 29 from last year's total of 775 students. Virginia Wesleyan opened in September 1966 with 75 freshmen.

Kings Grant PTA hosts open house

King's Grant Elementary School PTA will meet on Monday, October 15, at 7:30 p.m. After a brief business meeting, parents will go to their children's classrooms to meet teachers and discuss the year's curriculum. Following classroom visitation, refreshments will be served.

A short presentation will also be made by a representative of National Community Service, Inc., describing the "Reading at Home Program" which will be a primary PTA activity during the current school year.

Real estate license preparatory course offered

You can prepare for the December 1 state real estate salesman's examination through a course offered by the distributive education section of Virginia Beach Public Schools.

A 30-hour real estate license preparatory course will be held at Kempsville High School from October 25 through November 29. Classes meet for three hours each Tuesday and Thursday night.

The course includes instruction on real estate license law, rules and regulations, ethics and sound business practices, real estate math, and preparation of real estate documents. Tuition for the course is $50, which includes all materials.

For information about registration, call the distributive education section at 427-4856. You must have completed the Principles of Real Estate course to qualify for the license preparatory course.

TCC to show women's film

The Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College will present a film entitled "A Woman's Place" October 16, 12:30 - 1:30 p.m., in Building B, room 100.

The film, narrated by actress Julie Harris, celebrates the American woman's contribution to history. The presentation is open to the public at no charge.

"A Woman's Place" is co-sponsored by the TCC-Virginia Beach Student Government Association and the Old Dominion University Women's Center. For further information, contact the Student Activities Office at the Virginia Beach campus, 427-3070, extension 130.

Learning U.S. history

Independence Junior High students (l to r) Ronald Gladstone, Allica Ballew, and Bonnie Bishop display their creativity in showing the history of the United States flag and patriotism during their class observance of Citizenship Week. Social studies teacher John McLaughlin invited the Adam Thoroughgood chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution to participate in the observance. DAR members Mrs. Lucy Welschelt (left) presented the program "History of the Flag" to all eighth grade social studies classes. The United States Constitution was ratified during this same week in 1787.

North Dakota only state not represented in Beach schools

Last year not a single new student in Virginia Beach public schools had transferred in from Wyoming at the end of September, but that was the only state that did not furnish the school system with at least one transfer student. This year, there are 11 transfers from Wyoming...but not a single one from North Dakota.

North Dakota, which had one transfer last year at this time, thus holds the somewhat dubious honor of being the only state not to have a single transfer into Virginia Beach by September 28, 1979.

A total of 5,120 transfer students are new to the school system in Virginia Beach this fall. Of that total 2,442 are military dependents, about 200 ahead of the number of dependents last year. In the past six years, the total number of transfers averages out to just over 5,000 each year.

More than 100 pupils came to Virginia Beach this year from each of seven states. They are: California (298); Florida (291); North Carolina (206); New York (158); Pennsylvania (137); and South Carolina (133). Generally, those states contain a number of military bases, and a large number of the transfers are military dependents.

There are also new students in Virginia Beach this year from 41 countries and territories. There were 41 on that list last year also, but not the same 41 as this year. Transfers from Germany (42) top this year's list. In order, the next countries are Spain (41); Italy, Guam, and the Philippines (all with 24); Japan and England (both 17); Puerto Rico (16); Scotland and Canada (both 15); and Cuba (11). Again, the top countries on the list are home to several military bases, and the majority of the transfers from those countries are military dependents.

Several countries had only one transfer student to contribute. Egypt, Hong Kong, and Venezuela each sent one elementary student; Belgium, Columbia, Denmark, Finland, and Israel each sent one secondary student.

New Virginia Beach students who attended other Tidewater public schools last year account for 1,016 transfers, and another 389 students attended public schools in other parts of Virginia last year.

From other states and the District of Columbia, Virginia Beach has chalked up a total of 2,970; from foreign countries and territories, a total of 332.

The other 802 transfers into Virginia Beach this year are from private schools throughout Tidewater, Virginia, other states, and foreign countries. Last year there were 194 more students transferring from private schools to the public schools of Virginia Beach than this year.

Last year, just a few days after our September 30 count, a family from Wyoming moved to Virginia Beach, and registered their only child in public school, thus filling the void. Now, about North Dakota.....

Beach Merit Scholarship finalists named

Eight high school seniors in Virginia Beach public schools have qualified as semifinalists in the 1980 Merit Program of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

More than 1.1 million students in about 18,000 high schools nationwide entered the 1980 program by taking the 1978 qualifying test. The 15,000 semifinalists are the highest scorers in each state.

The semifinalists will take another test this school year, and must also be recommended highly by their school's principal. About 90 percent of the semifinalists will qualify as finalists next February. From that group, a thousand $1,000 scholarships will be awarded, the money coming from grants from major business and industrial organizations.

Finalists meeting the highest standards will be awarded 3,300 four-year Merit scholarships. About half of those scholarships are supported by grants from 600 corporations, foundations, unions, trusts, and professional associations. The rest are sponsored by over 200 colleges and universities. Those renewable scholarships can range from $1,000 to more than $6,000 for undergraduate study.

In Virginia Beach, Kempsville High School had five semifinalists. They are David W. Ames, Howard D. Belote, Kimberly A. Coleman, Gary E. Nelson, and Peter D. Reynolds.

Other finalists are Michelle Albert, Bayside High School; George D. Dion, Kellam High School; and Tad S. Peithbridge, Princess Anne High School.

Additionally, 39 other Virginia Beach high school seniors have been named as Commended students in the same competition.

While the Commended students are not eligible for Scholarships of the Merit Program, that status increases opportunities for college admission and financial aid by identifying their high test scores. They are:

Patricia Kay Wagner, Richard J. Schlimgen, Marguerite P. Mulhall, David Brian Jett, Paul Carter Gordon, Cynthia Lynn Britton, and Donald Buhlman, all of First Colonial High School; Jimmy L. Godwin, Lisa L. Nesselrode, Nancy D. Rosenberg, and Jeffrey Sharp, all of Kellam High School;

Peter C. Bernard, Mark S. Boulden, David M. Carre, Andrew F. LaBarge, Thomas F. McGuire, Elizabeth N. Gibbins, William J. Krell, Andrew F. LaBarge, Thomas F. McGuire, Michael T. Milbocker, Richard J. Patterson, Mark A. Slupek, Douglas G. Thornton, and Thomas J. Wells, all of Kempsville High School; and James A. Haworth, Michael A. Lawrence, and Darlene F. Salo, all of Princess Anne High School.

Talent hunt in progress

The youth of the Virginia Beach Recreation Center-Kempsville are looking for talented persons in the Tidewater area to entertain during a monthly coffee house. The coffee house is held the first Saturday night of every month in a "sophisticated" atmosphere with free refreshments and live entertainment at no charge to teenaged members of the Virginia Beach Recreation Center-Kempsville. Solo acts or small combos would be ideal for this situation. A limited amount of money is available to pay the artists.

For further information contact the Youth Services staff at 499-1281 or at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center-Kempsville, 800 Monmouth Lane.

Story and film program teaches fire safety to kids

The Great Neck branch of the Virginia Beach Public Library will present a story and film program on fire safety for children ages three through five years on Friday, October 12, at 10 a.m.

The film stars Barbara Eden and shows small children how to prevent fire in their homes and what to do in the event of fire. The program is being offered in conjunction with Fire Prevention Week, which is October 7-13.

There is no registration or charge for the program. The Great Neck Library is located at 1251 Bayne Drive in the Hilltop area of Virginia Beach. For further information call C.A. Pauley at 481-6094.

fuel the fire of your Fall home-improvement plans.*

Prepare Now to Save Energy All Winter

Looking for new and fail-proof ways to tighten your energy belt this winter? If so, you'll be surprised at how many ideas we've come up with to help you conserve that precious commodity. Most are easy to do yourself... others may require a specialist, but it will be well worth the expense considering the money saved on monthly utility bills. Not only will these tips help you save fuel and electricity in every room in your house, but will also help make your home warmer and more comfortable all winter long.

HEATING PLANT tune-up is probably the most important preparation for energy efficiency in cold weather climates. For the best fuel economy check the burner air adjustment... too much air allows heat to go up the chimney; too little air causes incomplete combustion.

- Inspect roof vent cap and supports for rust and distortion.

- Check flue joints and clean-out door.
- Provide a direct source of air to burner so cold air is not sucked in around window openings.
- Adjust timing of the flue damper.
- Clean system filters monthly.
- If your oil burner unit is more than 10 years old, investing in a new-generation high-efficiency model should mean more than 20% in fuel savings.

THERMOSTAT — expect significant fuel savings per degree lowered. Try a daytime setting at 68°F, and 58° at night, except during record low temperature periods. Experts say each degree over 68° adds 3% to your heating bill.

- Investigate automatic setback thermostat if the family is away for long periods during a day.
- Close off heat registers in unused rooms, but leave two-thirds of all registers open to avoid overheating the furnace. Rearrange furniture away from registers.

WATER HEATER — drain half a pail of water each month from the bottom of the tank to improve efficiency by removing sediment.

- Electric water heater is the largest consumer of electricity in the home. Fit it with a time switch turning it off during minimal usage hours and costs should drop 25%.
- The first month's savings ought to pay for the switch.
- Faucet washer replacement prevents the one drop per second that allows 700 gallons of water, perhaps hot, go down the drain in a year.

energy waste.

- Select a pan not more than one-inch larger than the range burner.
- Make certain that the range vent closes tightly when the fan turns off.
- Ovens use less fuel than ranges, as a rule. It is usually unnecessary to preheat. Note that continuous-clean ovens do not consume additional energy.
- Thaw frozen foods before cooking.
- A defrosted roast cooks in two-thirds the time.
- Investigate energy savings by using pressure cooker, pressure fryer, and microwave oven as well as other newer specialty appliances. When cooking times are shortened you save energy, cash and time.

REFRIGERATOR-FREEZER — a thermometer at refrigerator center should register 37°F; and the freezer should register 0°.

- Use the sweeper wand to dust condenser coils.
- Cost of operation is least when the units are "filled to capacity." This means somewhere just above three-fourths full.
- The shorter the time the refrigerator door is open, the less the cost of operation.

DISHWASHERS are double-energy users... hot water, the major cost, plus electricity. Keep the screen clean.

- Provide water at 140-160°F or as indicated on the dish detergent package instructions.
- Mop dishes clean, foregoing the rinse-hold cycle, and build a full load. Wash, open the machine and air dry, bypassing the dry cycle.

LIGHTING — perhaps one-twentieth of your electric bill is for lighting, but even that can be whittled. Note that it is not true that a "surge of power" costs money when lights are switched on in the house. Energy and money are both saved when lights are not in use!

• Read the information on the paper sleeve in which lightbulbs are sold. LUMENS measure the light you get; WATTS measure the energy you buy!

• A 40-watt fluorescent lamp provides nearly twice the light of a 100-watt incandescent, which provides 50% more light than four 25-watt bulbs.

• Place a lamp in a corner so it will reflect off both walls.

• Replace a light switch with a solid-state dimmer switch to program light levels.

• Accept free solar energy through South windows during the heating season, remembering that your heat goes back out the window the same way at night unless you pull the drapes... insulated drapes are even better protection.

• EAVES, gable, cupola and roof vents also require inspection to be sure they are not stopped up. Proper ventilation prevents winter moisture from ruining insulation in the attic. • Gutters should be cleaned out, repaired and fastened securely to the house. Ice can wedge the gutter away allowing moisture to penetrate the fascia and leak down between the walls.

Finally, consult your local nursery for advice on trees and shrubs to plant as windbreaks, or to shade an air conditioner or windows.

Looking for the latest in home equipment and remodeling trends? The marketplace is filled with a non-stop flow of new ideas that are both fun and functional. High on everyone's list of course is energy. Various energy savers abound along with leisure-oriented home gear. Here, then, are some ideas to get you thinking about those planned household improvements.

The heart of every home is definitely the kitchen. Since it's such a popular spot why not keep it up-to-date as well as energy conscious when you replace or add major appliances. Though all major appliances including the washer and dryer use only 20% of your home's energy (furnace, air conditioner and water heater use the other 80%), it's smart to save everywhere possible. Most new refrigerators are far more efficient than their older counterparts, but the real news is with stoves. Microwaves are gaining in popularity as energy and time-savers. Many have a choice of cooking speeds and temperature probes or sensors to determine doneness. Also noteworthy are the new microwaves mounted at eye level on regular stoves, a real space saver in skimpy kitchens, and combination microwave and conventional ovens. Convection ovens are also gaining in popularity. Once used only in commercial units, these ovens have fans to circulate the heat, allowing you to cook faster at a lower temperature. You can also virtually crowd the oven with dishes since the warm air is forced to circulate.

Another interesting innovation for kitchen planning where space is at a premium are the new 18" wide dishwashers (standard is 24" wide). They are available in portable or built-in models, hold service for eight and offer the same selection of cleaning cycles as full-size models. On all dishwashers, look for energy-saving drying cycles. And, if you're wondering about color in the kitchen, the new neutral is almond, a soft cream tone that's warmer than white and newer than the familiar green, gold and copper.

If you're planning your remodeling blitz for the bathroom, look again for the energy-savers. Water-saving toilets spare hundreds of gallons per family. New shower heads that put more pressure behind less water are well worth installing. And, if you would like to have the amenities of your health spa right here at home, opt for your own steam bath. Available now in at-home models, they cost about $1,000 and can be set up in hours.

If you're looking up to the unfinished attic as a gold mine of unused space (and well you should since it is suitable for bedrooms or baths, family rooms or home offices) think of skylights as ideal windows. Not only do they lighten and brighten, but they do so without the expense and effort of dormers. And what transforms a dark attic more quickly than a flood of natural light? Installation is easier than you think. Check with your nearest home improvement center.

New and notable for just about any remodeling job are the greenhouse windows sized for standard openings. They open and light up any room and add new character thanks to their greenery or leave them clear to drink in the view from outside. Either way, they add a lot of splash with relatively little effort.

Finally, scour lumber yards, home improvement stores, plumbing suppliers and the like before you approach any home project. You'll find idea upon idea, plus helpful hints on getting things done. In fact, you may even find enough projects to keep you busy all winter.

Don't Blame Mother Nature for Your Wet Basement

Three out of four homes have "ring around the cellar!" and these wet basements probably cause more family turmoil than closets or onions or bent fenders combined.

When a home buyer designates 30% of the purchase price for the part that is underground and then discovers that his proposed rec room is only fit for growing mushrooms, there is only one thing to do.

... Put the blame on Mother Nature! "But it's not nice to blame Mother Nature!" she says.

"What you did was to invest a lot of money having the foundation water-proofed by the builder. Then you let them fill in around it with my fluffy soil, and skirted that area with a concrete sidewalk.

"Do you realize what you did?"

"You built a sump, kissing cousin to a 'swamp,' along the perimeter of your foundation!"

"And if that weren't bad enough, you cleverly placed the downspouts so hundreds of gallons of my rain-water drains at your basement!"

"Now you want to blame my water table!"

You mutter an apology.

"Oh," she replies sweetly, "occasionally I might shoulder some of the blame for the groundwater that builds up hydrostatic pressure and seeks out tiny fissures in foundation footings, but after all, it is the nature of my water table to equalize pressure both

As you're keeping the home fires burning this winter, try fueling the flames of warmth with an alternate source of energy and you may save as much as 80% on your next utility bill.

Heating with wood is an old-fashioned idea that still plays an important part in our modern day-to-day living. A wood burning stove can supply all the heat needed to warm your home or it can act as a supplement to your usual source of heat. It also serves as a dependable back-up energy source in case of storms, power failures or other such emergencies. And most people find installation simple enough to do themselves. It's an investment that usually pays for itself by the end of the second winter.

At one time your choice of stove styles may have been somewhat limited, but now the industry has been busy expanding and trying to meet consumer's wants and needs. Today's models feature everything from automatic, fuel-saving thermostatic control to fine furniture styling.

Stoves come in all sizes and varying designs to suit simple to elaborately ornate tastes. You can please your aesthetic sense while you conserve money and energy. Construction materials range from steel, stone, soapstone and brick to ceramic tiles and cast iron. The selection is better today than any time since the nineteenth century when stoves were the rule rather than the exception.

Wood burning appliances fall into three main type classifications.

The first is Radiant in which 65% of the heat produced is radiant or short wave and 35% is hot air heat. The term radiant means that the warmth given off must penetrate through in the room and be absorbed in order to most efficiently spread the heat. This type takes a little longer than the others to heat up, but once it does, the warmth is more penetrating. It should be centrally-located in the room since heat comes off from all sides. Most radiants have front located doors for loading wood.

Secondly is the circulating type which works exactly opposite of the Radiant; 65% is hot air heat and 35% is radiant heat. A central room location is not absolutely necessary with this type to increase the efficiency. However, as with any wood burner, a fairly open floor plan is helpful so air can flow freely throughout the house.

Placement of the stove is very important so you should keep in mind where yours will go as you're picking one out. Make sure it will fit where you want it. Loading doors on the circulating models are on top or off to one side so you won't be able to actually watch the open flames. Cooking is not possible with this type since the cabinet never gets warm enough to even heat up your puppy's cold nose.

The third type is not technically a "stove" but is rather an Add On Furnace. This appliance creates a nice balance between the welcome economy of wood heating and the undeniable convenience of conventional central heating. It is designed to work in conjunction with another furnace by sharing your present duct system. This type has proven so efficient, however, that people who start with one as a supplementary basis often reverse and make it their primary system after they see how well it gets the job done.

The heating capacity of any stove is directly related to the stove's size in both the amount of surface area it has to radiate heat and the pounds of materials in it. When sizing up your choices, it's better to go a little too big rather than end up with one that's too small.

If your home happens to have a wood burning fireplace, a few simple changes will make it a more functional asset. The conventional fireplace actually wastes fuel by pulling the warmed air right out the chimney. The air then returns through door and window cracks only to be reheated and pulled out again. Installing glass doors helps prevent loss of warm air and adds some extra radiant heat as well.

A wood burning stove fireplace insert would greatly cut down on wasted energy and give you more control of the fire. The back of the stove is sealed into the fireplace opening, leaving the front section exposed. The loading doors can be left open for a full, fireplace-view of the flames or closed tightly for more efficient combustion or surface cooking.

As with any conventional heating system, your type of home — size, amount of insulation, floor plan, storm windows, ceiling height — should be considered when searching for the proper wood burning appliance. Business is booming so many reputable dealers are available to offer expert guidance, whether you seek a full changover to wood fuel or a part time supplement to your regular system.

Questions & Answers

Q. Help! The children have taken over our family room. We would like an adults only hideaway for relaxation without going to the bedroom.
A. You can find a solution for your problem designed for your budget. The low cost approach is to arrange a quiet corner of the family room or living room for reading and conversation. The old back porch may be converted to this prized adults only nook. An architect or contractor can be brought in to design an addition where collectibles may be displayed without child proofing.

Q. We have a formal dining room that is used for occasional entertaining. It seems like wasted space, yet we do want room for entertaining. What could we do with this space to make it more versatile?

A. Consider using two smaller pedestal-base tavern tables pushed together for use as a full size dining table. Pulled apart one may be used as a game table and the other can serve as the breakfast table.

Q. Our older home needs work to cover cracked and damaged ceilings. We considered suspended ceilings, but didn't seem appropriate for formal living areas.

A. Don't give up on suspended ceilings. There are now styles on the market made to resemble regular ceilings. The color matched grid is part of the ceiling pattern.

Q. My kitchen desk is continually cluttered and disorganized. I don't have room for a file cabinet.

A. We've seen printer's type cases put to use separating bills, menus and meeting dates.

Q. Our family likes to cook and gather around the kitchen. Our otherwise roomy house has a galley kitchen and no room for expansion.

A. A big family room/kitchen sounds like what you need. No place to go? How about the basement? You'll have a hard time getting the crew upstairs after this conversion.

Q. We have a living room alcove created by a protruding closet. It seems to get in the way of my decorating efforts and furniture arrangements. What do you suggest?

A. Make the alcove a cozy nook off your living room. Build a dual purpose seating/sleeping platform the width of the opening. You can decorate it to complement the main living room.

Q. I want to put a few wicker pieces in my daughter's newly decorated bedroom. Will it clean easily?

A. Both popular wicker and rattan need to be dusted regularly with the soft brush attachment of the vacuum. Occasionally, use a damp cloth rinsed in plain water.

Q. We need extra electrical outlets in several rooms to update our home. Must we tear through walls or rip up floors?

A. Here's just the product you need. Surface-mounted vinyl strips are available. They house wires and outlets. In addition, they double as baseboards and door trim. These units can be painted and mar-resistant and can be dented. Check local building codes before installing.

Q. Like so many people we have the same blah window above the kitchen sink. How can we liven up this area?
A. If you need to hide an unattractive view, wood spindles or stained glass may solve your problem. Add pizzazz with plants or suspend wooden spoons and utensils with thin wire and screw eyes from a tension rod.

Q. I'm looking for a clever way to display my cookbook collection. Naturally, my space is limited.

A. If you scour antique shops and rummage sales, you might come across just what you need. Old church hymnals are sturdy enough to support your collection. Simply attach them in rows top to bottom on your end cabinet.

Q. I like the versatility of track lighting. It puts light wherever you need it and it has an uncluttered look. But I don't like the "utility room" appearance of the track. How can I have the best of both worlds?

A. Give track lighting a more subtle look by constructing a ceiling mounted baffle. It attractively conceals the light track and canisters.

Q. With my older home I'm in need of a new radiator concealing trick.

A. Try a two panel oriental screen made of 1/4" particleboard and covered to match draperies. Owners of older homes sometimes ask about concealing window air conditioners, too. Why not construct a functional ceiling to floor bookcase from 10" wide pine.

Q. We have an off center window that seems to defy my decorating attempts. What can I do?

A. Watch wallcovering and Roman shades to hide that problem window.

Q. Our coat closet does double duty as a broom closet. It's always crowded. Where can I put everything?

A. Bring those coats out of hiding and use a decorative hall tree to create order out of chaos.

Q. When we entertain, we can expect the extra cigarette smoke to trip our smoke detector alarm. The same thing happens when I use the broiler.
A. Since you know in advance what causes the alarm to sound, simply cover the detector with a shower cap. Remember to remove it.

Q. Some of my wall hangings, paintings and favorite objects don't seem to accent my home like they used to. I don't want to go to great expense to revitalize my accessories. Is there something I can do?

A. Yes! Your favorite pieces have probably been in the same location for a long time. You don't notice them anymore. Try rearranging some things and put others away for awhile to spruce up your decor.

Energy Update

Housing experts believe that the time is near when an official record of a home's "use of energy" will be one of the title papers recorded when a home is sold.

Meanwhile, manufacturers work to produce new and more effective insulating products and energy-saving methods as residents bone up on topics taught in college economics and physics classes.

Consumers have some clues as to heat loss... high utility bills, no snow on the roof, miscellaneous drafts, tiny holes where pests come in. Proper insulation and weather-proofing not only provide heat-loss resistance during the winter heating season, but also save electricity while cooling in summer. Attic insulation alone can save $25-60 per summer in cooling energy costs; even more during heating season.

Taking the idea from industry, where awareness of the importance of heat loss jumps out from the profit and loss statement, offers are being made to homeowners to participate in "thermal scanning."

Aerial surveys making infra-red photographs over cities when the night sky is clear, temperatures below 35°F, and roofs free of snow can clearly show energy losses where house insulation is either inadequate or improperly installed.

Thermograms interpreted by experts show home sidewalls that leak heat and warm the ground outside, as well as heat apparently seeping through insulation faults in the attic floor and collecting under the attic ridge.

The heat sensitive pictures can also pinpoint areas of wet insulation not providing proper service. Insulation operates on the principle that air spaces inside keep heat from conducting. Water is a good conductor of heat so when air spaces are filled with water or moisture, heat passes through handily.

Common causes of wet insulation include the lack of a vapor barrier on the living quarters side of attic floor insulation so the home's humidity is not contained and the blocking of vents in eaves or crawlspaces. Sometimes attic vents, designed to ventilate for moisture control, are blocked by improperly-placed insulation.

Insulation is rated by R-value, a comparative factor showing one product's ability to stop heat flow as compared with another. By definition, even draperies and parasols and over-matts have R-values.

What puzzles most consumers is that the stacking up of insulation causes R-values to be additive; if one has an R-value of 10, then an identical one on top of that makes them R-20. But an oversupply of insulation will not provide a proportionate increase in energy savings for the money spent! The sure of energy thrift is to make sure that the initial cost of a system will repay you in present and future savings.

In order to decide on the advantage of using solar instead of other fuel in a residence, one must figure:

- The cost of fuel energy that solar replaces or supplements.
- The "previous fuel used in the manufacture of the materials used to build the solar unit!"

Questions about solar technology are nearly as thought-provoking as the answers:

- What new tax credits are on the horizon to make a solar switch more attractive from a financial point of view?
- What solar techniques will be franchised?
- Who will ride herd on industry's fringes as Mr. and Ms. Public are given solar education by actual and pretending experts in the field?
- How will building codes and permits be handled?

"You would need an electrical permit for work on the pumps and solenoids of a solar hot water heater," says a building inspector in a city of 100,000, "and a plumbing permit for the water part of it."

And if you were adding solar collectors to the roof, I'm sure that would have to be checked for strength so you would need a building permit. But," he admits, "we've had no requests for permits yet!"

A free catalog listing more than 50 films, 45 sets of solar slides, and 30 videotapes about solar heating and cooling may be requested from the National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center by writing Solar Heating, Dept. M, P.O. Box 1607, Rockville, MD 20850, or by calling their toll-free number.

From informational to technical, many of the solar films may be borrowed from the center at no charge.

Energy options in various stages of perfection include: SOLAR POWER—proposed orbiting satellites twice the weight of battle-or after 10 P.M. You won't be using less energy, but you'll be using it when Vepco has power to spare. And that will reduce the need to build costly power plants.

DO YOUR BIG ELECTRIC JOBS EARLY. OR LATE.

You can also take these two big energy-saving steps. First, set your home air conditioning at 78° or higher, or not more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside. Second, don't overwork your water heater. Use the dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads, and wash clothes in cool water instead of hot.

By following these tips, you'll be keeping your power bills down, and helping us all make it through the summer without power shortages.

The weekday hours between 10 A.M. and 10 P.M. are the "peak load" hours for Vepco, when the most electricity is being used by our customers and the chance of shortages is greatest.

ships sending solar energy to us via microwaves. Fifty, it is said, could solve this country's energy demand by the year 2000.

Problem: Would conservationists like a superhighway in the sky?

NUCLEAR FISSION—the splitting of an element into new elements plus tremendous energy.

Problem: Safety is based on the assumption that those in control are in control.

THERMONUCLEAR FUSION—the fusing of elements such as "heavy hydrogen" in the method used by the sun in generation of its powerful energy. One gram of fuel extracted from two gallons of seawater could provide the energy of 700 gallons of gasoline.

LASER FUSION—bursts of laser beams implode the core of a fuel pellet to produce an inexhaustible supply of energy. Uses power instead of heat in the thermonuclear fusion.

Problem: Is controlling the conversion of matter's form too difficult for man?

FUEL CELLS—with three times the efficiency of gasoline engines, here oxygen and gas are combined to make instant pollution-free electricity.

When the time comes that fossil fuels, the gas, coal and oil providing more than 80% of America's electricity, are nearly replaced by solar energy in our everyday lives, we can expect solar energy to increase in efficiency!

Why? Because incomplete combustion of fossil fuels causes air pollution. When the air clears, we will have solved two problems.

The heart of today's home is the family room. It's where adults and youngsters kick off their shoes and relax, watch a tv movie, do homework, sew, pursue hobbies and do most of their casual entertaining. It's a multipurpose room designed to please the whole family; in other words, a decorating challenge. This is more true today than ever before. If you act now, you can make your family room the most comfortable and aesthetically pleasing room of your home. And once it's finished, you won't even care how cold and snowy it is outside.

No matter what the decor, a family room should be comfortable and fun for everyone. You must decide what you want and plan carefully to fill your specific needs. No one else knows your family's interests and habits as well as you. Analyze the work, play and recreational patterns of your family. Plan on paper first and inventory furnishings and storage space. This advance planning will stretch your budget and help assure that your money is well spent.

There are a variety of ways to create an attractive family room. The easiest on the budget is to adjust space or convert already enclosed areas such as basements, attics or porches. The most exciting results are obtained by building onto your home.

For houses built before family rooms became popular the separate dining room is often the hub of family activities and entertaining. The dining table doubles as desk, hobby center and sewing nook. Why not create a family room by rearranging furniture and adding a couple of comfortable chairs, a reading lamp and the television set.

Perhaps a spare bedroom can do double duty as a frequently used family room and occasional guest room.

Another way to adjust space is to sectionalize an L-shaped living-dining room into a quiet corner for adults with room closest to the dining area for children.

A basement, attic or porch conversion can bring a dramatic transformation to your living space. After accommodating insulation, wiring and flooring needs, the decorating possibilities are enormous.

When approaching an addition to your house, you're fortunate if the space you need can be added where you need it. However, all is not lost if yours isn't the ideal. Consider adding a living room to the front of a house on a narrow lot and converting the old living room into your family room. The best location for your addition is adjacent to the kitchen. Good food makes for good entertaining... and the kitchen location is convenient for the host or hostess.

Now you're ready to face the decorating challenge posed by one room for your family's varied interests. One decorating guide sums it up very well: "a family room should have materials dressy enough for company yet durable enough for daily use." The keys are comfortable, easy to maintain furniture, fun colors and flexibility.

The style may be formal or informal, but the family room can be an exciting change of decorating pace. Use color boldly after considering all adjacent rooms, room size and color of exterior rooms. Furniture must be close to indestructible. Select pieces that pull out, fold down and increase storage space.

Getting Ready for Winter

Before the cold north winds start howling around the corners of your house, make sure you... and your home are ready for winter. Here's a handy checklist you'll want to keep with you... checking off each chore as it's finished. In no time at all, you'll be ready for the blustery season ahead.

OUTSIDE

- Drain garden hoses and shut off outside water supply.
- Check downspouts and make sure they are directing the water away from the house. If there are any cracks, caulk and seal.

— Clean gutters removing all twigs and leaves.

— Cover window air conditioners with heavy-duty plastic or, if possible, remove them from the windows, making sure to close the windows tightly. Seal if necessary.

— Plastic storm windows keep out a lot of cold air. Put them up if your home doesn't have regular storm windows. And, recaulk around windows if necessary.

— Take a window tour and note which windows are cracked. These should be replaced to avoid heat leakage.

— Store lawn furniture and cover with plastic to protect finishes.

— Bring plants in before the first frost. Geraniums can be stored all winter in the garage or basement. Cut them back and water every 4-6 weeks.

— Cover rose bushes with mulch or rose cones.

— Clean vines, etc. out of garden and turn over soil so you'll have a head start for next year's efforts.

— Clean and store all garden tools.

— Drain oil and gas from the lawn mower and cover with plastic.

— Then check the snow blower to make sure it's ready to help when the snows come.

INSIDE

— Clean registers and cold air returns. Make sure the cold air returns are not blocked by furniture which will impede the proper circulation of air throughout the house.

— Furnace filters should be cleaned and replaced if necessary. Have the furnace checked by a professional at least every other year.

— If you have hot water heat, a quick check of the boiler and the asbestos insulation should reveal any cracks or leaks. Repair before the boiler is used.

— A call to your local fuel supplier will make sure you have sufficient bottled gas or coal on hand.

— Close attic fans.

— Get a supply of de-icer before the ice and snow start.

The Financial Pros of Home Ownership

The single-family home has always been basic to the American dream. Despite today's skyrocketing costs, this national family goal shows no sign of slipping. On the contrary, families make more sacrifices and commit a larger portion of their income than ever before to owning a home. Two out of five home buyers spend more than the recommended 25% of their income for housing and almost half of these same buyers are depending on two incomes to make ends meet. Yet even a cursory look at the financial advantages of home ownership clearly shows the gains to be made from this struggle.

Most people rightfully argue that the same home longed for as a symbol of security and success is also the best hedge against inflation that in turn makes home ownership a difficult goal. Today the value of most homes is appreciating at a rate even faster than inflation.

Homes and mortgages go hand in hand. Technically the mortgage is the lender's right to your property if you default on the note or loan used to purchase it. Most of us, however, think of the mortgage as the amount borrowed plus the interest rate we agreed to pay for this credit. Today

Home Equity Loan Way To Fund Improvements

Considering home improvements this year but unsure how you'll finance them?

One way many smart homeowners are coming up with the cash for new siding, insulation, a remodeled kitchen or a room addition is to tap the growing equity in their home created by inflation.

The difference between what you owe and the present value of your home is likely a sizeable nest egg which represents impressive borrowing power.

METER TAMPERING

When someone steals electricity they are not only stealing from the local utility, but they are stealing from you, too. Just as shoplifting adds to the cost of goods you purchase in a store, power theft adds to the cost you pay for electricity, and this means higher electric bills for all customers.

If you know of anyone involved with meter tampering, bring it to the attention of your local electric utility company. More importantly, tampering with an electric meter can result in property damage, serious injury — even death.

interest rates of 10% or better on conventional savings and loan mortgages are common. Federally regulated interest on FHA (Federal Housing Authority) insured loans and VA (Veterans Administration) guaranteed loans is not much less. Interest rates are significant because they determine how many actual dollars the buyer pays over the twenty or thirty year term of the mortgage. For families who move before the mortgage term is up this becomes less important. And, of course, the larger your down payment, the smaller the sum borrowed that you are paying interest on. Perhaps also somewhat discouraging is the expectation that interest rates will continue to climb. This makes the initial cost of a home and the monthly payments higher.

There is some hope. The high cost of homes and mortgages has forced banks and other lending institutions to consider alternate styles of mortgages. Variable rate mortgages, now available in California, have interest charges which fluctuate with the economy. Another new option is the graduated payment loan whose payments start below those on a conventional loan for the same amount but gradually climb over the next ten years. This is designed for families with growing incomes. Still other options include community sponsored loans to encourage young and less affluent buyers and special funds for urban renewal in old neighborhoods. It's smart to shop extensively for loans, interest rates and even closing costs. It can mean the difference between saving and spending a lot of money.

Once you have purchased a home, the financial favor shifts to your side. Home ownership qualifies families for substantial income tax deductions.

Annual property taxes as well as all of the interest paid on home mortgages are deductible. The resultant savings on your income taxes helps to offset today's high interest rates. For example, a family in a 30% tax bracket hold a mortgage with a 10% interest rate on their home. However, figured with the savings in taxes to the IRS, the 10% rate becomes 7%.

The real estate gain that continues to keep pace with and even surpass inflation is equity. Equity is the difference between your mortgage balance and the current market value of your home. Today it can add up to phenomenal financial gain. Inflation has sent all housing costs soaring up twelve to fifteen per cent a year, and it's not unusual for a house bought in 1971 for $40,000 to be sold now for $90,000. Once a family enters the housing market with even the most modest purchase, their housing dollars begin to multiply on their own.

The financial gain that equity represents offers several alternatives. First, of course, the home owner can maintain the status quo, enjoy his home and allow that equity to build toward a distant goal, like retirement. Or, the home owner can sell his property and reinvest all or some of his equity in a more expensive property that offers more potential gain. Still another growing trend is for home owners to refinance and cash in on their equity.

Gutter Maintenance

Defective guttering discovered during a seasonal inspection may be covered by warranty.

One brand of white enameled aluminum guttering will be replaced the first year if the finish blisters, peels, chips or cracks. And for the following 14 years, this product and its professional installation are in warranty at a pro-rated basis. The warranty may be passed along to the next resident of the house.

Fall check-up includes cleaning out debris, sealing aluminum joints or soldering steel and checking nails for rust. Paint, priming galvanized units if needed. Hangers, located every 24 inches, should be adjusted for proper fit and slope.

Do not use aluminum gutter guards with steel gutters; there is a vinyl product available which works better.

Improper roof drainage may be caused by too few downspouts. Formula to determine the proper number is 1-square inch of downspout cross-sectional area per 100 sq. ft. of roof surface. In areas with severe weather, note that the design of corrugated-style pipe allows expansion with less chance of splitting when trapped water freezes.

Special wire baskets at the opening of each outlet keeps leaves and tennis balls from going down, and spash-blocks or tiles at the other end save trouble at foundation-level.

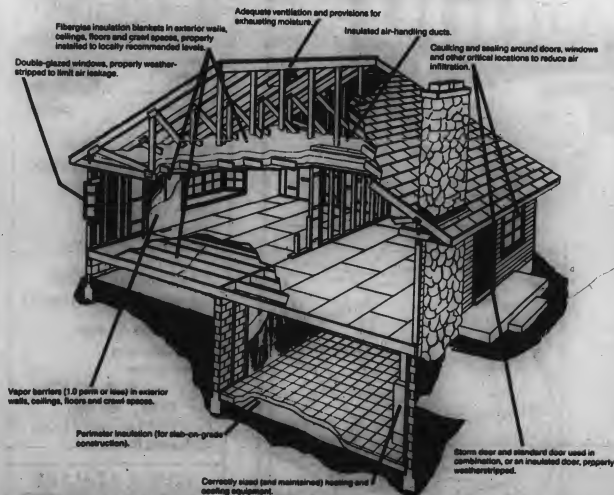

To see if gutters are properly positioned, place a yardstick down the roof slope to make sure that the outside edge of the gutter is below the yardstick.

Rain runoff simply falls into the gutter, but sliding snow becomes wedged across a too-high gutter. The resulting "ice dam" makes moisture back up under shingles and through the roof.

For houses under construction, one manufacturer now offers a membrane shield for use as an underlayment along a six-foot edge of roof to prevent ice dam damage.

Serving a similar purpose on established roofs is a heating cable in 25-foot sections. Five units plug together and connect to a 6-foot power supply cord. The cable is mounted by special clips in zigzag fashion, allowing three feet of cable per foot of roof edge. Pretest the cable prior to installation.

The 60 Minute Home Energy Efficiency Check-up — One 'Audit' That Can Save You Money

A 60 minute audit of your home's energy efficiency will quickly reveal whether your fuel bills are higher than they need to be. Using the above illustration as a guide, start from the attic and work your way down to the basement, making note of the areas that need improvement.

Chances are good that your home's annual heating and cooling costs are a lot higher than they need to be.

Care to find out how much higher? Take an hour to audit your home's energy efficiency.

You may be surprised at the amount of fuel and money you are wasting — fuel and money could save, simply by installing such readily available home improvements as building insulation, storm doors and windows, and caulking and weatherstripping.

To begin diagnosing your home's savings potential, you'll need the following tools: a flashlight, a ruler and a screwdriver. You might also want to take along a pad and pencil to keep a record of whatever savings opportunities you discover, and the improvements needed to take advantage of those opportunities.

Load Management Is Energy Conservation

According to Edison Electric Institute, load management is an energy conservation concept that can appeal to everyone. It's not new to be sure. In fact, the technology has been practiced for years and greatly developed and refined by European nations. The time has come, however, to consider the broad scale application of load management technology right here in the United States. The only thing new about load management is that in the U.S. it is probably the first energy conservation program to come along which offers attractive benefits for everyone.

Until recent years, electric power was cheap, and as long as the supply could keep pace with the maximum demand at any one time, everyone was happy. Fuel was cheap and real estate and building costs had not yet begun to climb out of sight. So as the demand for more power increased, the solution was simple...build more plants.

Now, however, inflation has pushed electric utility costs up against the wall. Spiraling building and real estate costs make it more difficult to justify building additional generating facilities to keep pace with the growing maximum demand for power. And higher fuel costs and limited resources, along with higher operating expenses, have in turn pushed up consumer rates. That's why more and more utilities are turning to load management for an answer. Load management, as the name implies, refers to some of the methods a utility can employ to control or shift the periods of peak electrical demand. Let's see how.

Capacity requirements for utility companies, and hence their capital needs, are proportionate to the maximum power output required at any given time — peak demand. They need sufficient generating capacity to meet this peak demand, even if some of the generating units stand idle the rest of the time. Thus, by controlling the demand itself or by shifting it to a period of lighter overall load, the utility is still able to supply the total power requirements of its customers, with some attractive side benefits also possible. These secondary benefits include reduced fuel requirements due to more use of most efficient generating equipment and a reduced need for system expansion.

That's how load management can keep everyone satisfied. Consumers can save on their electric bills by deferring their energy use to off-peak hours. Utility companies are happy because load shifting allows them to balance plant utilization for maximum operating efficiency. Even environmental and consumer groups can relax because construction of new installations can be deferred as still there will be enough power to supply everyone's needs.

Can the Dream of a New Home Become Reality?

In 1978 the rate of marriages increased for the first time in six years. The next few years will see these young couples pursuing the American dream of home ownership in an increasingly inflationary housing market. Every few months prices leap upward. Inflation follows closely taking a bigger tax bite out of salary increases. It seems like the faster you go the "behind" you get.

Average new home prices in mid-1979 were in the $60,000 range. By the early 1980's this average is expected to rise close to $78,000. In spite of this financial experts are advising first-time buyers to take the plunge... cautiously. Be sure you're getting a true value and plan to occupy that home for a long time, the experts say.

How much of your hard earned savings should you use for a downpayment? Put down as much money as is feasible for you. The more you pay down, the lower interest costs over the years and the lower overall cost of the loan. It will be easier for you to obtain a loan with more favorable interest terms with a larger downpayment. The more you pay down, the lower your monthly mortgage payment. You'll also acquire greater equity with a larger downpayment.

To acquire that initial downpayment, some economists advise borrowing from relatives, cashing in your U.S. Savings Bonds, borrowing on your life insurance, selling the second car or getting a second job. These are the same advisers who recommend buying a house you can barely afford.

At first housing costs will take a huge chunk of your income, but that percentage will shrink as inflation pushes up your salary.

Lending institutions recognize the problems of those wanting to enter the housing market and have developed new lending requirements. One type of mortgage receiving much publicity is the graduated payment mortgage (GPM). Large builders across the country are finding more buyers opting for this type of mortgage which allows lower than normal payments the first five years of ownership and higher payments beginning in the sixth year as the family income rises.

While some building is expected to slow down throughout 1979, buyers need not fear the disastrous results of 1974-75. Builders have kept sales more closely tied with starts to prevent a glut of unsold homes and federal financing agencies that support the industry by buying up mortgages have stepped up activity. Through financial planning, alternate mortgage loans and industry responsiveness, the 18 million households in the 25-to-35 age group will continue to realize their dream of home ownership.

Fall Gardening Formula

Lush lawns, sturdy shrubs and freely-flowering plants get their growing good looks next Spring from the gardener's careful attentions this autumn. More than at any other season, your garden-care deserves the attentions of its annual Fall sprucing-up to preserve it throughout the unpredictable ravages of the winter ahead, as well as preparing it for the first growth and bloom of Spring. Now is the time to mulch, feed, water and rake. If the crisp cool air and crunch of leaves are insufficient to lure you to the autumnal outdoors, consider the prospective pleasures of a cleaner and healthier garden than ever, green and blooming with the first crocus and daffodils next Spring.

Start your Fall gardening plan with the basics underfoot. Now is the ideal time to seed and feed your lawn to thicken-up sparse areas, fill in bald spots and generally do your best to get that green carpet in shape. Begin by thoroughly raking your lawn to clean up leaves, clippings and thatch. If the grass seems especially matted, and/or messy, consider renting a power rake from your garden center to help you do a thorough job. After raking, level off any low spots that may collect water or prove hazardous underfoot. Simply cut and roll back the sod, add soil to make the ground level, then replace the sod. Now your lawn is ready for a layer of seed-starting fertilizer and then grass seed. You'll get the best, most even results by using a seed spreader. Broadcast spreading by hand inevitably leads to a crazy-quilt look of lush and sparse grass. Many lawn and garden centers offer the free use of a spreader when you purchase seed or fertilizer from them. Study seed and fertilizer packages carefully. Buying the best quality and correct products for your needs almost always pays off with the best results for all of your labors. Since autumn is such a dry season, continue to lightly water your newly seeded lawn daily until the new grass is 2" tall. Enjoy your results! A little lawn, care results in almost instant rewards — don't be surprised if you see green and healthy new growth in just a few days.

Research any proposed new plantings carefully. When choosing bushes and trees, consider their eventual size, hardiness and upkeep and decide between deciduous or evergreen varieties. Deciduous shrubs are generally faster growing and ideal for autumn privacy screens since they fill in quickly. Many also offer a bonus of profuse flowers in Spring or Summer. Since, however, they lose their leaves each Fall, their privacy potential is less during cold months and they require some clean-up. Evergreens may be broadleaf like azaleas,

LANDSCAPE CONSULTATION

Please drop by to stop, to bring us a picture or a sketch with some dimensions. We shall call within 24 hours to let you which plants would be most desirable and show you the quality and different sizes we have available on the premises.

LARGE LANDSCAPE SIZE PLANTS-BULBS-SHUBS

holly, firethorn and such or narrow-leaf junipers, yews, pines and so on. Broadleaf evergreens make showy specimens but generally are not hardy in colder regions. Check with your local nurseryman. Plants that require winter protection or a sheltered location may not suit your needs. Narrow-leaf evergreens may be as low and trailing as a ground cover or grow taller than a two-story home. Consider your use and location carefully and consult your nurseryman before choosing plants. You can plant bushes even in late autumn. Just be sure they are well-watered and protected from drying winds and sun. Mulching the bases of new bushes also helps to protect delicate root systems and retain water.

Trees also offer a wide variety of size and shape, flowers and fruit, even the density of their shade and resistance to weather and disease. Some like redbud and flowering crab make handsome accents in front of your home. Others like dogwood or birch are ideal to plant in clumps and create your own plant grove. Or, you may prefer an old, shady favorite like maple. Whatever your preference, get the advice of your local nursery to ensure success. But by all means, use trees in your landscaping plan. They are, in fact, the center around which your other shrubs and plantings must fit and therefore basic to any good garden plan. Like bushes, you can safely plant trees in autumn but they must be staked, mulched and deeply watered to assure a healthy start.

Use the same protection pointers for established shrubs and trees. Mulch the bases with leaves or straw. Stake deciduous trees with cord — never wire — to protect them from wind and wrap tender trunks to prevent bark damage from sun or insects. Water all shrubs and trees deeply and often until the ground freezes. This allows them to store up moisture for the months ahead. Where weather is extreme or plants are especially tender, set up a canvas screen for added protection. You can do this easily by stapling fabric to stakes around your plant. Never wrap the shrub itself since that inhibits air circulation and can smother your plant.

Autumn is also the time to plan ahead for next Spring's first blooms. Nothing is as exciting for even the occasional gardener as the first crocus or jonquil, followed triumphantly by hyacinths, tulips and lilies. Since these hardy bulbs must be planted in the Fall, you must take time now to clear a planting area and plan for that first show of color. For best effect, plant bulbs in clusters of at least six to eight plants or more and stick to one variety and color in each cluster. For the longest show of color, choose several varieties of crocus, hyacinth, jonquil and tulip and enjoy successive bursts of bloom next Spring. Roses require autumn attention and protection against winter storms, but they are well worth this effort since they offer you a long and lovely blooming season in return. Begin Fall rose care in October, after the last bloom. Trim back rose canes to about 2½ feet and tie to protect them from the wind. Next, mound soil over the base of the plant to a depth of about 10". Top that mound with a straw mulch. In areas where winter temperatures dip below minus 10° F, top each plant with a plastic cone (available at lawn and garden centers) or a box for added protection. Just be sure to weight the top of your cover so the first gust of winter wind doesn't carry it away.

Once you have completed your Fall planting and taken care of watering and protecting new and existing plants, you can complete your garden clean-up. Perhaps the largest chore any gardener faces is raking up the seemingly endless sea of leaves that annually engulfs most yards. Of course, you may have already used many of the leaves as a mulch for your shrubs and garden beds. Rake up the remainder to layer into your compost pile or better yet, use a mulcher or shredder first. If leaves are a major problem in your yard and garden you may want to buy or rent a power vacuum or use the appropriate attachment on your garden tractor. Just be sure that you don't leave a bed of leaves on the grass. Winter snow and rain can mat them down and leave you with browned-out areas next Spring.

While you are enjoying the last, crisp days of autumn and finishing the Fall garden clean-up, don't neglect all of the faithful garden tools and gadgets that have been making your outdoor life easier all summer. A little attention and preventive medicine now means they'll be ready to work again with the first warmth of Spring. Besides the end-of-the-year cleaning and tuning you give your large tools like lawn and garden tractor, smaller tools also deserve your attention. Both the garden sprayer and lawn spreader need to be completely cleaned of any chemical residue, dried and oiled before storage. Hand tools also need careful cleaning to rid them of dirt and rust. Oil rubbed on all metal parts will help prevent rusting while the tools are stored. Don't forget, too, to drain and disconnect your garden hose and store it indoors to prevent freezing or deteriorating. Storing it in a figure eight will also discourage kinks. One last chore should always be to round up any insecticides, fertilizers, seeds and so on.

Bringing the Green Indoors

If you are like most happy gardeners who find their own bit of heaven in the green and leafy world, the end of the outdoor gardening season is a disappointment that can only be tempered by a lush and blooming indoor jungle. Or you may have a purple thumb and would just like to have a few pots of greenery to help fight the winter doldrums. Whether you are an avid green thumb, an occasional gardener or less, fall is the perfect season to spend a little extra time and attention on your household collection.

Since so many houseplants spend the summer on sun-porches, patios and the like, start your indoor gardening by moving this greenery inside. Despite the fact that many plants stay green until the first frosts, houseplants simply are not that tough. Bring them in when night-time temperatures dip as low as 50°F. This gives them time to adjust to their new climate before the furnace starts running and drying out the inside air.

The big move back indoors will also be easier if you plan ahead. Besides sparing you a last minute trip in the dark in robe and slippers, you will be much less likely to forget any plants and can also reserve some space for them inside. Your plants have undoubtedly grown large and lush in the outdoors and will often need re-potting. Everything should be checked for bugs — one real hazard of the great outdoors — washed down, sprayed with insecticide and isolated from other house-bound plants for several days. And keep checking to ward off any insect invasions.

In their annual autumn haste to bring in the tenderest plants, many gardeners tend to overlook a lot of plants thought of primarily as outdoor growers when, in fact, they can be real scene-stealers inside too. And, of course, it's a great way to winter over old favorites and have a head start on next spring. Geraniums can handle life indoors as can fuschias, lantana and agapanthus. Don't expect a lot of bloom but do enjoy their varied foliage.

Perhaps the greatest hazard to indoor gardening is dry air, even more of a problem when furnaces and fireplaces are used once again. A humidifier is ideal. You can also set plants in saucers with pebbles and water added as necessary. Misting with a spray bottle is also helpful. You will have to do all of this to keep finicky ferns happy. Other plants like Swedish ivy, philodendron, dracaena and many palms aren't nearly as fussy as long as they are properly watered. Schefflers are terrific inside, just watch for spider mites.

If you really long for some blooms, African Violets are much easier than you think. Begonias are lovely but also somewhat fussier than violets. Some basket types like ivy geranium and Tahitian bridal veil are good growers and bloomers.

If you love your vegetable garden as much as your other greenery and blooming plants, you can grow some savory herbs inside to snip and add to winter soups and salads. Herbs have an added bonus of delightful, garden-like aroma. Their variant colors and leaf patterns make a lovely garden tableau in your kitchen.

Now, if you still don't feel that you have enough of a garden inside, you can pot up tulips, crocus, daffodils and such now for forced winter bloom later.

Protect with Paints and Stains

Today's energy conscious homeowner should be aware of a new type of paint designed to help keep heat and moisture inside where it's needed and to protect interior and exterior paint as well. This latex vapor barrier goes on like paint to help insulation become more effective.

With the last Spring thaw many of us saw wet siding with blistering and peeling paint. Some of us may have even suffered stained or sagging ceilings. This moisture looks like an exterior defect in siding or roofing, but is usually caused by moisture from inside trapped and frozen within exterior walls. Every home has moisture from bathroom, laundry, dishwashing and cooking, which in the proper proportion contributes to your family's health. In winter's drastic temperatures the right balance becomes upset and can result in damage. An effective latex vapor barrier guards against exterior paint failure and related damage.

This fast drying vapor barrier may be used over previously painted surface or as a primer for wallboard or plaster. One a contractor primed all interior walls of his own new home for extra protection. Brush, roll or spray it just like a latex wall paint. Top coat with alkyd or latex interior paint or enamel.

Paint is the most practical and economical way to install a continuous vapor barrier that works. It is not subject to breaks around electrical outlets or plumbing like other materials. Of course, it gives direct protection to plaster or dry wall while permitting decorating freedom.

When buying insulating latex vapor barrier, as with any paint or stain, check the label guarantee. Use a dealer who works with professional painters. He'll have the latest product developments and know how they perform. Most professional painters choose a brand for easy application and satisfactory results. Price is a secondary factor. Let that be your guide, too. If time and money are at a premium, begin warming your home with paint one room at a time.

STAIN FACTS

Another way to eliminate exterior cracking, peeling or blistering is to use stain instead of paint. Stains soaking into the wood plus natural weathering mellows the color to a rustic low maintenance finish.

There are traditional oil base stains in rich pigments designed to hide the previous color and grain in only one coat. Newer acrylic latex stains provide the same easy water clean up and durability associated with latex products. Some colors of acrylic latex stains appear better on woods that don't "bleed" like redwood and cedar. Your dealer can assist you in selecting the appropriate color and stain. Versatile stains can be used on rough and smooth siding, shakes, shingles, fascia and soffits.

For the beauty of natural wood semi-transparent stain is the very best finish. The wood's natural beauty is enhanced by colorful accents along the grain and texture. Protect and beautify new wood, rough or smooth siding, decks, fences and outdoor furniture with semi-transparent stain. Bring stain indoors to give a rustic touch to unfinished interior paneling, beams and wood ceilings.

INSIDE STORY

There are interior coverings for almost any surface. A variety of paints cover interior surfaces ranging from wall board to brick.

One of the more popular finish coats is textured paint. This covering can add a custom plaster look to your ordinary wallboard. Most are easily applied with a roller or brush and come in a selection of attractive colors. For old or new walls textured paint can cover cracks or flaws. It is especially formulated to retain brightness and texturing while drying out. Most brands permit you to create your own texture design and add architectural interest.

Applying paint or stain is actually the easiest part of your home decorating project. The surface preparation is the burden of your labor and it pays off in the quality of results. Another important aspect is color selection. The dozens of paint and stain color choices can be overwhelming. Consult decorating magazines and books for a variety of creative ideas that allow you to really express yourself.

Safety at Home

Safety first. The sensible slogan we learn as school children is equally important today. In fact it has a two-fold meaning for home-owners. First, of course, it's imperative to consider safety while you are tackling major or even minor home improvements. And when you are busy remodeling, plan also on incorporating additional safety features appropriate to your project.

Working safely means common sense as well as taking extra care: • Before you begin working, be sure power and hand tools are in good shape. Frayed electrical cords are hazardous, and dull edges do more harm than sharp ones.

• Use safety glasses to protect your eyes from fragments of sawdust, wood and metal chips and such.

• Always read all instructions for the proper use of tools, materials and chemicals. Even if you have used these items many times before, take time to refresh your memory. Sometimes carelessness with familiar equipment can lead to serious mishaps.

• Buy, borrow or rent the right equipment. The cost of a day's rental on the correct ladder is much less than months of mending after a fall from a flimsy perch.

• All chemicals — liquids like paint, turpentine, cleaning solvent, and dry ones like fertilizer and lye — merit special care. When using them, strictly forbid children and pets from the area and use them in good ventilation to avoid inhaling fumes. Store them in sealed containers and locked away from children.

• Always keep a fully-equipped First Aid kit and the number of your Poison Control Center handy so you won't fumble for help if you need it.

You can also make safety first a permanent policy by incorporating these ideas and more:

• Smoke alarms are a proven success and relatively inexpensive and easy to install. Most experts advise one on each floor of your home.

• Plan emergency exit routes in case of fire and have your family practice them. Compact rope ladders are ideal to provide an exit route from an otherwise inaccessible area.

• Lighting indoors and out helps to prevent falls and discourage prowlers. Be sure all electrical service meets safety and code standards.

It's fall again. The last leaves have been raked and the yard work is finished for another year. The storm windows are up. The wood is stacked outside the door for those cozy winter fires! What? No fireplace? Just one of the many things this house didn't have and one of the reasons you're thinking of moving in the spring. Well, put those winter months on your side as long as you're going to spend so many hours inside. Why move? Instead, improve. And, add that fireplace. Visit your local fireplace shop and ask them to show you the latest ideas in decorative as well as functional fireplaces. They usually carry everything from electric free-standing fireplaces to replicas of Franklin stoves. And, the addition of a fireplace will increase the value of your home.

What about beamed ceilings or exposed rafters? Anything is possible nowadays with a little imagination and the right advice. Dropping a ceiling or replastering can change the visual dimensions of a room, cut heating costs and even become a decorating focal point if you use recessed lighting, patterned ceiling tiles or panels or textured plaster. You can get some good ideas by talking with your local light fixture dealer and lumber yard.

Think about paneling, too. To match or contrast, or enhance the beams you are adding, or to complement other natural wood finishes in your room. Paneling eliminates painting walls every few years, too.

Perhaps a change in the floor is just what the home improvement doctor ordered for your problem room. Investigate the possibility of putting down a hardwood floor instead of vinyl or carpeting. Again, a lumber dealer will have constructive comments for you.

Perhaps you need hanging storage space. Enclosing a two-foot deep space across the entire end of a room could be the answer. And built-in drawers and/or shelving inside the closet itself will give you even more storage.

Exposed stairways are a marvelous unused storage area. The understair section is a perfect place for rows of shelves, one corresponding to each step. Tuck a comfortable chair or a small desk and chair in the alcove and you've a private library or study nook.

Eliminating a wall to make two small rooms into one large one, changing the size of a window or moving a doorway are three ways to add additional space without actually increasing the square footage of living space. You aren't adding more feet, just recycling the old area. So, don't forget to consider these among the many alternatives open to you for this winter's "new look at home" projects.

Because many changes will also increase the value of your home and add to your enjoyment of it, let's deal with specific rooms: kitchens and bathrooms. We spend a lot of time in these two rooms and the more functional, the more organized and the more attractive, the better. Kitchens, especially, can become outdated. One reason a kitchen is remodeled is to bring it up to date.

The organization of a kitchen is important to consider when you begin to remodel or improve. Decide what is wrong with your kitchen and what you want to have when you are finished and take these ideas with you to a kitchen planning specialist. Frequently, cabinet makers can advise you of do's and don'ts of kitchen building. Another good source of information is again, the home improvement section of department and discount stores. And, because you are actually building a kitchen, you need to know things like traffic patterns, how high you want the cabinets to be, one sink or two, how deep the enclosed storage needs to be. What about a pantry? Exposed shelves or ones with doors? Glass or wood?

Bathrooms can be fun. Especially when they are bright and cheerful and easy to care for. Splashes of wallpaper — now heavy vinyl and quick to clean — can increase the visual size of the room or decrease it, depending on the pattern you choose. Even the new shelving you're going to install can become a part of the pattern of the wallpaper if the shelves are placed properly.

Easy-to-install tubs are now manufactured in tub-shower units that won't rust or chip. Storage areas for soap, towels, shampoo, etc. are built right into the design of these modular units. And, if many people use one bathroom, consider the installation of a double sink with a vanity. More space at less than half the cost of two separate sink units, or the addition of another complete bathroom.

So, this fall, plan ahead and put those hours you'll be spending inside this winter to productive and profitable use. The ideas are virtually endless and, with the help from your local specialists, you could transform the house you've been only tolerating into the home you've been dreaming about.

Memoirs of a Plumbing Has-Been

Sunken tube, private spas and personal saunas aside, my husband and I have most wisely (we think) agreed to set as our plumbing goal a properly functioning basic bath trio. No more, certainly no less. This is definitely not meant to discredit the stunning advances modern technology now offers home plumbing. Rather it is the perfectly practical resolve of a pair of otherwise stalwart do-it-yourselfers who have repeatedly found bathrooms to be our remodeling Waterloo. Together we have mastered suspended ceilings, electricity, plaster, wallpaper and several hundred gallons of paint. We have, in fact, even replaced a kitchen sink and counter-top in one frenetic Saturday. And, while the vagaries of bathroom plumbing certainly do not elude us (our experience includes five toilets, two vanities and miscellaneous repairs), we have agreed to quit while we're ahead. Right now things are in good running/flushing order and we honestly feel that such a balance is far too delicate to risk by attempting any further improvements.

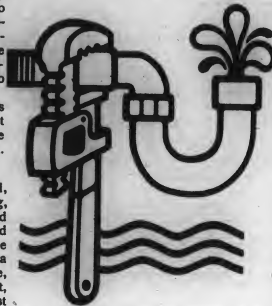

Our plumbing credentials date back to the early days of our marriage when we installed our first toilet, three times. You know what they say about doing a job until you get it right! Well, no one told us and of course we never asked, that (a) all water pipes are not standard length and must be cut to fit (return to the hardware store for help) and (b) the seal under the fixture must be replaced to prevent leaks (again, back to the hardware store). Fortunately this fixture is also simple enough to remove and correct the above problems. And since it was the only facility of its kind in the house — before our more affluent multi-bath era — there was considerable incentive to work until we had things right.

Lately, in another house, there was a fixture that simply leaked. Since it was in the so-called "guest bath" we did our best to ignore the situation.

Shortly thereafter my husband, tired of the now incessant dripping, took things in hand. But alas his hand was too strong for the poor rusted plumbing. A gadget broke off and we found ourselves drowning under a powerful indoor waterproof. Hence, two more lessons in plumbing. First, do not attempt repairs without first shutting off the water. Second, sometimes replacement is much easier than repair. At last listen and despite recurrent repair attempts, that toilet still drips a little.

But, as I said before, confidence is contagious. The bath was terrific but now the hallway looked drab so back to the paint and wallpaper swatches . . . And that's really the way things go. Old plumbers don't ever die — not even the amateurs. They just take their success and go on to the next apprenticeship like paperhanging or masonry. You know, we have a great spot for a brick barbecue . . .

Besides, the real challenge was the master bath — an amazingly botched-up arrangement with falling tiles, sagging floor and a sink so precariously mounted that it was in fact pulling the wall away from the studs. Perhaps strangest of all was the plumbing itself. Apparently the pipes led to a less-than-usual destination: one morning I stumbled in to find a fat frog idling in the toilet bowl. What may be even more amazing, my husband succeeded in promptly flushing him back to wherever.

Since this bath required more than the replacement of a leaky fixture or a new paint job to spruce things up, we began the tearing out process that always precedes a major re-do. What we didn't realize was that there would be no stopping point. First, we removed the sink and toilet (the tub was fairly new), then tile, then a layer of fiberboard the tile was applied to. Next, layers of old wallpaper began to sift down along with chunks of plaster. My husband began to chip away at other bits of loose plaster, and the next thing we knew, all of it had fallen and we were down to the lath.

Now, of course, we had a reasonably cleared shell to work with. Unfortunately, though, not large enough for two adults, a six-foot step ladder, wall board and 2x4's in assorted lengths. After several Keystone Cop-style mishaps, I was banished to the hallway to help maneuver gear in and out, find tools, you name it. We wisely decided to call in a professional plumber to move pipes into position to fit modern fixtures and install those all-important shut-off valves. That accomplished, we worked full-steam ahead, finishing up the wall-board, lowering the ceiling. I worked my own bit of magic with some yellow and white wallpaper and my husband, now really experienced at it, put the toilet and vanity in place without a hitch. Now, confidence was contagious and we tiled the tub area with ease, installed new light fixtures, medicine cabinet and towel bars. Everything looked so terrific, I really thought about throwing a party.

Wet basements

Tiny fissures, she mentions, are an "open house welcome" to her termites. "It is difficult for you to tell the difference between termite and wood-rot damage," she sighs, explaining that wood-rot is caused by a fungus, but that in both cases her little employees are only doing jobs they were assigned to do.

"Sit down and let me tell you a few facts about wet basements!" she says. "When your house was constructed, the topsoil, PURPOSELY positioned exactly where I wanted it, was moved hither and yon . . . bringing your basement closer to my underground water table — like building an ark on a lake."

"Topsoil is put there for a reason. It soaks up my rainwater. I take a very dim view of its being replaced by walks and drives!"

Another apology. "If your basement floor is damp along the wall near a concrete wall, know that earth under concrete has a difficult time expunging moisture, so sends it seeping along the edges of your basement floor."

"Later, as my fluffy soil along your foundation compacts, it allows the drive or walk to tilt and funnel more water to the foundation."

"A wet basement is an effect, not a cause. Find the cause!"

"Check the downspouts and gutters for leaks. Many basements are wet because gutter moisture moves sideways into house walls, ruining sidewall insulation on the way to the basement."

"If you have drainage pipes hose them out to be sure they are open. I can't be held responsible for every little rodent trying to build a home in a nice pipe. Connect your downspouts into pipes to carry roof runoff away from the foundation."

"Use a level to check grading. What appears to be a downhill slope may well be sloping into the basement."

"Examine your walls for loose mortar and salt deposits. The latter can be an indication that the masonry was not formulated properly."

"A frequent location of leakage is the joint where wall meets floor inside the basement. Curing concrete may shrink and pull aside, leaving a large crack to go unnoticed. The weight of the house and contents exerts great pressure on masonry seams."

She pauses, then suddenly asks "What do you know about portland cement?"

"You feel very ignorant."

"It is a powder compound," she explains patiently, "made by firing my limestone and my clay." When water is added, the cement hardens and increases in strength as it ages! Add a little color and you've the base for many waterproofing sealers and paints sold for brick, concrete, concrete block, cinder block or stucco masonry walls.

You look impressed. She pulls out a thick notebook, tears out a page offers it:

FOUNDATION MASONRY COATINGS

Lacquer base: resists soluble salts and moisture.

Latex or rubber-base: interior walls, paint "gives" without peeling.

Portland cement base: powder or premixed, two coats, some brands add tung oil or rubber compounds, never use on floor.

Varnish base: flat to gloss finish, dries quickly.

"I'm sure you will find more products for specific purposes. Don't forget that some excess moisture in basements is a humidity problem, condensation when hot and cold air meet.

"One waterproofing manufacturer recommends distinguishing between seepage and condensation by taping a foot-square piece of aluminum foil to a wall and remove it in a few days. If the wall side is wet, you have seepage. If the room side is wet, you have condensation so you ventilate, dehumidify and wrap pipes. Unfortunately, you can have seepage and condensation both at the same time."

Pointing to a large tree near the house, she comments sadly that a large number of roots were chopped off when the basement was excavated.

"A little more than pruning! You should be warned that those roots are programmed to grow back . . . and into your wall!"

"Now, do you have any original ideas about wet basements?" "Yes!" you say. "Next spring I will not pull weeds from next to the foundation because that will leave tiny wells for water to run down. Instead, I will use a chemical weed-er."

"WATCH IT!" says Mother Nature.

Efficient Home Lighting

For instance, higher wattage bulbs are generally more efficient per watt than smaller bulbs. Replacing several smaller bulbs with one larger one to light the same area, where practical, will mean a savings in energy.

It takes six 25-watt incandescent bulbs to give about the same amount of light as only one 100-watt bulb.

Conservation Is The Message

If you're serious about conserving energy and saving money, Edison Electric Institute says the first step is to learn which conservation measures will save dollars, which ones will save only pennies, and then concentrate first on the dollars. Too often, conservation efforts are limited to turning off the lights and reminding the kids to shut the refrigerator door. But lighting is only a small part of a family's total energy use and one can hardly measure the energy wasted by leaving the refrigerator door open a few extra seconds.

Various studies have concluded that 18% of the energy we consume is used to run 13 major appliances. This is compared to 42% used by the auto. Heating and cooling consume 40% or just over half of all the energy used in the home, water heater 6%, cooling 4%, refrigeration 4%.

lighting 1% and various portable appliances 3%. Note that we are talking about total energy use, not just electricity.

How can you save dollars? Take a good look at how your family uses energy and try to cut back in some areas. With continuing runaway inflation and with the country's energy problems as yet unsolved, conservation of energy can save money and preserve our fossil fuels.

Council may seek bond referendum

When and if there is another bond referendum to finance more public utilities construction, it will be close to $60 million, City Manager George L. Hanbury told City Council at an informal session of council Monday afternoon.

The citizens in 1977 approved by a vote of three to one a bond referendum for utilities of $39.9 million. Hanbury said that "we will do all the projects (earmarked for the issue) just as we told the citizens."

Actually, the city expects to do closer to $50 million worth of utility work in the city by the time the bond money is used up.

The city's five-year utilities program, Hanbury said, amounts to $49 million. Council had approved an additional $9.1 million in revenue bonds before the referendum to finance high priority projects.

The $9.1 million in bonds were never sold, however, although work to be covered by this money has been done. To save money on interest rates, Hanbury, instead of selling the revenue bonds, sold bond anticipatory notes based on the sale of bonds included in the referendum. The referendum bonds were double-barrelled bonds which carry a lower interest rate than revenue bonds.

The city may never have to sell the higher-interest $9.1 million bonds if council -- and the citizens -- approve another referendum of approximately $60 million which would include $9.1 million to replace the revenue bonds.

But whatever is decided, the work agreed to in the 1977 referendum will be done either with the $9.1 in revenue bonds or with $9.1 in double-barrelled bonds included in a new issue.

Hanbury said the council had an option of paying off the bond anticipatory notes with the higher interest $9.1 million or to wait for the cheaper double-barrelled bond issue.

Of the city's progress in getting the utilities work done, he said that they got so many projects under way "until we saturated the market and we're

Public Utilities Department controversy

'Criminal cover up' charged

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

A Public Utilities Department memo delivered anonymously to a Virginia Beach City Councilman resulted in charges of a "criminal cover up" at Monday afternoon's council meeting.

Disclosure of the memo followed a presentation by William Reil, former electrical engineer for the Utilities Department. He charged management personnel in the Utilities Department with making dishonest statements "to cover-up their own ineptness, mistakes, previous lies and mistreatment of city employees and the public."

Reil, who had been denied an opportunity to address council since his resignation on March 9, had been granted ten minutes by a previous vote of council to speak Monday.

At Reil's request and on Councilman Reid Ervin's recommendation, Reil's time to speak was extended Monday to 17 minutes by a council vote of 8-3. Voting against the extension were Councilmen George R. Ferrell and Clarence A. Holland and Mayor Patrick L. Standing.

Ferrell, who said the request was "improper," then said he did not want to hear Reil and left the council chambers. Ervin instructed the clerk that Ferrell's comments be placed on the record. Ferrell resumed his seat at 4:30 after Reil had concluded his presentation.

Eventually Reil spoke for about 20 minutes while the discussion by council and others in the council chambers extended the session to one hour and 19 minutes.

Following the Reil presentation and some discussion by council, Ervin produced a copy of a memo (interoffice correspondence) dated Dec. 11, 1978, apparently taken from the files of the Utilities Department laboratory, in which R. Michael Dunstan, a bacteriologist, noted that the City of Virginia Beach was in violation of the primary maximum contaminant level for coliform bacteria according to State Waterworks Regulations. She based her conclusion on the test results pulled during November.

Ervin said the memo was placed in his mailbox over the week-end but that he did not know who put it there. He said Ms. Dunstan did not give him the memo because he called her and she said she did not.

He said that he was so upset with it that he was ready to ask recommendations for resignations.

The memo states that Ms. Dunstan was instructed by her superior, Dennis Duffield, to include complaint samples, master meter samples, Health Department samples and inspection samples in the report identified as "other samples" to boost the total number of samples for the month, thus pulling us out of violation."

Ms. Dunstan states, "I do not feel comfortable with this action and said so to Mr. Duffield...the lines tested by inspection samples are not tapped and serve no one; I am not convinced that they should be considered part of the distribution system. I suggested that we call Mr. (Dan) Horn for a clarification of this point. (Horn is regional engineer with the State Health Department.) He was not called...My second objection is to the inclusion of only the master meter samples and inspection samples that passed. If we are going to include master meter and inspection samples, then it is only right that all of them be reported, not just the good ones...My third objection is that I think there should be some consistency to the report. Either we count master meters, et al. every month or not at all. It does not seem right to me to wait until the end of the month to decide what gets reported and what does not."

Ervin said that based on test results the city was in violation of the contaminant level and of the method of submitting samples. "To me, that's a criminal cover up." He instructed City Manager George L. Hanbury, who said that he had not seen the memo before, to look into the situation.

Hanbury said, "If there is any cause to take action, I will do so."

Mayor Patrick L. Standing said, "I still don't understand. Someone thought that you (Ervin) would be the best person to give this to?"

Ervin said he guessed so, but that it didn't matter how the memo came to light.

Hanbury said that Utilities Director Aubrey Watts "tells me that Dan Horn was familiar with the memo." Horn, a regional engineer with the Health Department, said that he knew of the events leading up to the memo but that he had never seen the memo.

"I knew about a series of bad samples. There had been a number coming up bad in the Virginia Beach system," he said that the probable reason was improper sampling techniques. The city was using Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) employees to collect samples. He said that in November of 1978, there was a problem with the water in several schools which violated the maximum contamination level. "This was brought to our attention." He said that under the State Water Work Act, it makes no difference who takes the samples. He said that the samples collected by the utilities surpassed the Health Department Standards, while others were below, so the State Health Department suggested combining the samples for an average, which is permitted by regulations. "The utility was investigated, the cause determined and the problem corrected," he said.

Ervin said, "Other samples were put in to bring the average up. If that's true, I can't go along with your interpretation of the Act."

Horn pointed out that for some reason the samples

Mayor votes against probe of personal business affairs

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

Virginia Beach Mayor Patrick L. Standing Monday afternoon voted with the majority of City Council against an investigation of his business affairs by an attorney appointed by the senior judge of the Circuit Court.

Although the motion on the investigation would have been tied and therefore would not have carried even without his vote, Standing voted "no" following a heated discussion during which insults, accusations and denials were freely exchanged by members of council.

During the earlier informal session of council, Councilman Donald Merrick attempted to bring up the subject, but was ruled out of order by Mayor Standing. "I will have that in the public session. I have absolutely nothing to hide."

"This is a public session," Merrick said.

Merrick said that he had been accused of taking the initiative in question an investigation because he wanted to be mayor. He said Monday, that he was "not doing it politically."

He said that allegations have been made in local newspapers concerning Standing's violation of certain ordinances and the Code of the City of Virginia Beach. He said that Standing was also listed as a director of a proposed bank, Dollar Savings and Loan Association of which the eight directors listed in a newspaper advertisement include "major home and commercial developers who do a substantial business in the City of Virginia Beach."

Merrick had earlier received support in his action from fellow council members F. Reid Ervin, Meyera Oberndorf, R. L. Riggs and Barbara Henley, who also voted in favor of Merrick's motion for the investigation. Voting with Standing were Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy, and Councilman Clarence A. Holland, J. Curtis Payne Jr., George R. Ferrell and John A. Baum.

Standing, according to the allegations:

- Built 24 apartment units at Lakewood Square West Apartments, two in excess of the zoning approved for the Lakewood Company owned by him.
- In 1977 when this alleged violation was first discovered, was quoted as saying, Merrick said, "that your apartment manager made a mistake and as soon as the leases expire you would correct the situation." However, in 1979, Standing was allegedly renting the 26 apartments again, Merrick said.
- In paying sewer, water and tap fees, allegedly paid for 24 apartments instead of the 26 units built plus the laundry room.
- Has been paying on the 26 units, according to city assessor's records.
- Received a permit covering 24 units plus the building for an office, storage and laundry building, not 26 units. "You were quoted in the papers as saying the 26 units were built during the original construction period," Merrick said.

In connection with the position on the Savings and Loan company, Merrick said that Standing would have problems voting on rezoning applications which may be associated with his business associates or the new bank.

Merrick said that action was needed because the allegations place the entire council in an embarrassing position. He asked that the Mayor step aside temporarily as mayor and that if he were proven "guilty" of the charges, "we would expect your permanent resignation as mayor."

Merrick suggested (and made a motion) that council ask the senior judge of the Circuit Court to appoint a special attorney to investigate the allegations. He said that the city attorney serves at the pleasure of council and therefore it might be embarrassing for him to investigate the allegations.

Merrick further said that if the charges were substantiated, they should be prosecuted.

Councilman Clarence A. Holland is also a member of the board of the Savings & Loan Association.

Councilman John A. Baum took issue with the method in which "things are brought up."

He said that Merrick said that he would rather take care of the matter this way than go through the press, but that he had talked to Gordon Dillon of the Virginia Observer.

Merrick replied that it is unfortunate in an open society that things "will get in the news before we want them to be."

Baum answered, "You seem to be alleging...what specifically are the serious charges? I agree that Pat's judgment may not have been the best...What do you feel he's guilty of?"

"I'm not sure, but I think he violated the Comprehensive Zoning Ordinance. I don't know why the city would give him a permit without paying for it."

McCoy said, "I only question your means...I don't like your letter..." The letter containing the allegations had been sent to each council member. "...I did not sign...I am not for an investigation."

Standing, who continued to preside over the session, said, "I would like to thank all those people who have called me...This is purely a political ploy to discredit me...It's hard to have my integrity questioned...Some of Gwen Stace and Ronnie Wills represented the chapter at the meeting of Tidewater City Council of Beta Sigma Phi that was held the month of October at Emmanuel Episcopal Church on Princess Anne Road. A cake was provided, decorated with "Autumn Greetings from Xi Alpha Zeta".

After the business meeting, the cultural program will be presented by Stephanie Verdin and Harriet Siff entitled "The Importance of Pre-School". A test and outline on the kindergarten program in Virginia will be given.

Taking a look at our need for power

By REV. W. LEETRUMAN

There is one thing you have in common with every other human being in Virginia Beach, — a drive which is second only to the drive for self-preservation. It is the necessity to have some influence with some other persons.

What you think, your opinions, need to have a little psychological weight with someone, somewhere. The other side of this coin is that the desire for that power can be insatiable.

Have you ever thought about what a failure is? When you move it down to its last most common denominator, it is someone who feels he has no influence with anyone.

This power is so important in life that people who can exert very little influence have to invent it. People working in dull, routine jobs can do this by making anyone fill out forms two or three times to their satisfaction. They are trying to say, "Look how important I am!"

No matter how servile a man's post is, he has to maintain his dignity and self-respect if he is going to survive.

Henry Dakes writes that if we understand this need for power, thereafter we will have a lot less trouble with the self-important people of this world. Understanding this, life's path will be smoother, easier and more enjoyable.

But there is more.

Let me put it in the words of a laboring man: "I do think I am important. I say this realizing that I am only an obscure laborer in a manufacturing plant employing 4,000 people.

"I hold down a job that thousands of other men in overalls would do just as well, possible better. I make a lower wage than the average industrial worker. Still, I say that I am important — to my family, community, church, state, and nation.

"This is because I live in a country where the individual is permitted to be important, in a democracy where my future is in my own hands. I am able to make my own decisions about my religion, politics and family life. I differ radically from my boss in religion and politics. Yet as long as I do my work properly, my job is safe.

"Though my work is commonplace today, my future is limited only by my ambition, ability and energy. I am important because many men in the world like these privileges.

"I am important because I draw a weekly pay envelope that provides food, shelter and clothing for a wife, a daughter and three sons. I am important because I am able to meet my refrigerator and furniture payments, which helps employ other laborers, clerks and businessmen.

"I pay insurance premiums that provide protection for my home and family. I pay taxes and employ my country's president, build roads, bridges, dams, and support the Army and cares for the fatherless.

"I am important because I can vote as I see best without fear of losing my job or being sent to prison. The richest man and woman can only vote once, just like me.

"Moreover, I am important because of my influence over my husky, growing sons who today all want to be preachers, and yesterday they all wanted to be firemen. Fifty years from now one could be president. What I teach them is important. Some lesson of thrift or honesty that I live before them now could show the values that I hold important. Everything then that I do or say before others and them is important. Through my children it is possible for me to be a force in the community after I am dead.

"I am important because I can think for myself and act upon my own decisions. I believe that I am a better citizen and parent because I think I am important and because I appreciate the opportunity that makes this possible."

"Even if hard labor and age cause my shoulders to droop, I shall hold my head high as long as I am a free American, conscious of my citizenship in a country that allows every individual to be important."

Thank God For Little Things.

Thank You, God, for little things that often come our way—
The things we take for granted
but don't mention when we pray—
The unexpected courtesy,
the thoughtful, kindly deed—
A hand reached out to help us in the time of sudden need—
Oh make us more aware, dear God,
of little daily graces
That come to us with "sweet surprise"
from never-dreamed-of places.

Red Lobster auction carnival nets $1275 for Children's Hospital

The Red Lobster Fund Raising/Fun Raising Day for Children's Hospital, a charity auction and carnival held here a week ago Saturday, has resulted in a $1,275 contribution to Children's Hospital of The King's Daughters, it was announced by Malcolm Teague, Red Lobster manager.

"We had set a goal of raising $1,000 for Children's Hospital," Teague said, "but we exceeded that goal by more than 25 percent. We'd like to thank the people of the Virginia Beach area for coming out, having a good time and contributing to a very worthy cause."

During the auction portion of Children's Hospital Day, more than 100 nautical memorabilia items from Red Lobster's restaurant here were sold, with all proceeds going to the support of Children's Hospital.

"When we made the decision to redecorate, to go to a more contemporary decor," said Teague, "we thought of all the times that customers had requested information about where they could obtain some of these items. So we decided that the sale of these 'retiring' decor items could serve as a good fund-raising vehicle for Children's Hospital."

"We're most grateful to Red Lobster for coming forward and getting involved," said Beth Duke, hospital spokesperson. "It was an example of the kind of community commitment that is typical of Red Lobster's activity here in the Virginia Beach area."

The check for $1,275 was presented to hospital officials in ceremonies held Tuesday, Oct. 9, at the Red Lobster restaurant, 709 Independence Blvd.

Pumpkins for entry need not be obtained at the Great Pumpkin Give-Away, but they must be returned by noon Saturday, Oct. 27, to be eligible for judging. Each Gallery of Homes office will hold separate judgments with children's categories beginning at 10 a.m. on Oct. 27, 8-10 a.m. on Oct. 28. Refreshments will be served free at the Gallery offices on day of judging. Winners need not be present to win.

Pumpkins may be picked up at the following locations:

Gallery of Homes - Pembroke office, Pembroke One Building - 1st floor, 281 Independence Blvd.; Gallery of Homes - Hilltop office, 1750 Laskin Road.

Dept. of Defense traces participants in atmospheric nuclear tests

For over a year the Department of Defense has been attempting to identify former military and civilian defense personnel who participated in the atmospheric nuclear tests conducted from 1945 to 1962. The Defense Nuclear Agency is the Executive Agent for this program.

If you participated in these tests, which were held largely in Nevada and at Bikini and Eniwetok atolls in the Pacific, you are urged to contact the Defense Nuclear Agency, if you have not done so in 1978-1979.

The Defense Nuclear Agency is attempting to reconstruct a complete history of the atmospheric nuclear test program, including names of participants and any radiation doses they received. One of the purposes of this effort is to enable the National Academy of Sciences and other scientific organizations to determine if there are health hazards resulting from participation in the tests.

Based upon research to date, it is believed that radiation exposures were low.

If you were a participant in the atmospheric nuclear tests program, and you have not already done so, you are urged to contact the Defense Nuclear Agency at toll-free number 800-572-6845; or write to Defense Nuclear Agency, Washington, D.C. 20305.

If you are concerned that your possible exposure may have adversely affected your health, you are urged either to consult your doctor or, if you are a former serviceman, to contact the nearest Veterans Administration Hospital, where you may obtain a physical examination at government expense.

No union to rule City Hall, says reader

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

As a citizen of Virginia Beach, it is very hard to believe that candidate Buddy Riggs, who also sits on the City Council, is not leaning towards allowing city employees to unionize during his term on City Council. Mr. Riggs has solicited and received endorsements from the AFL-CIO (George Meany unions), as well as other unions representing local police and firemen. As a taxpayer, I resent this abuse of authority and sheer political arrogance on the part of Mr. Riggs. The taxpayers and voters of this city are certainly not so uninformed as to allow the AFL-CIO or any other union to rule our City Hall.

Candidate is 'out of touch,' comments citizen

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

Of all people to run for public office, none other than Councilman Riggs who wanted to take Sundays away from the families of our city by promoting the removal of the Blue Law. The citizens of Virginia Beach simply will not stand for a man who has so little regard for family life and religious institutions as Buddy Riggs. Obviously, Mr. Riggs is out of touch with the citizens in this city.

the things I had no knowledge of...Any apartment project of any size has to have a resident apartment manager. I had hired one for this project, but (she or he) did not use the apartment on the project but moved to an adjacent project I assumed I could rent that unit."

Standing said that he used the apartment for an office but that when he moved to another location left it vacant for months until he rented the unit to a young police officer and his wife who were trying to find an apartment.

Standing said he told the building official, "I didn't agree with his decision that you could not have a manager's apartment, but would abide by his decision because (I was the mayor). I told him later that if you have billed me in error send me a correct bill and I will not contest it. I didn't although I don't agree."

Standing also took issue with the use of sources by newspapers "elected officials who choose not to be identified." "The news media indicated I was less than honest in my rezoning application...I see it as an attack on my integrity and to the position of mayor."

He said he had no intention of backing down as director of the Savings and Loan. He said that the association was set up to provide money for people to buy homes. He said that he himself would not be eligible to get loans from the bank and that the charges in connection with his directorship are "ridiculous."

"The whole thing is a very sorry part of my public life...I hope it will not prevent others from seeking public office because the city needs good, qualified men to serve. He noted that the mayors of Portsmouth and Norfolk, both of whom he respects, serve on bank boards.

Standing said that Phillip Russo, the senior judge of the Circuit Court, said that no one had discussed the issue with him.

Merrick said that he still sees some impropriety in Standing's serving on the board and moved to ask the Attorney General of Virginia to ask Russo to appoint an attorney to investigate the charges.

Ervin seconded the motion saying that the General Assembly was careful to eliminate itself and board members of financial institutions from the conflict of interests laws.

He said that although he saw nothing wrong with being a board member, council has no way of coming to the root of the matter. He pointed out that City Attorney Dale Binson, City Manager George L. Hanbury and Inspection Service Administrator Robert R. Lohrer owe their jobs to council and therefore are in a bad position to do anything.

Ervin said that "He (Lohrer) isn't going to come to you for fees."

"Why shouldn't he?" asked Standing.

Holland said that his votes on council have resulted in some people stopping to go to him as patients..."I can

NAS Oceana selects sailor of the quarter

Aviation Electrician's Mate Airman (AEAN) Thomas W. Mobley Jr. has been selected as Sailor of the Quarter for October through December 1979 for Naval Air Station Oceana in Virginia Beach. Upon receiving the word that he was selected for this prestigious title and position, AEAN Mobley remarked, "I felt really good and I was very surprised."

Before becoming NAS Oceana's Sailor of the Quarter, Airman Mobley was chosen as Air Operations Department Sailor of the Month for September 1979. A significant accomplishment which helped him garner the Sailor of the Quarter title was Mobley's completion of requirements to become a plane captain ahead of schedule and his outstanding marks on all his tests for plane captain.

Airman Mobley works in his rate in Search and Rescue (SAR) Hangar 23, which is an integral part of NAS Oceana's Air Operations Department. As regards his present job, Mobley remarked, "I enjoy working with everyone in the SAR Hangar." The Sailor of the Quarter came to NAS Oceana on July 11, 1978 and began working on Air Ops' transient line servicing transient aircraft. Since August 1, 1979, however, he has been working at his current job.

A native of Atlanta, Georgia, AEAN Mobley graduated from Cross Keys High School in that city in June 1975. He joined the Navy on October 25, 1977 in Atlanta and attended boot camp training at Orlando, Florida until January 5, 1978. After boot camp, Mobley reported to NAS Memphis where he studied basic electricity and basic electronics and also attended Aviation Electrician "A" School. He came to Oceana next.

Airman Mobley loves music and as an interesting after hours hobby plays the base drum in a Scottish bagpipe band called Strath James Pipes and Drums from Williamsburg, Virginia. His wife, Heather Joy, plays the snare drum in the same band. They both have been a part of the bagpipe band since October 1978 and became interested in joining this band when it played at the 1978 Virginia Beach Neptune Festival.

The Sailor of the Quarter and his wife live in Harper's Square Apartments in Virginia Beach. As for future plans, Mobley wants to volunteer for after hours work with either children or handicapped people.

As Sailor of the Quarter, AEAN Mobley will receive two tickets for a complimentary harbor cruise aboard the "Spirit of Norfolk," a $25 U.S. Savings Bond from the Bank of Virginia Beach and eligibility for nomination as NAS Oceana Sailor of the Year. Additionally, his picture is on display on the quarterdeck in the air station's Administration Building and Mobley is entitled to enjoy a steak dinner for two at the Seahorse Club (NAS Oceana's Enlisted Club). On October 5, he received a congratulatory letter from Captain D.J. Michaels, NAS Oceana's Commanding Officer, in the Captain's Office. Shortly thereafter, Captain Michaels and Mobley dined together in the NAS Oceana Enlisted Dining Facility.

The Rev. Joseph Penner, former rector of All Saints Episcopal Church who now lives on the Eastern Shore, supervises the making of Brunswick stew on the Lynnhaven House grounds.

Observing one of the Lynnhaven House's two upstairs bedrooms are Matt Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Capps of Virginia Beach.

An English country fair...

"Seventeenth Century Day at Lynnhaven House", held last Friday and Saturday in Virginia Beach, offered participants a chance to experience a taste of seventeenth century life, customs and food. It also provided an opportunity to tour the Lynnhaven House (circa 1662-1675), which is one of the best preserved brick buildings in the country and a good example of 17th century architecture.

The event was sponsored by the Princess Anne Country Historical Society in cooperation with the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities. In addition to tours of the Locrian Consort and house and grounds, the day featured craft demonstrations, musical entertainment by the Locrian Consort and plenty of beverages and food. Brunswick stew.

Donna Kirch, one of the hostesses for "Seventeenth Century Day", points out a replica of "Great Planter's Traveling Bed." The bed is held together by hooks. When its owner went travelling, the bed went along.

Hope Mihalap presents opera workshop at library

Ms. Hope Mihalap, well known columnist, lecturer, and author of the guide to the opera "From Opera to Uproar," will present a workshop on the Virginia Opera Association Presentation of "La Boheme." This program is sponsored by the Virginia Beach Public Library and will be held at the Oceanfront Branch Library on Tuesday, October 23, at 8 p.m.

Ms. Mihalap is a founding director of the VOA and, as a volunteer for that organization, speaks on opera here and out of town, writes and edits their guild newsletter and is chairman of the district auditions for the Metropolitan Opera National Council. She is hostess of the weekly program "Opera Highlights with Hope" on WHRO-FM and commentator for many of their special opera broadcasts. Her guide to opera, "From Opera to Uproar," is sold by the VOA.

To register for this program, call Rosemary Houseknecht at 428-4113. The Oceanfront Branch Library is located at 1811 Arctic Avenue.

Children's cultural festival featured at Plaza Jr. High

"It's a World of Children," a children's cultural festival observing the International Year of the Child will be presented at Plaza Junior High School on South Lynnhaven Road at 2:30 p.m., Saturday, October 20.

Under the direction of Kathleen Lockwood McBlair, the program will feature costumed performances by young people representing sixteen different international cultural groups in the Tidewater area. The rich heritage of this international community will be translated by twenty-five colorful musical and dramatic presentations by talented young people.

The purpose of, "It's a World of Children," is to focus attention on the International Year of the Child and the many cultures that now make up the Tidewater area. The festival has been organized by a steering committee of interested local citizens, headed by Dr. Bong-soo Eun and the Reverend Russell Siler. Admission to the Children's Cultural Festival is free.

Handy carpet care kit facilitates stain removal

If you're in the market for carpeting, watch the ads this fall for a useful free offer.

Research indicates that the number one concern of homemakers buying carpet today is maintenance. Especially confusing is the question of how to treat spills before they set, avoiding lasting damage.

One carpet maker has come up with a practical solution. It's a handy "first-aid" kit loaded with special cleaners and applicators to make fast work of carpet spills. You can get it free through participating retailers this fall when you buy specified amounts of the company's carpet.

The kit (pictured) contains professionals use for removal of most household substances such as ink, pet stains, coffee, etc. Leaving nothing to chance, there's even a dial that you turn to identify the spilled substance; corresponding information in the window tells you exactly how to remove it.

SCC guides stockbrokers' practices

When you decided to plunge back into the stock market to make a small killing, did you get an inquiry from your broker about your financial situation?

Did he ask you about your investment objectives?

Did he inquire about your financial needs?

Or did he simply take your order for the 100 shares of Bluechip and let you take your chances?

Your decision to risk some cash plus commission in hopes of a quick doubling of your little nest egg was your own, and perhaps that's the way you wanted it.

But you're entitled to much more, if the broker goes by "the book."

For example, some of the prohibited business practices are:

- Failing to advise a customer of the disadvantages of a particular transaction which the customer might otherwise not know.

- Inducing transactions in customer accounts which are excessive in size in view of the customers' financial resources.

- Failure to describe sufficiently the important facts and risks concerning a transaction.

These and hundreds of other "no-nos" are listed in a new study guide from the State Corporation Commission's Division of Securities and Retail Franchising.

It has been adopted by about 25 states for uniformity, and is used as prospective securities agents prepare for an examination they must pass.

Extensive knowledge of the information in the guide prepared by the North American Securities Administrators Association, Inc. is needed by persons taking the exam and all of the process is designed to help investors and consumers in the marketplace.

Heavy emphasis is placed on the agent's knowledge of exactly what constitutes fraudulent and other prohibited practices. Almost one half of the total test result is based on this knowledge.

The study guide admits that "while some forms of dishonest or unethical practices are easy to identify, many are not."

It is recognized that "...each agent, relying on his or her own common sense and integrity, should be able to determine if his or her business practices are dishonest or unethical or if they are taking unfair advantage of a client."

In Virginia, if a consumer has questions about what is proper or not, legal or not, ethical or not, the SCC's Securities Division may be able to help. There's a toll free number to get answers: 1-800-552-9760; or questions may be mailed to the SCC Securities Division at P.O. Box 1197, Richmond, Va. 23209.

The new guide and testing procedures, effective for the first time this month, also may be of interest to consumers; many practices considered improper are listed.

Some include: • Failure to state important facts. (An agent may not omit a material fact; this means they may not be deliberately selective in what they choose to tell a customer.)

- Inside information: It is prohibited to make recommendations on the basis or pass along inside information about stock issuer or its securities when the information has not been made public.

- Churning customer accounts; inducing transactions solely to generate commissions.

- Deliberately failing to follow a customer's instructions.

- Failing to inform a customer that certain transactions will involve larger than ordinary commissions, tax or transaction costs.

Wife may list husband as employee

By JUDITH G. RHODES

Q. I am the proprietor of a small manufacturing business in Virginia Beach. My husband gave up his job to help me in my business, filling orders mainly. Can I list him as an employee? — M.A.C.

A. Of course your husband may be your employee. You have many options open to you, so it would be in your best interests to discuss the various tax ramifications to your business with an accountant, or an individual who is a small business adviser, or a combination of the two.

If you are self-employed, you may want to set up a Keogh retirement plan which would enable you to set aside 15 percent of your net taxable income or $7,500 per year, whichever is the lesser figure, much more money allowed than if you opened an Individual Retirement Account which covered you and added your husband.

You may want to consider changing your business to a partnership with your husband as co-partner, and have another form of retirement plan through your company.

Q. Can I buy a short-term high interest Treasury note without using the services of a broker or banker? — M.C.

A. You can purchase Treasury bills when there is an auction, by going to the Treasury office in Norfolk.

You and your money

It is much simpler, however, to use the service of a broker or banker as they will do all the leg work, keep your purchase in safekeeping, and handle any necessary arrangements for your purchase.

There may also be a minimum size which you can purchase directly from the auction, whereas by going through your broker or banker, they may provide the extra service of allowing a smaller monetary investment — well worth the small fee which either institution may charge you.

Q. My gentleman friend of several years standing has asked me to move in with him, and I think I probably will. I have talked with him about some type of non-marital contract which he agrees would be a good idea.

Neither of us has fabulous salaries, but rather than going through the formalities of hiring a lawyer to write an agreement for us, we thought about doing one ourselves. Is it possible? Will it be legal? — A.F.

A. You don't say what your age bracket is, but the tone of your letter indicates a great deal of maturity. What you and your friend should consider is writing the agreement and then showing it to a lawyer, to make certain it is properly written. That should cost you only a minimal amount.

When you write your agreement you should each clearly state that you both waive all financial claims on each other. Included in your agreement should be items such as the property you acquire while living together belongs to whomever paid for it, that neither of you intend to share your earnings or property must also be in writing — neither of you has an obligation to support the other, or that neither of you expects compensation for any services you may have rendered or do render to each other.

If the two of you do purchase any major appliances, or any real property, you will need to state clearly what happens to it if you split up. You might also consider an agreement which would designate responsibility for the various household chores, especially if one of you will do more chores for less cash contribution. Lawyers do recommend you keep your bank account separate, your credit cards separate and that you don't present yourselves as Mr. and Mrs. If you do this and then separate, it may be possible for your partner to claim a spouse's share of your possessions.

While couples who work and live together are still taxed less than if they were married, they are still exposed to a number of financial problems. If your partner is under 30, he will receive no break on auto insurance, and neither of you can qualify as a spouse in a health plan.

Most importantly, the two of you must have a will, because neither of you can be a beneficiary of the other except by a will, whereas if you were married a share of the estate would go to the survivor without a will.

Judith Rhodes is a free-lance writer who has spent 15 years in the securities industry. If you have any questions regarding securities, finance or the stock market, you may address them to her in care of the Virginia Beach Sun. Please be certain to enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope if you wish a reply. Because of the large volume of mail, only questions of general interest will be answered through the column. Allow a minimum of six weeks in which to receive your answer.

DeFord is president-elect of VSBA

Robert H. DeFord Jr., chairman of the Virginia Beach School Board, has been elected president-elect of the Virginia School Boards Association (VSBA) at its recent meeting in Virginia Beach. DeFord will become president of the statewide organization next October.

VSBA held its annual meeting at the Sheraton Beach Hotel recently along with the annual meeting of the Virginia Association of School Administrators (VASA). Mrs. Elizabeth Blystone of Falls Church became president of VSBA this year, succeeding Mrs. Pauline F. Maloney of Lynchburg, who is also rector of the Board of Visitors of Norfolk State University.

Taking office also at the meeting as VSBA regional chairman for Tidewater was Mrs. Patricia Miller of Hampton. DeFord has been a member of the Virginia Beach School Board since 1966, and has been board chairman since 1972.

DeFord and Hiroshi Yamashita of Hawaii, President of the National School Boards Association, at the recent meeting in Virginia Beach.

Virginia Beach public schools establish policy for school attendance during inclement weather

Snow in the northern and western portions of Virginia recently were a sober reminder that winter is on the way, and that the days of Indian summer are definitely numbered.

With winter, even in the relatively mild Tidewater area, can come snow and ice...and school closings. For Virginia Beach Public Schools, there are established policies and procedures that are followed in the event of inclement weather.

The severe weather operations plan is divided into two categories: Weather Condition One and Weather Condition Two.

Weather Condition One means all school employees and students are excused, and all school operations cease. Should Weather Condition One be put into effect because of a storm's severity during the school day, students and employees leave at a time specified by the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. E.E. Brickell. If it is put into effect during off-hours, it means that students and all school employees need not report for the upcoming school/working day.

Weather Condition Two excludes 12-month employees only. All other employees and students are excused as in Weather Condition One, but 12-month employees report for work or continue working as usual.

This will be the first winter that the superintendent or his representative can have instant communication with all schools in the event schools are to be closed early. A new radio communications alert system, which is also used in other emergencies or for announcements that must be received immediately in the schools, was installed near the end of the last school year.

When schools are to be closed early or will not open because of the weather, as many radio and television stations as possible are notified as soon as a decision is made by the superintendent. That decision is made no later than 6 a.m., when schools will not open.

While the decision not to open will always be made as early as possible, based on available information, the radio and television stations will always be notified by a few minutes after 6 a.m. If the stations are not notified, Virginia Beach public schools will be open.

Beach PTA Council goes to new heights to promote membership

October is PTA Membership Month. Nationwide, extra efforts are put forth during this month to swell the ranks of PTA's everywhere. In Virginia Beach, the PTA Council is going to new heights in its efforts.

The council has rented an airplane for an hour on the afternoon of Saturday, October 20, which will trail an aerial banner over the city.

"Usually the plane has banners advertising commercial establishments or products," said Virginia Beach PTA Council president Mrs. Peggy Koepen. "I know I always read them when I see them and that lots of other people do too. So why not advertise the PTA?"

The plan for the banner was told to the more than 250 persons who attended the council's recent Leadership Training Institute meeting at Kempsville Junior High School. During that meeting, State PTA president, Mrs. Mae Belle Coussens, of Virginia Beach, also read a proclamation signed by Mayor Patrick Standing, recognizing October as PTA Membership Month.

Mrs. Coussens is seeking an unprecedented second term in the state's highest PTA post at the state convention in Roanoke October 26-27.

"We hope to have a large contingent of Virginia Beach PTA members at that convention," said Mrs. Koepen. "But in the meantime, look for the banner over the city between 1 and 2 p.m. on the 20th."

Mrs. Coussens reads the Mayor's proclamation recognizing October as PTA Membership Month. The Virginia Beach women will seek an unprecedented second term in the state's highest PTA post at the state convention in Roanoke Oct. 26-27.

Beach students receive ROTC scholarships at ODU

Two Old Dominion University students from Virginia Beach received Army Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) scholarships during recent ceremonies at the university. Receiving two-year scholarships were Steven H. Carpenter and Robert R. Vesselize Jr. Both are juniors at ODU and entering ROTC's advanced program this fall.

Carpenter is the husband of Hyk Suk Carpenter. Vesselize is the son of Mrs. Theresa M. Vesselize.

Carpenter earned his scholarship while on active duty with the U.S. Army in Korea, competing with other soldiers worldwide for the scholarship opportunity. Vesselize received his scholarship by competing with college sophomores enrolled in ROTC the past spring semester in schools throughout the eastern U.S. Each scholarship is effective this fall and will include payment of tuition, textbooks, and laboratory fees. The scholarship will also provide a $100 per month allowance.

With these awards, ODU now has 23 Army ROTC scholarships winners among its cadet corps, a record high for the ODU ROTC program.

Political Perspective Series begins Friday at VWC

"SALT II and American Foreign Policy" will be the topic addressed by Grant E. Mouser III, Department of State Representative and Senior Political Officer, in a talk at Virginia Wesleyan College on Friday, Oct. 19, at 1:30 p.m. in Birdsong Lounge.

Mouser's talk, presented as the first of Virginia Wesleyan College's Political Perspective Series, is free and open to the public. For further information call Dr. Del Carlson or Dr. William Jones at the college (461-3232).

Beach to host conference on gifted and talented education

Some 300 educators and parents from 12 school division in southeastern Virginia will attend a two-day conference on gifted and talented education in Virginia Beach on October 26-27.

The third annual Southeast Virginia Conference on Gifted and Talented will be held at Plaza

Junior High School. The conference will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 26 with a keynote address by Dr. Joseph Renzulli, author of "The Enrichment Triad Model" and professor of educational psychology at the University of Connecticut. The theme of the conference is "Prisms for Potential."

Following the keynote address participants will be involved in workshops and business sessions. Workshops as well as general sessions will relate to the three stages of Dr. Renzulli's enrichment triad model - content awareness, process, and product.

The officers for the Southeastern Region are: president, Ms. Kathleen Schoonmacher (Norfolk City Public Schools); vice-president, Dr. K.E. Brown (Virginia Beach City Public Schools); treasurer, Ms. Lynn Wright (Chesapeake City Schools); secretary, Ms. Joan Byrne (York County Public Schools).

Teachers and officials of the Virginia Beach Program for the Gifted and Talented are hosts for the event. Dr. E.E. Brickell, Superintendent of Virginia Beach City Public Schools will welcome teachers, college and graduate students, and parents of gifted students at the opening session.

Bayside wins '1st' in Maryland

Following their performance in Richmond, Virginia, where they won the third place award on October 6, the Bayside Marching Marlins traveled to Salisbury, Maryland, to compete in the "Delmarvacade of Bands." The Marching Marlins were awarded the first place trophy in Class A competition. Among those performing were seven high schools from the tri-state area. This competitive event allows area high school musicians the opportunity to perform their marching routines, to compare their efforts with those of other bands, and enhance their performance through stiff competition.

JA companies begin training

Officers of the more than 75 JA companies run by Tidewater High School students will begin training today.

Electing officers is one of the first actions taken by each of these miniature businesses and training is provided by volunteers from the more than 20 Tidewater businesses and colleges serving as counseling firms.

Attendance percentage high at Beach schools in Sept.

The percentage of attendance in the Virginia Beach public schools remains high for the first month of classes, following last year's trend.

Kempsville Elementary, Plaza Junior, and Cox High were the attendance winners in their respective categories for the month of September.

Kempsville led all elementary schools with a 98.57 percentage. Plaza Junior registered 97.56% attendance, and Cox High 96.77%. All three have been awarded the monthly attendance flag to fly from the schools' flag pole.

This is the first time Kempsville and Plaza have won the flag since the award was established a year ago.

The September 1978 winners were Kingston Elementary (98.36%), Kempsville Junior (97.71%), and Princess Anne High (97%).

Nobel prizes

Ever wonder how the Nobel prizes came about? Alfred Nobel, born October 21, 1833, was a Swedish chemist who invented dynamite. In later years, however, he felt guilty at having created something that caused so much death and injury. He hated the thought that dynamite could be used in war when he had invented it for peace. He set up a fund to award annual prizes, one of which was for the most effective work in promoting international peace and another for literature.

Maybe you're also looking for a little peace - and good reading for yourself. The Virginia Beach Public Library has information about the Nobel Prizes and many of the prize winning books.

Beach woman honored as CCS coordinator

Dorothy Castles, Clean Community System coordinator for the City of Virginia Beach, is among those being honored in a statewide effort to recognize outstanding anti-litter achievements.

Division Commissioner Robert W. Slocum hailed an initial forty-seven local litter control programs, school anti-litter projects, and media contributions to litter awareness. In personal letters mailed to each honoree, along with a formal Certificate of Appreciation, Slocum praised these groups for "front-line involvement."

"These solid citizens of Virginia," said Slocum, "did not stand idly by and wait for someone else to solve the problem. They have assumed responsibility for the cleanliness and beauty of their communities. They have set an example for us all."

Women students get support at TCC

Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College - Virginia Beach

National Business Women's Week is a time to highlight the special programs and support available to women students at TCC. While many women students are enrolled in business programs at the Virginia Beach campus, they certainly are not limited to business careers. At TCC, women are enrolled in occupational and technical programs such as air conditioning and refrigeration, drafting, and radio and television servicing and repair as well as in traditional business areas.

The Counseling Center offers a number of supportive programs to help women students, particularly the returning woman. While many women enter TCC directly from high school, the returning woman is defined as one who is over 25, has been out of school for a while, and has married and raised a family. Such a student has special needs which the college attempts to meet through special courses.

A one-credit Seminar for the Returning Woman Student gives these students group support during the initial entry period into college life while providing valuable information in study skills, school resources, assertiveness training and career planning.

There is also a student organization for returning women students, Delta Sigma Lambda, which provides informal group support, arranges lectures and programs of special interest, and performs community service.

Other programs offered by the Counseling Center which have been popular with women students are the courses in Career Planning and Assertiveness Training. While the courses are open to both men and women, the returning women students find them of particular value in building self confidence and identifying career goals.

In Career Planning, students learn job search techniques, resume writing and job interviewing as well as learning about various career fields.

Assertiveness Training helps students express themselves confidently, directly and honestly while avoiding threatening, aggressive behavior. Students discuss individual problems and participate in role playing to "practice" becoming assertive.

The Business Division, where many women students are enrolled, provides extra-curricular support. The Secretarial Science courses are especially popular with women who have been out of the job market for a while and want to brush up on job skills, become acquainted

Business Women's Association elects 1980 officers

The Tidewater Chapter of the American Business Women's Association recently had its annual installation of officers for 1979-1980. Mrs. Sandy Miller was installed as president. Other officers installed were June Calder, vice president; Eunice Turner, recording secretary; Zola Clark, corresponding secretary and Jacqueline Owens, treasurer.

Nat'l Secretaries Association plans workshop, seminar

"Key to the 80's" is the theme for the 17th Annual Tidewater Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) Workshop/Seminar to be held Saturday, October 20, at Holiday Inn Scope, Norfolk.

Time management and communications will be the topics of discussion. Guest speakers will be David N. McLeod, Office Systems Advisor, Customer Education Department, IBM Office Products Division, Dallas, Texas, and Dr. Cheryl Wax Cresser, Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College, Chesapeake campus.

The Tidewater Chapter's Annual Seminar is dedicated to further the secretarial profession through education, while at the same time financing scholarships for local students who will be majoring in the secretarial sciences.

The all day seminar includes, in addition to the speakers, exhibits of the latest and most efficient office equipment and supplies, coffee break, luncheon and a fashion show, this year being presented by Wilners.

The cost of the all day workshop, including all events, is $20. There is a special price for students and retired persons of $15. For further information, contact Kay Thomas at 623-2491 or Anna Farrar at 588-3454.

Beach business women set goals

By PAM VANDEVEER

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

National Business Women's Week is being observed this week in recognition of the nation's 43 million working women. The annual salute was begun by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, the nation's oldest organization of working women.

The federation's Virginia Beach chapter is the Princess Anne Business and Professional Women's Club. The local group has about 50 members, ranging in age from 21 to over 70, according to Garnet Valos, who is the chapter's public relations chairman and also director of District VI covering Tidewater and the Eastern Shore.

The club conducts a dinner meeting at the oceanfront Ramada Inn on the second Monday of each month. The recent October meeting featured an opportunity to meet and talk with area political candidates.

Requirements of membership in the Princess Anne chapter are: you must be a working woman at least 21 years of age; you must agree with the club's goals and objectives; you must pay annual dues (under $30 a year).

The BPW club states its objectives as follows:

To elevate the standards for women in business and in the professions.

To promote the interests of business and professional women.

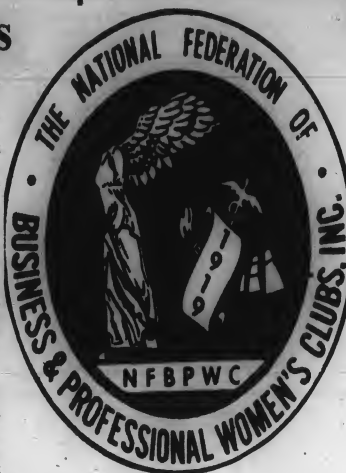

To bring about a spirit of cooperation among business and professional women of the United States.

To extend opportunities to business and professional women through education along lines of industrial, scientific, and vocational activities.

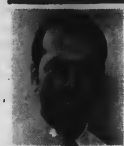

A cross section of occupations are represented in the club, says Mrs. Valos. "Quite a few are in real estate, secretarial work and sales. We have two members who are past 70 who are still working," she adds. "One is Pat Kennedy who owns her own interior decorating business. The other is Olive Brawley, who works for Princess Anne Fuel. "Several women in the club own their own businesses, such as Madeline Winfrey, a past president, who owns her own court reporting business."

The club is looking forward to its state convention, which will be held in May at the Omni Hotel in Norfolk.

Officers for the Princess Anne chapter are: Kathy Anderson, president; Lynn Valos, first vice president; Jean Tefft, second vice president; Marion Ainley, recording secretary; Joan Miller, corresponding secretary; Joan Rowley, treasurer; Helen Dickens, parliamentarian; Nancy Budd, finance; Madeleine Winfree, foundation; Marilyn Crafton, legislation; Jean Tefft, membership; Lynn Valos, program planning; Garnet Valos, public relations; Jackie Warren, young careerist.

Florence Mitchell of Virginia Beach is the president of the BPW Chesapeake Bay chapter. Margaret Roper, also of Virginia Beach, was the club's state president last year and now serves as national nominating chairman.

Today college counts

with new office machines and gain confidence to enter the job market.

The Secretarial Science faculty runs an informal job search "network" which locates jobs for students and helps them find part-time or temporary work while they attend classes.

Last year more than 60 women gained insight into finding employment in a Job Exploration Seminar co-sponsored by the college and the Princess Anne Business and Professional Women's Club. Plans are underway to repeat the seminar later this year.

The Virginia Beach campus salutes women pursuing careers in business and professional fields during National Business Women's week. TCC has a number of supportive programs for women in business as well as in other career areas. If you are a woman interested in pursuing a career in Secretarial Science or any business field, contact the Business Division at 427-3070, extension 105. For guidance in other educational areas, contact the Counseling Center at extension 156.

'Sesame Street' inspires cheerful room

By BARBARA HARTLING

Q. Our twin sons, 3, are sharing a bedroom in our Aragona home which we want to decorate for them. The room is 15x15-feet with twin beds on opposite sides of the room, so they have space in the center of the floor to play.

I'm not very experienced at decorating, especially children's rooms, so I'd like some ideas on how to create a very appealing and attractive room for them. — L.C.

A. One of the easiest ways to begin decorating a child's room is to select a wallpaper that you and your youngsters really like. There are so many exciting and good looking ones available. This way you have already established your color scheme and probably the theme.

Take, for example, a wallpaper by Wall-Tex featuring "Sesame Street" characters in crayon bright blues, reds, yellows, orange, green, pink and tan.

Designer Suzy Taylor put this on walls as well as a series of boxes which she built to stack and form a divider in a child's room.

Decor score

The boxes are open on both ends, so children can get at toys and books from either side. The boxes can be stacked in all kinds of combinations and can serve as a table, stool, or even a boat or playhouse.

There is only one small window and almost no natural light. How would you lighten the kitchen?

We must keep the countertops and floor but can change the cabinet finish and wall color. — R.T.

end of this 21-foot kitchen-breakfast room. — R.K.

A. Our living room is very cool looking. We've had pale green walls and carpeting and the result is depressing.

What can I do to change to a warmer color scheme and still keep my green carpeting and a dark green chair? — G.L.M.

A. Paint your walls a pale pink, add a light pink, deep pink and green fabric to a chair and/or draperies. Add more touches of hot pink — maybe to an upholstered chair, pillows, a table skirt or ottomans.

Q. What alternatives are there to draw draperies on a kitchen double door?

The room gets hot summer sunlight, and draperies fade easily. Yet the room must have light since it is used constantly.

There is only one other window at the opposite

A. As a starter you might find that some of the sun screen film available today would help you in protecting against the sun's devastating rays. However, that is only a partial solution.

Have you ever considered thin venetian blinds on your door? You could anchor them at the top and bottom so they will not bang when the door is opened and closed. You would, of course, need to anchor the wand you turn to open and close the blinds.

You also might find that a woven blind, fashioned in a stationary position so it would not open or close, would be a possible solution. Be certain your blind would have sun resistant fibers to withstand the sunlight.

Buying a home creates stress

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications, Tidewater Builders Association

Psychologists, who have been delving around in man's most stressful situations, have finally arrived at home buying and they're describing it as one of the most stressful times of life. In fact, according to Barry Alberstein, a clinical psychologist in Seattle, Washington, it ranks right up there with getting married, divorced, and going to jail.

"Changing residences, getting used to a new neighborhood, making new friends, finding a new church — all these changes happening at once create stress," says Alberstein, who is the director of a stress management clinic.

These changes and others that occur in every home buying situation almost always add up to a moderate crisis for the buyer, he says.

Add to that the other changes which may often be associated with buying a new home such as a job promotion, a new job, a move to a new area, divorce, marriage, birth of a child or retirement, and it's understandable how one could have the makings of a real life crisis.

Alberstein outlines a checklist of changes which produce stress and ranks them by points:

- 149 points — no crisis
- 150 - 199 points — mild crisis
- 200 - 299 points — moderate crisis
- 300 or more points — major crisis

The checklist includes:

A change in financial status, either for better or worse

Notes from the shelter industry

(38 points); change in the number of arguments with spouse (35 points); incurring a substantial mortgage (31 points); change in "living" conditions (for example: building a new house) (25 points); change in residence (20 points); change in recreation (19 points); change in church activities (19 points); change in social activities (18 points); change in number of family get-togethers (15 points); change in eating habits (15 points). These changes produce a total of 235 stress points, which using Alberstein's system, represents a moderate crisis.

Other changes associated with home buying can include: death of a spouse (100 points); divorce (73 points); marriage (50 points); work change (36 points); child leaving home (29 points); wife beginning work (26 points).

What does all this mean to the home buyer? It may mean that under stress he may tend to make careless decisions or to over-react to situations. Recognizing that no matter how much one may want to buy a particular home, it comes with a moderate to severe amount of stress and tension may help many homebuyers cope with what is an inevitable trying time.

Apartment modes

Creating 'bedwalls' offers interesting effect

By LESLIE AYERS

The traditional headboard is being replaced by many interesting variations which can brighten up a Beach apartment bedroom and make it one of the more comfortable rooms.

Since in any bedroom, the bed usually is the largest piece of furniture, the "bedhead" becomes a focal point.

More and more, designs are moving away from the matching sets of furniture which include the standard headboard that matches dressers and night tables. The headboard is being replaced by more imaginative styles that don't necessarily match the furniture at all.

Headboards are, in fact, becoming anything in size from those that fit the bed to entire bedhead walls.

As a focal point, a headboard should be interesting, attractive and unusual or exciting. Let your imagination have free rein. Since the headboard often provides support while reading in bed, it should also be comfortable.

There are a number of ideas that can be followed in turning an entire wall into a substitute headboard. To create a focal point, consider using wallpaper or shir fabric as a bedwall and continue the pattern for drapes and the bedspread. This repetition of the fabric helps to reinforce the theme of the room.

For comfort, place several large pillows covered with coordinated fabric against the wall. The pillows in this case form the headboard to lean against.

To open up a small room or add drama in a contemporary scheme, consider using mirrors on the bedwall. If you find wood more cozy, place wood tongue and groove on the diagonal all across the bedwall. The wood can be painted, stained or left natural. Once again, use the large pillows propped against the wall for comfort.

If you feel really daring, paint a mural or scenic on canvas and then attach it to the entire wall. You could find yourself sleeping in the woods, on the beach or under the stars.

Before you decide on the bedwall for your apartment, consider the overall style of your bedroom. The wood wall, whether natural or painted, fits best with a country or eclectic look. The mirror treatment, on the other hand, is a more contemporary look. And, for the more provincial or traditional style, try wallpaper or fabric.

Think about replacing the headboard with something that can really give your bedroom a look of distinction.

Lawn & garden

In a pruning mood

By JOHN SINOR

Special to the Virginia Beach Sun

In the smoky twilight we sit on the high deck of our Virginia Beach home, sheltered from the cool evening breeze by an occasional dry martini, and watch the end of the year come rolling up the beach.

As soon as autumn gets here, I start pruning the shrubs and plants in the yard. I go a little mad when I get pruning shears in my hands. Something like a Marine boot camp barber.

Last year I ended up with a pickup truck full of cuttings.

However, I will not tell you what plants I prune. Or how. If I did, the next day's mail would be full of notes from gardening experts telling me I did it all wrong and at the wrong time, anyway.

I do not prune according to the almanac. I prune when I get in the mood to prune. So far everything has grown back.

It's probably some uncanny natural gift I have.

In long-ago days, when the world was cleaner, we burned the leaves we raked right in the yard. And the flavor of autumn drifted in the air.

If you try burning autumn leaves in your yard these polluted days, you will find yourself smelling autumn through iron bars.

"Smoke follows beauty," we would say as we stood around the pile of burning leaves, our eyes stinging with tears as the smoke shifted toward us every time we moved.

The burning of the fall leaves was a loose ritual — a sign of the time of the year.

A lot of the signs of the times have been torn down over the years.

After I went on my last pruning rampage, my wife looked at the truck loaded and said: "Didn't you cut an awful LOT of it away?"

I said: "What are you talking about? The front yard still looks like a rain forest."

It did and still does. Three trees. Ivy winding everywhere. A fourth tree hanging over the sidewalk. Even a little grass. (We'd have more if we had less shade.)

She said: "I don't know. I just hate to see any plants cut. And I don't want a sculptured, trimmed look, either."

I said: "Neither do I. I just want to sculpture some of these things away from the power lines and the television set and having a branch of ivy slip through the window and start to curl around my neck."

So we cut and trimmed, sawed and pruned, and then we neatly packed the cuttings in bundles or plastic bags and had them hauled off to the city dump.

Then, when it was over, I leaned on my rake and tried to conjure up the smell of autumn smoke.

But it wasn't the same as in other days. And we had to settle for the faint fuel smell of automobiles and jet planes which hangs in today's autumnal air.

Dr. Charles J. Elstrodt, area ornamental horticulture extension specialist at the Virginia Truck and Ornamentals Research Station in Virginia Beach, will present a program at the symposium.

Tidewater horticulturalists to speak at 'Symposium-XI'

By PAM VANDEVEER

Virginia Beach Sun Editor

Virginia Beach and Tidewater will be well represented at the upcoming "Symposium - XI" planned for horticulture enthusiasts October 22-25 at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

The four-day event is being sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service, Extension Division, V.P.I. & S.U., Virginia State University and the Department of Horticulture in cooperation with the Virginia Council of Nationally Accredited Flower Show Judges of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs, Inc.

Mrs. Edwin B. Forrest of Manchester Ave., Norfolk, will speak at Tuesday's opening events. She is president of the Virginia Council of Nationally Accredited Flower Show Judges.

Dr. Charles J. Elstrodt, area ornamental horticulture extension specialist at the Virginia Truck and Ornamentals Research Station in Virginia Beach, will present a program entitled "Insects and Insecticides on Ornamental Plants."

Robert Matthews, superintendent of the Norfolk Botanical Gardens for the past 30 years, will speak on "Azaleas - Lace for Your Garden." Matthews is active in several plant societies and is the recipient of a number of horticultural awards. The Tidewater Nurserymen's Association has recognized him as "Horticulturist of the Year."

composed of amethyst violet florets on an imposing two-foot-tall stalk.

For best results with your fall bulb planting, dig over the area to be planted to a depth of one foot. This makes it easier for tender shoots to penetrate the soil, and it improves drainage — important for bulbs.

Before planting, mix bone meal or other fertilizer rich in calcium, phosphorus and magnesium into the soil. Otherwise, the soil quickly becomes depleted of the nutrients necessary for continuing bloom and healthy growth.

Set the bulbs firmly in place, with the pointed ends up. Plant tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, and other large bulbs about eight inches deep and about five inches apart. Plant smaller bulbs, such as crocus, five inches deep and about three inches apart.

Water thoroughly, fill in the planting holes and cover with a light layer of leaves, hay or bark as a protective mulch which remains till early spring. Remove it before the bulbs begin to grow. Keep the bed watered until the first frost.

Beach garden clubs represented at Board of Governors meeting

Two Virginia Beach garden club presidents were among some 45 presidents representing the member clubs of the Garden Club of Virginia who attended the annual Board of Governors meeting held in Harrisonburg October 9-11.

Mrs. J. Carroll Fears

Jr., president of the Princess Anne Garden Club, and Mrs. Hugh S. Meredith, president of the Virginia Beach Garden Club, represented Virginia Beach at the meeting.

Wednesday morning's program featured a presentation by Dr. Norlyn Bodkin, professor, James Madison University, on "Wildflowers of the Region."

Dr. Caroline Marshall, JMU professor, lectured Thursday on "Historic Singer's Glen." Dr. Marshall's research resulted in Singer's Glen being designated a Historic Landmark and listed with the Virginia Historic Landmarks Commission.

Dr. Norlyn Bodkin - working in 'a natural laboratory'

Dr. Norlyn Bodkin, a James Madison University faculty member, makes his home in the Shenandoah Valley because "it's a natural laboratory."

A botanist who specializes in the study of wild plants, Bodkin asserts that the Valley is one of the most fertile sources of vegetation anywhere. He notes that the area is on the boundary of the northern range of southern plants and the southern range of northern plants. "It's a great place to be a botanist," he said.

Plant samples collected on area field trips are dried, pressed and stored in the department of biology herbarium where they are available for teaching and research. The JMU herbarium, has over 5,000 sheets of the pressed plants.

"If you dry them and press them properly they will last a long time," Bodkin said. The herbarium has on loan several plants dried in the 18th century. "They've faded a little," he said, "but you would, too, if you were 200 years old."

Bodkin, who has been teaching since 1959, encourages anyone who is interested in plants to take botany courses. Plants are a natural resource that we need to know more about, he said. "Oh, what a pretty red flower!" gets boring after a while."

Plant everyone's favorite spring flowers at Beach

By PATRICK DENTON

Every spring millions of spring bulb flower fans flock to The Netherlands to see the grandest display of bulb flowers on earth, at Keukenhof Gardens at Lisse, Holland.

Each year visitors are polled to see which among the thousands of varieties are the world's reigning favorites. The results of this survey make up the International Bulb Selection.

I thought you might like to consider some of the world favorite spring flowers which can be planted in Virginia Beach now for those coveted blooms.

A favorite selected crocus was Peter Pan, with beautiful pure ivory white blooms. Favorite anemones are the Greek anemone (Anemone Blanda) in mixed colors. Greek anemones grow three to six inches high, with daisylike blossoms about two inches in diameter. The blooms come in brilliant hues of blue, violet, red and white.

A favorite hyacinth is Delft Blue, a large hyacinth of soft lilac blue with a strong, lovely scent to perfume the spring garden.

Two daffodils were named as favorites — Golden Harvest, a richly colored golden trumpet daffodil with a deeply serrated crown and Ice Follies, a white daffodil with a large cup that is yellow when it opens, then pales to white as it returns.

Though daffodils are not hardly everywhere on the continent, they are worth a try in a sheltered spot up against the house.

Among the favored tulips, the early Kaufmanniana Heart's Delight was chosen for its brilliantly colored carmine-red exterior edged with soft rose, with an interior of pale rose, and a base of golden yellow marked with red.

Another early Fosteriana tulip called Princess is large, with red petals, a scarlet interior and a greenish-brown base. Keizerskroon is an early flowering single tulip of carmine violet, deeply edged with golden yellow. This one is an old favorite since 1750.

Golden Apeldoorn is a sparkling golden-yellow Darwin Hybrid Tulip which blooms in mid-spring. Queen of the Night is a late-blooming Darwin tulip of deep, velvety maroon.

A late-blooming lily flowered tulip called Queen of Sheba is brownish-red edged with bright orange. Petals are pointed and reflexed, suggesting a lily.

A most-liked flowering onion is the Allium Christoffi, which produces magnificent ball-like blooms taken on the Virginia Beach side were bad and on the Norfolk side, good, although the water comes from the same source.

Ervin then remarked, "You may be (justified), Mr. Reil, before you're through."

Councilman John A. Baum said, "I'm sure nobody up here wants bad samples...Are you covering up for anybody, Mr. Horn?"

"No sir, that is not my responsibility," Horn said. "As a professional engineer I have a code of ethics to stand by."

"Actually professional ethics don't help you much in politics," Baum replied. "The thing that scares me is that when people make any charges, people are willing to believe anything."

One woman in the audience asked whether it was a mistake to use the CETA employees.

Standing replied, "It was obviously a mistake because they stopped it."

Horn said that the Health Department is required to notify the public through the media when the contamination levels have been surpassed, and that some localities have been put on notice.

Gwen Wood, a Beach resident who had earlier volunteered to give her speaking time to Reil, said that the council represented the City of Virginia Beach and that "If this man is right...If there's any chance that something might kill us..." And then she asked whether the "mercury was still in the water."

"Are we still drinking it? If it is still in our drinking water, you still have to represent us. On our behalf, look into those charges. If they're wrong, I'll be the first one to make this guy (Reil) apologize."

Horn, who was asked to be present at the meeting by Hanbury, later testified to the safety of the drinking water.

A committee appointed by Mayor Standing and consisting of Councilmen F. Reid Ervin, Dr. Clarence A. Holland and Donald W. Merrick, investigated the charges made by Reil, who has consistently maintained that Watts, a non-engineer, was not qualified for his position and that other personnel disregarded good safety rules.

Monday Reil called on council "to correct the obvious cause, city management." "Does the council wish to make its many important decisions based on clear and accurate information and rely on honest and qualified individuals to manage and operate this city or does this council wish the city's management to continue on its present costly and potentially fatal course?" he asked.

ORDER

THIS DAY, came ELEAZAR A. CORROS and RUTH AUCH CORROS, Petitioners and represented that the object of this proceeding is to effect the name change of the above infant, LISA ANN MCGONAGLE by ELEAZAR A. CORROS and RUTH AUCH CORROS. Affidavit having been made and filed that JAMES H. MCGONAGLE, natural father of said child, is a non-resident of the State of Virginia, the last known post office address being: General Delivery, Boston, Massachusetts.

It is therefore ORDERED that the said JAMES H. MCGONAGLE appear before this Court on or before December 3, 1979, and indicate his attitude toward the proposed name change or otherwise do what is Reil had asked Vice Mayor Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. to sponsor a resolution to adopt and act on the total contents of the Reil's July 3 letter, but McCoy failed to do so. He asked Reil why he singled him (McCoy) out to present the resolution and Reil said it was because McCoy was the Kempville Borough councilman where Reil lives.

McCoy replied that he represented the whole city. "I represent you, too," Standing said.

Reil replied, "Why haven't you talked to me?"

In reply to Reil's statements, Hanbury said, "Maybe it's time to change the city management" but that, "I, too, share the same concerns as Mr. Reil of the health, safety and welfare of every citizen in the city. I will make every effort to continue under the code of ethics...I think his comments dealt solely on me and the director of Public Utilities..."

He said that he had enjoyed being city manager and looked forward to serving longer and that he had always conducted himself as a professional. The council can review him at any time, he said. Hanbury maintained that he made all appointments within the city's guidelines and placed personnel according to merit. "When I hired Mr. Watts, I felt he was the type of person to head that type of operation. There is no requirement that he be a registered professional engineer."

Hanbury said the job needed someone who was more than just an engineer and needed management, financial and personnel training.

"Watts can discuss engineering problems with some of the best engineers," he said. Since Watts took over the job in 1975, Hanbury said there has been a greater emphasis on professionalism. "Council is always welcome to be critical of me...Reil is a disgruntled employee who was unable to work (with his superiors or peers)...I certainly feel that if Reil has any comments about me, he will seek his course of action in through a court of law."

Reil questioned that Watts was a strong manager, well-grounded in personnel and financial management experience by pointing to the "extremely high turn-over of management personnel in the Public Utilities Department during the last two years and the documented waste of large sums of money in this department."

Reil dwelt on "dishonest statements made by utilities management personnel" in the mayor's committee report released July 2 charging they were a "cover-up."

Reil cited Watts' statement that Reil "never once came to me and reported electrical problems (at the 17th Street Pumping Station). He never once gave me a listing of anything that were electrical shortcomings... He never provided me with an evaluation. He never gave me any listing of specifics that needed to be addressed."

According to the report, Merrick brought out the fact that Reil worked for Duffield and Duffield reported nothing either.

Reil pointed out that the July 2 report contains a document dated Oct. 7 written by Reil on "Inspection, Testing and Repair of Pumping Station Service Entrance Electrical Equipment and Power Branch Circuits."

He said, "I constantly gave management documents and reports of this nature."

"...There are alarming similarities between the beginnings of dictatorial governments and the City of Virginia Beach's management today!" Reil said.

Councilman John A. Baum, said that in his experience as an engineer with the government, most of the administrative personnel were non-engineers. The concern is that these administrators get good feedback from engineer. "That's something that has to be watched."

Holland, in answer to a remark from Reil, said that he did not recall the subcommittee saying that Watts was not qualified. "I personally feel he has done an excellent job. I don't recall any dishonest statements made...It was clear that we were not going to deal with a personnel problem." He said he had served on council for nine years and did not appreciate people saying "we're not truthful."

In answer to the question of mercury by Mrs. Wood, Merrick said that "To the best of my knowledge, there is no mercury in the water in Virginia Beach."

Mrs. Wood replied, "If Don Merrick tells me, I'll believe it."

The mercury incidents studied by the council committee, occurred on Feb. 1, 1978. Mercury was spilled from a manometer into a pipe line at the 17th Street Station Pumping Station. According to the report, the contaminated section of the pipe was not removed and inspected until June 4, 1979, 17 months after the accident. Certain mercury compounds are highly toxic, the report points out, and in some cases deadly poisonous.

Horn said that mercury is almost insoluble in public drinking water. He said that it is the tendency of mercury to seek out the lowest place and stay there forever. The case of mercury poisoning in Japan referred to by Mrs. Wood happened in an entirely different environment, he said. This mercury was in ocean water which contained oxygen and therefore caused chemical reactions in the mercury.

Horn said there was no oxygen in the drinking water and that mercury will not undergo chemical reaction. He said the mercury posed no threat to the people of Virginia Beach. He said he knew of a water system in Virginia with six pounds of mercury in its pipes. He said that it has been there for ten years, spilled in a very similar incident, and never has shown up in the water.

PROCLAMATION FOR A UNITED NATIONS DAY OF SHAME

Whereas, the United Nations has never condemned the Communist tyrants for assaulting religious freedom, destroying the sanctity of the family, abrogating property rights, abolishing free elections, or murdering tens of millions, and

Whereas, the UN did condemn the United States in 1975 for maintaining military bases in Guam, and in 1976 for importing nickel and chrome from anti-Communist Rhodesia, and

Whereas, the United States has only one vote in the UN General Assembly, while the Soviet Union has three (USSR, Byelorussia and the Ukraine), and

Whereas, America's taxpayers pay twenty-five percent of the UN regular budget, more than sixteen times the amount that a majority of the member nations collectively contributes, and

Whereas, the money Americans "contribute" to the UN has not been used to support American ideals of true human rights and freedom, but instead has been used to suppress freedom and glorify tyrants, and

Whereas, in 1961, the UN troops in the Congo massacred civilians, bombed hospitals, destroyed churches and slaughtered women and children, and

Whereas, in 1971, the UN expelled the government of Free China from its membership, and welcomed instead Communist Chinese tyrants who have murdered millions of their fellow Chinese, and

Whereas, just this year, the United Nations Development Program has approved a $15 million aid program for these same Communist Chinese, and

Whereas, two groups affiliated with the terrorist Palestine Liberation Organization (the Special Unit on Palestinian Rights and the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People) have been receiving funds from the UN and

Whereas, UNICEF (which claims to help needy children) has issued medical combat packs to terrorists entering Rhodesia, and

Whereas, far from being a meaningless debating society, the UN is actually the formal framework for a one-world government, and

Whereas, the United States should maintain its sovereignty and freedom, and should not allow the UN to acquire control over its citizens, doing a bang up job of getting the work done."

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the United States should get out of the United Nations, and that the UN anniversary on October 24, 1979 should be proclaimed a United Nations Day of Shame.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing pointed out that the city's bond counsel advised the city not to issue the revenue bonds at the start of the utilities work because the city would have a hard time selling the bonds with so little experience in the utilities work.

Hanbury had presented a program report on the projects listed in the bond referendum literature, but was told to prepare a report including all the projects for the five-year program. This would include the work done with the $9.1 million.

Hanbury introduced the question because work was progressing to a point where council had to decide whether to seek another referendum or to sell the $9.1 in revenue

SAFETY SENSE FOR HALLOWEEN

The fun and adventure of Halloween have been around for centuries. Neighborhood children out trick-or-treating on "All Hallows' Eve" probably aren't aware of it, but they're following a very old English custom called "going a souling," where youngsters went from house to house calling "a soul cake, a soul cake, a penny or a soul cake!"

Young children should be escorted by an adult on house-to-house calls; advise older children to stay in familiar neighborhoods and to avoid dark streets.

Ask your children to bring home all the candy and fruit they receive so you can give it your seal of approval. Make sure they eat a regular meal before they go out to discourage nibbling.

Instead of pumpkins with candles inside, have your children carry a bright flashlight for a safe and accident-free "All Hallows' Eve."

86-foot yacht is not all luxury for local firstmate

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoor Writer

As I told you several weeks ago, I would be helping deliver an 86-foot motor yacht from Atlantic City, N.J. to Fort Pierce, Fla. Well, we finally made it. Some of the problems we encountered should help you appreciate your smaller and more simple pleasure-craft. That's the case with me anyway. I felt like kissing my 28-footer when I got home.

The boat I was on was the motor yacht "Devon", an 86-foot Bertram International. She is powered by twin 348 Caterpillar marine engines that are capable of delivering 1200 horse-power each, but along with all this horsepower, her engines and generators drink up approximately 45 gallons of diesel fuel per hour, at cruising speed.

The "Devon's" wheel house is fully equipped with VHF marine radio, CB radio, FM radio-telephone, Loran A and C, depth-finder, 18 mile range radar, automatic pilot and a wind direction and velocity indicator.

You would think that with all this equipment and power the trip would be a snap but the larger the vessel the more attentive you have to be. The "Devon" draws 6½ feet of water and that is a lot when you are traveling the Intercoastal Waterway. At times, we only had two feet of water below our props. One mistake could cause the "Devon's" 108 tons of weight to do a lot of damage.

I arrived at the Frank C. Farley Marina in Atlantic City, N.J. around 5 p.m. on Saturday, September 29. I spotted the "Devon" right away. She was the largest boat there, and by far the prettiest.

I was greeted aboard by Walter Krill, the engineer and Ruth Wonder, the cook and boat keeper. It was Walt's job to keep those big Cats and generators running and before the trip was over he would prove that he was more than capable.

I met both Walt and Ruth when the "Devon" had come through Great Bridge last spring, so I wasn't among strangers. We had two additional passengers aboard, George and Violet Miller of Norristown, Pa. I was sure that the trip was going to be a pleasant one. Walt informed me that Ray Grinier, the "Devon's" captain, had not arrived yet but was expected aboard soon. We were to get underway at 6 a.m. on Sunday morning. I was to be the first mate for the trip.

Captain Grinier was to let me do all the navigating and piloting and he would check behind me. My purpose was to get experience with a 100 ton vessel, so I could be tested for my hundred ton license. Captain Grinier's signature was required on my application, so he had to be sure I knew what I was doing.

On Sunday morning we were greeted by strong northeast winds and decided to lay over in Atlantic City for one more day.

On Monday morning we got underway at 6:40 a.m. We still had that northeast wind blowing 18 to 25 knots and the sea was rough. We had hoped that the wind would blow the morning fog away, but it didn't. We had less than ½ mile visibility and had to rely on the radar, the compass and charts.

As we headed for Cape May, N.J., we had a following sea and it was really rough. Part of the crew was sea sick, including the cook, but it didn't matter anyway because it was so rough to cook.

We had plans to head south along the coast and enter the Chesapeake Bay early Tuesday morning. Due to the weather forecast, plus the present sea conditions, we decided that we would round Cape May and head up the Delaware Bay to the C & D Canal, then cruise down the Chesapeake Bay to Hampton Roads and pick up the Intercoastal Waterway.

The fog didn't clear until 3:30 p.m. that day, and we finally made Chesapeake City, Delaware on the C & D Canal at 5 p.m. It was really a welcome sight after seeing nothing but fog all day long.

On Tuesday, Oct. 2, we departed Chesapeake City and the fog was worse than the day before, but there was no wind. We had to depend entirely on radar, compass and charts. The channels were narrow and with our 6½ foot draft, there was no room for mistakes. One miscalculation and we could do a lot of damage to our props or rudder.

On October 3, we got underway at 6:30 a.m. The wind was blowing out of the southwest at 20-25 knots, and even on an 86-footer, the going was rough. When we were off Windmill Pt., seas were breaking clear across our bow, and I was really looking forward to making Hampton Roads and its calmer waters. We had plans to make Great Bridge that night and I was looking forward to spending a night at home. Even a boat this size gets small after several days.

Leaving Great Bridge

On October 4, we departed Great Bridge and for the next two days enjoyed some pretty good weather. We would run into an occasional thunder squall, but that just helped rinse the boat down, which was a chore that had to be under-taken every night when we docked. On October 6, we departed Swansboro, N.C. The weather was even prettier than the two previous days and I was really looking forward to getting some sun. We got about a quarter of a mile from the dock and both engines died. Right off, I was sure of what was wrong. We must have picked up some water in our fuel. The tide was running strong in the direction of the dock we had just left, so we decided to drift as close to it as possible, before dropping anchor. Just as we were about to drop anchor, a 16-foot outboard pulled alongside and asked if he could help. I was sure that he could not pull our 108 tons against the tide, but he could steer our bow close enough to the dock so we could get a line on it and then let the current swing us around side-to. It all went as we planned, and in about 15 minutes we were tied at docksides. It had really made the little outboards' day to be able to give a tow to a boat that size.

The rest of the day we spent pumping out over 50 gallons of water from our number two fuel tank, bleeding the manifolds and injectors on both engines and changing all the filters. It took until six that night to complete the work, and we were all really glad when it was done.

We had no idea where the water had come from. We had run on fuel tank #2 the previous day with no problems. That night we had transferred fuel from #1 tank to #2. We knew that the contaminated fuel had come from #1, but it had been on board for several months, and Ray could not remember where he had last filled that tank.

On October 7 we again departed for Swansboro, N.C., and the weather was perfect, and we made good time. We occasionally picked up some water in our primary fuel filters, but we drained it before it reached the engines. Things were looking good.

Encounter with a gill net

At 4 p.m. George informed Ray and me of a small boat in the channel. We slowed the engines to an idle and gave a blast on the horn. We could see the old man in the boat was working on something, and we wanted to be sure he saw us approaching. We then decided to pass on the port side and give the old man plenty of room. We had no idea that he had stretched a gill net completely across the channel until we were almost abreast him. When I saw what was going on, I pulled both engines to neutral, I knew that it was too late to back down so I wanted both props stopped when we picked up the net. With our draft, I knew it would hang up on our rudders. I was right. Our momentum was pulling the old man's boat and net with us. I grabbed a knife and ran aft. I knew that it would only take a few minutes for us to drift out of the channel and the last thing we needed was to get 108 tons aground. While I was running aft, Ray had backed down on the starboard engine, and I knew that I had my work cut out for me.

Ray assured me that he wouldn't put her in gear, and I dove overboard. I went under the stern and hacked at the net until I had cut the old man's boat free. I then came up for air, and then went under again. We were nearly aground. I was working in the mud as I cut the remainder of the rope and net from the prop. The port prop was clear, so once I came up and climbed onto the swim platform, Ray kicked her ahead and we were back in the channel.

That night we docked at Little River, S.C. and then departed on Monday at 7 a.m. The next few days were uneventful, except for the beautiful scenery and the porpoise that played in our bow wake. They would get about two feet in front of us and jump. It was amazing how they could avoid getting hit. They would swim in our bow wake for several miles then get tired and disappear.

On October 11, we put in at Jacksonville, FLA. to let Violet and George off. They were running out of vacation and had to return to Norristown, Pa.

On October 12 we departed Daytona Beach, Fla. at 6:45 p.m. This was to be the last leg of our journey, we expected to make Fort Pierce, Florida by 7:30 p.m. that day if all went well.

At 5:05 p.m. we were several miles north of Vero Beach, Fla. and the scenery was some of the best we had all week. There was nothing but the narrow channel and a lot of green trees reflecting in the water. The channel was well marked with red and green day markers, and they were casting their bright colors on the glassy water. It was enough to put you in a trance, but I knew it couldn't last. I glanced over at the depth finder and noticed that the depth had dropped from 10 feet below our rudder to 8 feet and was still dropping. I then looked up to see if I was headed out of the channel, so I could correct the course. We were dead in the channel. The depth started to drop faster, I reached up and pulled both engines to neutral. I hoped that our momentum would carry us over the shoal without us having to use our engines, but that was wishful thinking. I heard a crunching sound, and we then came to a dead stop. By this time, Ray was on the bridge. We both checked again to insure that we were in the channel, and we were. We decided that we would use our starboard engine to get off the shoal. We already had a slight vibration in it from when the "Devon" went aground on a previous trip. There was a good chance that there might be some damage when we tried to get her off, so we preferred it to be that trip.

We eased the starboard engine into gear enough to start us moving, and then disengaged it until our momentum stopped. After doing this four times, we were finally off the shoal. We then engaged both engines to determine if there was any damage. We increased our speed to a 1000 RPM. There was no noticeable increase in vibration and we were sure that there had been no damage. We finally arrived at the Pelican Yacht Club in Fort Pierce, Fla. at 7:45 p.m. and I have to admit, I was glad the trip was over.

There was a message waiting for us when we arrived. Instead of flying back on a commercial airline, the owner of the "Devon" was sending his private plane to pick us up and bring Ray and me back home. I was really impressed and couldn't think of a better way to end a trip such as this.

On Sunday morning, we departed the Vero Beach airport on a twin jet prop Beachcraft enroute to Norfolk. Ray is a pilot, so he let me have the honor of riding in the co-pilot seat, so I could get a better view. The sky was clear all the way back to Norfolk and I really enjoyed the ride. But I have to admit, I was glad to be back home.

Next week I will bring you back up to date on what is going on with the fishing and also the hunting in the area.

Councilman Reid Ervin was concerned that, by pursuing projects to be done with the $9.1 million, projects in the referendum would be delayed.

Hanbury said it was up to council. Council could stop with its present program and sell its $9.1 million in revenue bonds "if you don't wish to go in the desalting business, (which would be partly financed with the new issue)" or to continue the utilities program.

Residents to pay going rate for utility hookups

City unable to adjust higher line fee rates

It's time that Virginia Beach citizens who have no sewer line fee contract with the city face up to the fact that they'll have to pay higher going rate, Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. told Virginia Beach City Council at an informal session Monday evening.

Statistics produced by the Public Utilities Department show the cost to equalize line fees high and the methods of financing the cost limited.

Councilman Reid Ervin had suggested that the city equalize the fees within a subdivision, so that all the people living in the same subdivision would be paying the same line fees. At present it is possible for three rates to be charged in the same subdivision.

He had suggested that the people themselves should decide whether or not to underwrite the cost in a referendum which would be held at the same time as one contemplated for another utilities construction bond referendum next year.

This plan, however, is prohibited by law. City Manager George L. Hanbury said that the city's bond counsel said that under the financial structure of the city bonds can be used only for capital outlay and the plan, which would include paying rebates, would be in violation of the Public Financing Act.

Ervin had estimated the cost of equalization would be under $2 million. A report submitted by Utilities Director Aubrey V. Watts show that the minimum refund to customers for projects already completed would be $3,311,930 plus the minimum future revenue loss of $1,153,625 for a total of $4,465,555.

Hanbury said that without the bond referendum, the only ways to finance the cost would be with the general fund or the utility fund, neither of which is capable of making a substantial contribution, a tax increase or an additional service charge. Watts said that if the city's 42,000 users paid a dollar a month for this purpose, it would take 11 years to erase the debt. He added that he didn't know whether some of the records would be available and that it would be an "administrative nightmare."

Some property owners have an early contract with the city to pay $440 for the first 100 feet. In subdivisions See HIGHER RATES, p. 12

Pickin' pumpkins

Halloween is almost here, and thoughts of giant Jack-o-lanterns sent Rham Fenton, age nine, and brother Jonathan, age five, on a search through the Virginia Beach Farmers Market last week to find the perfect pumpkin. They settled on one from the booth of Rudy Delfenthal. Then the only problem was figuring out how to pick it up and carry it home! The boys are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fenton of Virginia Beach.

Beach drug problem 'minimal,' say local police

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

A Virginia Beach police report released Monday concludes there is only a "minimal" drug problem in the entire Tidewater area.

During a discussion of the report at an informal session of Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon, City Manager George L. Hanbury said that his concern in releasing the report like this... (may leave) the false impression that no problems exist."

The study was prepared by David Krahl, public safety analyst, with the Planning and Analysis Unit of the Department of the Police and directs its research to the "Role of the Department of Police in the Enforcement of Narcotics, Alcohol and Vice Statutes in Virginia Beach." Krahl has completed work for a PhD in sociology except for his dissertation, Hanbury said.

The conclusions are based on citizen-initiated calls for service, citizen satisfaction, and statistics on the number of charges made by police and the incidence of drug-related cases in area hospitals.

The report is intended to answer charges published in a local newspaper that drugs and vice are flourishing in Virginia Beach. The article also charged that the primary reason for this flourishing drug and vice trade was "because high-ranking members of the Virginia Beach Police Department are all but ignoring the problem."

Hanbury told council that the drug problem was "not as flourishing as the headline would have you believe... If we were having a permissive attitude it would have been more noticeable by the public... there would have been more calls from the public... The newspaper article is not accurate and is unjust to the administration."

He said, "We have never had a request for service where we have not been able to give service."

Councilman Clarence A. Holland, a physician, said "The chief (Police Chief W. W. David) put his finger on another problem, alcohol. I don't think you're going to change until the laws are changed. In Europe they make a blood test right on the road and send the (drunken driver) off to the pokey."

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr., presiding in the absence of Mayor Patrick L. Standing, said, "Our laws are a little lax."

Holland added, "I don't want anybody to think Virginia Beach has no drug problem. We will continue to work on it. I don't see any question that large amounts of drugs in the emergency room are on prescription."

The report also concludes that the most frequently abused substances are tranquilizers, non-narcotic analgesics and alcohol when used in combination with another substance. Legitimate procurement of tranquilizers requires the prescription of a doctor, but many of the non-narcotic analgesics such as aspirin and tylenol, as well as alcohol, can be purchased by consumers over the counter.

Data was collected for an eight-and-a-half year period from 1971 through August 1979. During this period, the report finds that less than one percent of all citizen-initiated calls for police services dealt with narcotics, alcohol and vice complaints (.99%). Only during the 1972 to 1973 period did the proportion of these particular types of calls marginally exceed the one percent level. The highest percentage of complaints occurred in 1974 (1.6%) compared with .76% in 1978.

The report concludes that because the citizen-related complaints are low that such incidents are not of primary importance to the public in as much as such violations are "victimless" crimes.

The low incidence of citizen-initiated calls for service may also indicate a lack of community sentiment for legal enforcement of the statutes and an indication of

Substance abuse treatment center finds new home

The Substance Abuse Outreach Center and Alcohol Treatment Programs have finally found a home in Pembroke Office Park after area residents opposed two other locations.

An additional $19,644 was appropriated by Virginia Beach City Council Monday night for the relocations of the programs which had been allocated $463,061 for the Fiscal Year 1979-80.

Formerly located at Atlantic Avenue and First Colonial Rd., the operations were expected to be moved to the 22nd Street city library facility. This was denied April 23 when area residents objected to the relocation out of fear that it would attract undesirable to the neighborhood.

The objections were repeated when the city recommended moving the operation to Birchwood Office Park and Council agreed at an informal meeting on Oct. 15 that a third site would be considered.

Councilman Clarence Holland said that he realized the city had tried hard to place the facility where it would be least objectionable to the community "but I feel we're placing it further and further from where it will do the most good... and at more expense. I think you can get better attendance in the Beach Borough."

Festivities mark Davis Corner station opening

The long awaited new building for the Davis Corner Volunteer Fire Department has finally been finished. The station's firefighters and area residents celebrated with a ribbon cutting ceremony and open house last Sunday, Oct. 14. Tours of the station and firefighting and rescue demonstrations were activities of the day. Located at the intersection of Independence Blvd. and Haygood Rd., the facility is one of 15 Virginia Beach fire stations.

Adding an air of festivity to the open house were these two costumed members of the station's rescue squad. Behind the dog's mask was Tammy LeDuc. Playing the clown was Nick Hubbert.

Virginia Beach cracks down on North End encroachments

The city of Virginia Beach is cracking down on encroachments onto the beach from 42nd Street through 89th Street.

City manager George L. Hanbury told Virginia Beach City Council at an informal session Monday evening that the measures are being taken because of the small amount of public beach available.

People with encroachments attached to their houses will be given one year in which to place an application with the city to legalize the encroachment.

Hanbury said that in cases where the resident has built a cement patio, added a brick planter and allowed vegetation to grow up around the encroachment, it would be a greater problem to remove the encroachments. These people will be given the opportunity to apply for an encroachment.

All other encroachments will have to be removed within six months of notification.

After the six months notice is up the residents will be given a ten day notice to remove the encroachments or the city will have them removed.

Public Works Director Oral Lambert said the encroachments include decks, patios, walks, volleyball stanchions and catamaran anchors... wooden posts or metal pipes which are dangerous.

Councilman Reid Ervin said that there is criticism of catamarans every year and that catamaran owners have tried to minimize the objectionable aspects.

Of the North end residents, he said, "some of those people are going to be awfully upset." One encroachment resulted, he said, when a property owner had to rectify the damages from a storm."

Hanbury pointed out that not everyone will have to move the encroaching structures.

Lambert said that the problem with the catamarans arises because the anchors are in clusters.

Councilman J. Curtis Payne, Jr. remarked that "an encroachment is an encroachment—little or big."

City Attorney Dale Binson said the difference is between approved and unapproved encroachments.

Ervin suggested that the city meet with civic leagues "to make sure they know the blow's coming before it occurs."

Councilman Donald Merrick said that the city will have to "come to grips with the catamaran problem." He said that he was continually getting complaints about the catamarans. "Some people want them and some are opposed to them," he said, but parked in the dunes and dragged on the dunes, they are destroying the dunes. "I don't think we can go through another summer..."

Hanbury said that a zone had been considered, like a surfing zone. The hokie cat popularity and the increased density on the beach are incompatible, he said.

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy, Jr., presiding in the absence of Mayor Patrick L. Standing, suggested that the problem be worked out informally.

Hanbury also agreed to announce the encroachment policy at a civic league meeting.

The Hampton Roads Water Quality Agency Executive Board will hold a quarterly meeting on October 26 at the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission Conference Room. The time of the meeting is 9:30 a.m. The public is invited to attend. Information regarding the meeting may be obtained from Paul E. Fisher, project director, at 460-1753.

Cape Henry Collegiate holds auction

Cape Henry Collegiate School in Virginia Beach will hold its Third Annual Fund-Raising Auction at the Virginia Beach Civic Center on Friday, November 2 at 7:30 p.m.

Auctioneer Durwood Zedd will bang the gavel on such items as a pinball machine, a Boston Whaler with sail, a Bryce Mountain ski trip, two Wayne Fulcher paintings, a jogging machine and other interesting items.

The auction, sponsored by the Cape Henry Parents Association, will be preceded by a buffet dinner. Tickets for the dinner are $5.95 and are available at the door. Music will be provided by the Tommy Gwaltney Jazz Trio.

A 1979 C-J 5 Jeep from Tidewater AMC Jeep-Honda will be raffled off at the auction. Tickets are $1. Cape Henry's auction goal is to raise $40,000 for the school. All funds will be used to make improvements to the gymnasium and to purchase equipment.

Beach Sheltered Workshop meets

On October 24 at 7 p.m. there will be a membership meeting concerning a fund raising project to help purchase much needed equipment for the Virginia Beach Sheltered Workshop. The workshop is located at 3432 Virginia Beach Boulevard. Call 486-4428 for more information.

First Colonial Booster Club holds meeting Oct. 25

The First Colonial Booster Club will hold a general membership meeting on Thursday, October 26, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium. The agenda will include discussion of plans for coordinating the Fall Sports Banquet to be held in early December. The banquet is held in order to recognize those participating in the fall sports program, including the school cheerleaders. The students look forward to this night of recognition made possible by the booster club as the school has no funds for such events.

The booster organization consists of parents and students associated with First Colonial High School interested in assisting various programs for the benefit of all students. All parents with students attending First Colonial are encouraged to join. The club makes possible events which are not provided for in the school budget.

Discovering where foster parents fail

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

Jean is 20, a 3.6 grade point average student in her second year of college in Tidewater; petite, vivacious, and is going to be married this summer. In the premarital counseling, I was skeptical enough of her story that I took the time to check it out.

Jean was raised as a foster child the last 17 of her 20 years. The juvenile court removed her from the custody of her mother when they found that she and her sisters were beaten, malnourished and left chained to the plumbing under the kitchen sink for hours. She is crippled in both knees from being repeatedly slammed into the wall. Jean cannot kneel.

She has lived in seven foster homes, has attended 31 schools and lived in approximately 20 towns, all in the same county.

Jean said she has eight brothers and 22 sisters, and has invited 10 persons to her wedding whom she refers to as "moms and dads."

Jean does not have any idea who her real father is, nor does her mother.

She pointed out that children do not have to be delinquent to be placed in foster homes, and gave examples of why a child might be placed in an out-of-home situation. She listed such things as severe marital discord in which the child suffers, or the family is broken by divorce, separation, or desertion and the remaining parent cannot care for the child. There are also the cases of abuse or neglect, where the family is a physical danger to the child.

Other children may have a severe emotional disturbance or some kind of behavior problem, most often meaning they are acting out their hostility or fears. All of the above need a home to go to, and loving hands to care for them.

Jean noted that when youngsters are placed in a new environment, whether it is juvenile hall, a shelter care home, or a foster home, they should not be expected to immediately adapt or adjust, because what they have just gone through could have been very dramatic.

She says that foster parents should try to understand that much of the foster child's misbehavior is not because they are abnormal or a deviate, but because they may be angry or hurt by the recent separation from their natural parents or last foster parents. Many children believe they are being separated because they are bad and are being punished, she added.

Jean feels strongly that placement failures are the biggest problem in foster home care. This reinforces the feeling in the child that the child is bad and that no one wants them. After a few such experiences ending in failures, it becomes extremely hard for them to give trust or love to anyone. This is tragic when this is carried over into adult life, she observed.

Jean insisted that foster children are normal, and are only using the resources that they have gathered from their past experiences to guide them in their reactions. There are usually very good reasons why foster children act differently in some situations.

She told me about the first foster home in which she stayed. The people had two of their own daughters and three foster daughters. She said that the foster children always ate their meals out on the porch on a picnic table, while the rest of the family ate in the dining room.

"My foster mother would go to the store and take her own children and grandchildren into the store and make us three sit out in the car. She would buy them candy, Cokes, and buy us nothing. At Christmastime, we got one package while her own children and grandchildren got seven or eight presents each."

She went on, "You can see, being so young and being subjected to this kind of treatment for six years, caused me to think that all foster kids were different from normal kids and that all foster children were treated the same as we were."

Groundbreaking ceremony scheduled for apartment complex for the elderly

Bishop Walter F. Sullivan of the Diocese of Richmond will officiate at a groundbreaking ceremony on November 3 at 2 p.m. for the Russell House, an apartment complex for the elderly in Virginia Beach.

Bishop Sullivan suggested the project a year-and-a-half ago to Virginia Beach citizens concerned with the needs of the elderly. He contacted Mrs. Mary Ellen Cox and a group of others who had worked with elderly people and suggested that they plan for the apartment complex.

Mrs. Cox then organized a board of directors which she describes as "broad-based" and includes clergy and laity, both Catholic and non-Catholic. Although the diocese provided the impetus for the project, Russell House will be governed by a private non-profit corporation.

Russell House, named for retired Bishop John J. Russell, will be open to persons 62 years of age and/or handicapped. The apartments will be open to people of any faith, race, color, or creed. Those persons who don't have sufficient income to pay the rent are eligible to receive government assistance so their rental would not exceed 25 percent of their income.

Russell House will be located in the Hilltop area of Virginia Beach on a 5-acre site at First Colonial and Wolfsnare Roads. Construction is expected to take 14 to 15 months, but some occupancy is expected in 11 months.

Russell House will be a three-story H shaped building.

Serving with Mrs. Cox are Professor Charles A. Taylor, vice president; Mrs. Betty McClane, secretary; Mrs. Shirley S. Baroness, treasurer; directors: Mrs. Alice Kirby Giancola, Mrs. Edith Finnegan, Rev. Clayton Crigger, Rev. Thomas J. Reardon, Dr. William A. Steiger and Chae Robin.

Thank God
For Little Things

Thank You, God, for little things
that often come our way—
The things we take for granted
but don't mention when we pray—
The unexpected courtesy,
the thoughtful, kindly deed—
A hand reached out to help us
in the time of sudden need—
Oh make us more aware, dear God,
of little daily graces
That come to us with "sweet surprise"
from never-dreamed-of places.

Good nutrition is no trick as a treat on Halloween

Liz Van Dsenberg of Virginia Beach, a member of 'Weight Watchers,' reminds us to be calorie-conscious during the Halloween season when we are surrounded by candy and goodies. She sends the following to Sun readers:

The nutrition-minded mother was heard to say to her conscience, when handing out Halloween candy, "The devil made me do it."

Halloween seems to signal a proliferation of candies, cookies and cakes, as people everywhere dole out what's expected on this holiday.

The concept of handing out treats goes back as far as the Druids, when it was believed that the night of October 31 was sacred to the Devil. Demons supposedly came out to create mischief and cause harm. The only protection against their evil was either to disguise yourself as one of them or to bribe the demons with something they liked - in particular, dainty foods and treats.

While the fear of the devil soon went out of the holiday, the curious custom of both dressing in a costume and of receiving "treats" lived on, probably because of its obvious appeal to children.

But candies and cookies are really 'moderate treats.' There's a very old children's Halloween chant, part of which gives evidence of what were the initial delicacies.

'Soul, soul for an apple or two,
If you've got no apples, pears will do,
Up with your kettle, down with your pan,
Give me a good big one and I'll be gone.'

In offering candy on Halloween or any holiday, we are acknowledging that nothing else can be considered such a 'treat.' We are abetting the habit of eating foods that are, primarily, calories and little else of nutritional value.

There are a number of alternatives to the "candy" route most often taken on Halloween. A parent can encourage "trick or treating" for UNICEF, or any other reputable charity, which skirts food entirely. There is, also, the old fashioned custom of handing out those nuts, raisins, and seasonal fruit our ancestors were so fond of. But, if you have the need to hand out something closer to what children are more commonly used to getting, why not whip up a batch of homemade treats whose ingredients you can rely on for nutrition.

Weight Watchers offers a simple recipe for "Apple Chews" for instance, that are cookie-like, but are made, primarily, of apples and nonfat dry milk. They are easy, inexpensive and, just as important, devilishly good.

Apple Chews

1/3 cup (75 mL) nonfat dry milk
1 tablespoon (15mL) flour
Artificial sweetener to equal
2 teaspoons (10 mL) sugar
1/4 teaspoon (1 mL) cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon (1 mL) baking powder
1/2 medium apple, pared, cored and grated
1/4 teaspoon (1 mL) vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 375°F. (190°C). IN a small bowl combine dry milk, flour, sweetener, cinnamon and baking powder. Add apple and vanilla; stir until evenly moistened. Divide mixture into 4 portions. Drop each portion, from a spoon, about 2 inches (5 cm) apart, onto a nonstick baking sheet, which has been sprayed with a nonstick cooking spray. Wet back of spoon by dipping it in water. Flatten each portion by pressing with wet spoon to about 1/4-inch (3-mm) thickness. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes or until golden. Remove from baking sheet; cool on wire rack. Makes 1 serving.

Each serving is equivalent to:
1 serving Milk (1 cup or 250 mL skim milk)
3 servings Something Extra (1 tablespoon or 15 mL flour)
1/2 serving Fruit.

Safe 'trick or treating'

Remember the breathless excitement of Halloween? Going door to door through the spooky darkness, disguised in masks and outlandish costumes, levying a treasure of candy, fruit and small change from neighbors.

It ranks close to Christmas in the affection of youngsters, but it also has the potential for accidents and is the occasion for a certain amount of vandalism, so parents and homeowners should take some simple precautions to ensure that this Halloween is a happy occasion.

Excited youngsters, often in dark clothing, can be a real danger. They should carry a flashlight, stay on the sidewalk, and when crossing streets make sure that oncoming traffic can see the light. Children under seven should not go out without an adult escort. Older children should do their trick or treating in the company of a friend or two, and it's wiser to stay in their own neighborhood, rather than roam to a far side of town in the hope of richer gifts.

Homeowners face a different problem: the "trick" side of trick or treat. Minor delinquent acts are historically part of Halloween, so put away lawn furniture, garbage cans and other such objects. Lock your car - in the garage - eggs are hard to get off windows. Turn on outside lights, both to guide little visitors and discourage vandalism.

Inside your home, have your candy at the door, so you don't have to let in an uncontrollable troupe of witches and clowns and tramps. And don't leave small valuables near the door to tempt someone who on an ordinary night would never think of stealing.

If you have to be away on Halloween, outside lights and an alarm system are your best protection. Burglars disguised in masks and costumes sometimes use the occasion to break into unoccupied houses and apartments.

Halloween is a night for children to revel in the excitement of trooping down dark sidewalks with other outrageously costumed kids, of ringing doorbells and getting treated with vast amounts of indigestibles. If you take the few precautions outlined here it can also be a pleasant experience for you, reviving warm memories of Halloweens long ago.

'Safety' costumes aid in avoiding accidents

Every year in Virginia Beach, there is the potential for needless accidents Halloween night because a motorist does not see a "goblin" dressed in black, or because a "ghost" trips over its costume and falls into the street. Parents can make Halloween safer with a few simple costume decorating tricks.

According to Dr. George Gillespie, President of the Virginia Optometric Association, Halloween accidents are most likely to happen when drivers cannot see children in the street and when children can't see where they are walking.

The first can be solved by decorating costumes with retro-reflective material. The second can be overcome by using makeup instead of masks to disguise young trick-or-treaters.

Dr. Gillespie cites optometric studies at Indiana University showing retro-reflective material on shoes and clothing makes pedestrians safely visible to drivers even at excessive speeds of 70 and 80 m.p.h. Nothing else, not even white clothing, can top it. Retro-reflective material is available in iron-on, sew-on, and stick-on varieties in most hardware and department stores.

"Let the kids make up their own designs with the material," Dr. Gillespie says. "Just be sure they will be visible from front, back and sides."

Dr. Gillespie advises against masks because they can slip out of place or have eye holes so small they block a child's view of approaching cars, objects on the ground, a hole, a step or the curb.

"It doesn't make sense to give your child good vision with regular vision examinations and then send him out after dark with that vision partially blocked." In using make-up, however, he cautions that it "should be of the non-allergic variety. Be sure it is applied with care by adults to avoid accidents with applicators." The doctor of optometry also suggests that children carry a flashlight or battery-operated lantern to help light their way.

Director of nursing services named

Christine M. Bump, R.N., was promoted to the position of director of nursing services at General Hospital - of Virginia Beach, effective Sept. 9.

Mrs. Bump, who received her Master of Science Degree in Nursing at the University of Michigan, has had experience as a staff nurse on both medical and surgical units. She was supervisor of the Learning and Skills Laboratory and also a clinical instructor at Eastern Michigan University. For the past two years, Mrs. Bump has been clinical coordinator for staff development and assistant director of nursing for staff development. She is the hospital's representative to the Shared Staff Development Committee of the Eastern Virginia Inter-Hospital Medical Education Committee and a member of the Virginia Chapter of the American Society of Health Education and Training.

Retired Beach admiral named bank VP

Richard E. Nicholson, RADM USN (Ret) of Virginia Beach has joined Virginia National Bank as a vice president in marketing, according to C. A. Cutchins, III, VNB president. Nicholson retired in September as Commander U. S. Naval Base and 5th Naval District Commandant, following a naval career spanning 36 years.

Admiral Nicholson's duties with Virginia National will include the creation and extension of financial services to the government and military communities in Virginia.

Admiral Nicholson's military career was highlighted by his service as both special assistant to and administrative aide for the Secretary of the Navy. He also had duty in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and served on the NATO staff in Naples, Italy.

Admiral Nicholson and his wife, the former Marilyn Fiedler, reside in Virginia Beach.

Non-residents using rec center cards

City Manager George L. Hanbury told Virginia Beach City Council Monday night that he would investigate reports that non-residents had membership cards for the Department of Parks and Recreation Center in Kempville.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberdorf said that she had received reports that non-residents were using the center and can get cards.

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that he had received calls also.

Hanbury said that Councilman R. L. Riggs has also asked about the matter.

'Fiber Fabrications' is theme of Beach fashion show

Twenty-five outstanding fiber artists from the southeast have been invited to participate in the "Fiber Fabrications" fashion show, to be held at the Sheraton Beach Inn on Friday, October 26.

The artists, including Lynn Sward, Margo Blair, Nancy Standlee, Gail Siddell and Pat Kirby of Tidewater, have designed fabric, clothing, jewelry, and accessories for special scenes which are being staged not only to show the fashions but to make an exciting presentation. One will be a Mardi Gras number, another a disco, and one will be on roller skates. The show will open with an exercise routine which is being kept a secret.

This is the second year for the fashion show, and after the showings, the fashions will be on view at the Virginia Beach Arts Center, for whose benefit it is being held. Tickets may be obtained by calling the center, 428-9294.

Esprit Modern Dance Company gives free public performances

The Performing Arts Unit of the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation invites the community to the performances of Esprit Modern Dance Company, October 31 through November 3 at 8 p.m. and Nov. 4 at 3 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center Theatre in Kempsville. All performances are free and open to the public.

The Esprit Modern Dance Company was founded in 1978 by choreographer Susan Long to offer area dancers an opportunity to improve technique, gain performance experience, and develop choreographic skills. The Esprit program, which consists of a company, a junior company, and an apprentice program, offers the Virginia Beach audience the opportunity to experience the creativity of modern dance.

The company's repertoire for this season includes two major works, choreographed by Susan Long, "Billy the Kid" and "Planets"; in addition to several pieces choreographed by company dancers - "King Louis Katz", "Pas de Trois", and "Icarus". A very unusual piece will be presented that must remain a surprise. Reservations are not required for the performances, but it is suggested that you arrive 15 minutes early to insure seating.

Tax assistants needed for IRS volunteer program

Volunteers are being sought by the Internal Revenue Service to assist low-income and elderly taxpayers who require help in completing basic federal income tax forms, the IRS has announced.

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program, according to IRS, is designed to help those who can not afford professional assistance and who find it difficult to visit IRS offices for tax help.

As participants in VITA, volunteers help low-income and elderly individuals who have relatively simple federal income tax returns to file. Volunteers also advise taxpayers on such basic tax matters as the earned income credit, tax treatment of pension benefits and dependency requirements.

VITA participants do not require special education or experience to train as VITA assistants. However, each volunteer must complete a two-to-three day IRS instruction session in basic income tax procedure.

Retired persons are especially needed to give special assistance to elderly taxpayers. The IRS will provide training materials, instructors and publications to clubs and organizations willing to sponsor programs.

VITA offices are set up in locations convenient to low-income taxpayers and the elderly, such as community centers, schools and churches and offer flexible operating hours during evenings and weekends.

During VITA's 10 year history members of social, religious and civic organizations, non-affiliated individuals and college students have provided help to millions of taxpayers as VITA assistants.

Individuals or groups interested in participating as a VITA volunteer should call IRS Virginia Beach, 461-3770.

Virginia Beach Arts Center receives federal grant

The Virginia Beach Arts Center has received a grant for $13,406.00 from the Institute of Museum Services, a federal agency in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, from its 1979 grant cycle.

The arts center, which is available for the residents of Virginia Beach as well as the many visitors year-round, was one of the 404 recipients of a Museum Services grant in the United States; over 1,700 grants were requested. Such awards are given to strengthen and improve the services museums can offer their communities by financial support for programs and operating expenses.

Burn victims increase as wood stoves increase in popularity

As wood stove owners in Virginia Beach prepare to warm themselves this winter, doctors are hoping that safety precautions in fire building will be remembered.

Each year, hospital burn units admit patients who have suffered severe burns from careless procedures in lighting wood stoves. Most accidents occur when the users have difficulty finding dry kindling wood with which to start a fire. Some will then reach for a kerosene or gasoline spout can for help. These explosive fluids poured over newspaper or logs can be deadly when ignited.

There was the case of a young man who several years ago on Christmas morning tried to light a fire with gasoline. He stood back as he threw a match to the fire, anticipating that sparks would pop, but it went off "like a bomb." The result was death caused by burns to 95 percent of the man's body.

The temptation to reach for the five gallon can of kerosene or gasoline that many people store in their garages is great when dry kindling is not easily available. People think of kerosene and gasoline as having no danger, say doctors.

In its container, kerosene, the most likely fluid to be used as a kindling substitute, is not flammable. The stream of oil won't burn unless mixed with air, but once the mixture occurs, the fluid is explosive. The explosion may take place in the stove, or blow back into the fluid's container, causing flaming oil to spread into the room.

In the past, physicians have treated mainly rural families for burns from wood stoves. The families have long used the stoves as a main source of heat. But, with the recent popularity of the stoves, the potential for danger has spread to all segments of the population. Burn victims from diverse educational and income levels are being treated for injuries resulting from hazardous methods of lighting the stoves.

Users of wood stoves should also note that any leak in the stoves or pipes is a danger signal. Allowing increased amounts of carbon monoxide to escape can be deadly.

Also, children should be supervised around the wood stoves. Even stoves which are lined inside and out may be too hot to touch safely. Contact burns could result if a curious child touches the stove, or gets too close in an attempt to stay warm. Parents should educate their children about the dangers of hot wood stoves.

Free energy saving workshops, exhibitions offered to public

Notice to the Public of Proposed Experimental Tariff of C & P Telephone Company

Notice is hereby given that C&P Telephone Company has filed experimental rates with the State Corporation Commission proposing to establish Circle Calling Service. This proposed service option will offer discounted direct distance dial calling. The charge for each message will be less than the normal toll charge. This plan will replace Tele-Plan routes. The proposed date of effectiveness of these rates is December 18, 1979.

A hearing regarding these rates will be held before the State Corporation Commission on November 14, 1979, at 10:00 a.m., in the Commission's Courtroom, the Thirteenth Floor of the Blanton Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia.

All material filed by the Company may be reviewed in the Clerk's Office of the Commission and at any Business Office of the Company where bills may be paid.

On or before November 7, 1979, all persons who expect to participate in the public hearing as a party Proponent, to offer evidence and to cross-examine witnesses, must file a Protest in conformity with the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure, and, at the same time, serve a copy on the Company.

All interested persons who desire to make a statement concerning the proposed Circle Calling Service, and not participate as a party Proponent, may appear in the Commission's Courtroom at 10:00 a.m. on November 14, 1979, or mail the statement to William C. Young, Clerk, State Corporation Commission, Blanton Building, P. O. Box 1197, Richmond, Virginia 23209.

Dining unit for a small space

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. My husband and I will be moving into a new Beach retirement apartment soon which has one room to serve as living room and dining room. We will be very cramped for space but I do want a nice dining place for the two of us.

I'd also like to be able to use the table as a desk when it isn't busy as a dining table. I have the usual problem of needing storage space, too.

Would you suggest built-ins and a drop leaf table or have I overlooked some other solution? — L.L.

A. Retirees who are moving to smaller quarters as well as new families just starting out are often faced with the same problems of creating a dining space out of next to nothing, or, at best, one wall.

One of the best looking and most functional plans, I believe, is to combine a small rectangular table with a pair of tall wall units — with drawers for storage below and shelves (covered or open) above for treasures.

Some dining units are designed this way, even with light bridges to connect the tall pieces between the table. Usually the table will accommodate two persons easily and when it is pulled out from the wall, it will often serve four. When not in use for dining, it serves handsomely as a library table for reading and writing.

I think this sort of arrangement is better looking than built-in shelves and cabinets which, unless done by a master craftsman, look homegrown. And when a craftsman does the cabinets, they are prohibitively expensive.

Decor score

Incidentally, if you like to haunt second-hand stores, you might look out for a small rectangular table which has an expanding device to it that was popular in the 1930s give or take a decade. The table is split down the center lengthwise and when pulled apart, a folded leaf pops up to create an almost square table.

Q. I have a stair wall in my living room where I put my couch, really the only place I can put it. The only other wall has a picture window with a hot-air register under it. I would like to know what pictures I can arrange on the wall above the couch. — E.N.

A. First, you have to answer one question. Do you want to call attention to or away from the stairs? To call attention to the stairs you could arrange small prints and interesting artifacts all over the entire space — treating the wall as a background for a collage for paintings, prints, drawings, woven things and other treasures. You could even stair step up the wall a series of prints or other articles.

If you wish to play down the stairs you might use one dominant painting and perhaps just a few small prints to balance the space, concentrating primarily on the space directly over the couch and its adjacent area.

Instead of one large painting, you can accomplish much the same effect with a series of prints massed together on the wall and framed the same way. A mass of prints often is about as weighty as one large picture.

Q. We own an older home on the outer edge of Kempsville with hot-water heat. Do you have any ideas on how to cover the radiators in the children's rooms and utilize the wall space above for shelves and storage? — B.W.

A. The most attractive solution I have seen is to build a cabinet to cover the radiator. This obviously must be large enough to be safe and so you can line the inside with thin asbestos to prevent any scorching.

Often designers create louvered tops and front sides to the cabinet so that more heat can be released easily.

If you wanted to have door on the front, you could open them completely or simply open the louvers when the heat is on.

The cabinet can be painted the wall color so it blends well. On the sides of the heater cabinet you could build or install ready-made low chests or cabinets for storage and top them with fabric covered pads to create mini-window seats for snuggling up with a book.

Or you could install unpainted chests of drawers or unpainted desks on each side of the heater. Then above the whole arrangement I'd install plain shelving on adjustable tracks because children never seem to have enough books and treasures.

Please send questions for Decor Score to the Virginia Beach Sun.

City approves road construction resolutions

Virginia Beach City Council Monday evening approved resolutions concerning the construction of Great Neck Road and North Witchduck Road.

In one, council requested the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation to proceed with the design of Great Neck Road. The plan follows the existing road-way corridor from Shorehaven Drive to Thomas Bishop Lane, then follows new alignments to the east of the existing road from Thomas Bishop Lane to Shore Drive. The plan calls for a new bridge over Long Creek and Long Creek Canal and a debris fence adjacent to the bridge.

The second resolution states the city will be responsible for making arrangements for the adjustment and or relocation of utilities for the construction of North Witchduck Road.

City Manager George Hanbury said that the city can now proceed with the acquisition of land for the Great Neck project, which will take a year, when bids will be requested.

All rights of way have already been acquired for the North Witchduck Rd. project.

Housing demand at beach will continue to be strong

By LIN J. COOPER

Director of Communications, Tidewater Builders Association

The Federal Reserve's recent decision to increase the discount rate to 12 percent is aimed at reducing demand for credit and slowing inflation.

Reaction from the housing industry has been immediate. "While the tight money approach might reduce speculation in the commodities market and slow inflation in other sectors of the economy, the policy is disastrous for potential home buyers and small builders," said C. Gerald Harris, president of Tidewater Builders Association.

In essence the housing industry and the new home buyers have been thrown once more into the front lines in the fight against inflation. As measured by the recessionary pattern of the last 30 years, the pace of new housing construction will begin to slow later next year.

If the prime lending rate reaches the 15 percent that experts predict, the cost of construction loans to the builder will reach a record of 17 or 18 percent. This increase in construction financing will boost the cost of building a typical new home upward by about $1000. Once again, if one can possibly buy, it does not pay to wait a moment longer.

It's also believed that the mortgage rate will rise to 13 percent. The difference between an 11 percent and a 13 percent rate on a 30-year, $60,000 mortgage is $92 a month. A considerable amount to a first time homebuyer. Another reason not to wait to buy.

But all is not gloom. Several factors are in operation in our area that brighten the picture considerably. The first is that Tidewater is economically stable so the predicted decline in housing should not be as great here as in other areas. Starts in Tidewater are predicted to be down only six percent in 1980 thus assuring this area that there will not be a deep recession and further, that there will be sufficient housing to satisfy demand.

Notes from the shelter industry

Every indication I've seen in Virginia Beach and environs suggests that demand is still very strong. Homes are selling very well in spite of the interest rates.

It may well be that a certain segment of the homebuying public has decided that inflation will not abate, housing will not become cheaper, and thus if they are ever to afford a home, it must be as soon as possible.

And in fact, there seems to be a lot of mortgage money available at the Beach from builders who purchased it some time back and are anxious to pass along the savings to the buyer. A brief phone survey revealed rates as low as 9 1/2 percent on a conventional loan will be available through mid-1980 at least.

Manpower Training Program promotes careers in residential construction

Fifteen young Virginia Beach men and women are on their way to becoming journeymen electricians thanks to Tidewater Builders Association and the City of Virginia Beach.

They graduated Friday, October 19 from a six-week pre-apprenticeship course in electricity. It was the first step in the four-year Manpower Training Program designed to recruit and train young people for careers in the residential construction industry.

City Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf was the guest speaker at the graduation. Also speaking were TBA Vice President Ramon Breeden, City Manager George Hanbury, and Assistant to the City Manager for Housing and Community Development, Benjamin C.

Moore.

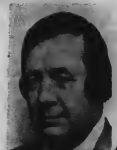

The 15 students, many of whom were unskilled and unemployed, were recruited by the office of Housing and Community Development. Approximately half came from Beach communities targeted by the office for future rehabilitation. The program's goal is to place as many electrical apprentices as possible in jobs with rehabilitation contractors who may eventually be involved in the renovation of the targeted city areas. Communities such as Seatack, Newlight, Atlantic Park, Gracetown and Burton Station have been targeted.

Remedies for varicose vein ulcers

By WILLIAM J. GOLDWAG, M.D.

Q. I was wondering if you could recommend anything to put on a varicose vein ulcer.

I have suffered such pain that many nights I do not get any rest. I am 70 years old. The doctor only suggests staying off it.

I keep my leg wrapped most of the time. The ulcer is on the inside of my right ankle. It isn't the deep kind, but just stays raw and drains all the time.

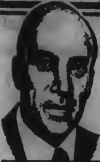

A. Varicose vein ulcers develop in some people as a result of the poor nutrition of the skin in the lower leg.

Blood that removes toxins and waste materials doesn't flow fast enough in the area so there is congestion and pooling of the blood in the veins and capillaries in the area. The skin becomes very thin, discolored and very sensitive. The least scratch or bruise can then open and fail to heal leaving an ulcer or raw opening.

This ulcer is then subject to further trauma and infection from the outside. The poorly nourished skin is likely to itch and scratching during sleep tends to aggravate things also.

There are three things you can do when these kinds of ulcers fail to heal. They are rather old-fashioned but I have seen some awful looking ulcers heal as a result of their use.

The first is wet compresses of .25 percent acetic acid applied several times a day for about 30 minutes to one hour. This is especially useful when the ulcer is infected or dirty around the edges.

Ask the doctor

Before any ulcer can heal, any infection must be controlled. Because the blood supply is defective, antibiotics taken by mouth may not do that much good.

Furthermore, varicose ulcers may have an unpleasant odor to them. The acetic acid gel rid of the very nicely and in time will produce a nice, clean reddish base to the ulcer which then allows it to heal in from the sides.

The second aid is to apply a foam rubber padding with gentle pressure against the skin surrounding the ulcer. This compresses the swollen veins around the area which decreases the congestion of the skin and improves the chances of healing.

The third procedure which seemed to help when everything else was failing, is the application of an Unna boot.

The "boot" comes in a roll like plaster and is applied like a cast. It consists of a gauze bandage roll impregnated with zinc oxide paste and gelatin.

Usually one or two rolls are wrapped around the foot and ankle (not tightly) then covered by another roll or two of dry gauze. It doesn't harden like plaster but remains flexible.

The idea is to leave it on for as long as possible, at least several weeks at a time and keep reapplying it until the ulcer heals up. It goes a long way toward relieving the ulcer pain while it is on and itching is also controlled this way.

Of course, other means of treating the varicose veins at the same time are essential. These include elevating the legs, moving the feet frequently, using elastic stockings, etc.

Q. Is tetracycline a capsule used in the treatment of tuberculosis or other contagious lung problems? Is Myambutol for tuberculosis?

What is wrong with a man who will smoke cigars when he has an oxygen tank in the house? That man is my mate of 35 years.

A. Tetracycline is a broad spectrum antibiotic often used in patients with chronic lung disease such as emphysema or chronic recurrent bronchitis—to reduce the chance of getting acute respiratory infections of bronchitis which can further damage the lungs. It is also used to treat such infections when they do occur. It is not effective against the tubercle bacillus and is not a treatment for tuberculosis. Incidentally, most chronic lung diseases aside from TB are not contagious. On the other hand, the victim of the lung problem is very susceptible to picking up colds and infections from others.

Myambutol (or ethambutol) is a drug used in the treatment of tuberculosis. It is seldom used by itself but usually in combination with another anti-tuberculosis drug such as Isoniazid or Streptomycin.

It isn't unusual for some people suffering from a chronic illness to persist in habits that are harmful to them.

Many people who have had lung cancer or have emphysema persist in smoking. Why do they do it? They usually say they enjoy it too much to stop or that they don't have the willpower to stop.

I suspect that it is really a self-destructive tendency in that individual's personality. Nagging him will do no good whatsoever. It represents that person's choice in life as long as he is aware of the consequences of his actions.

Health and nutrition

Should we be afraid of cholesterol?

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY

Cholesterol has become a household word in Tidewater, bandied about, misunderstood, and feared as a major component in heart and circulatory problems.

The reasons for such questionable notoriety began more than fifty years ago when two Russian scientists produced atherosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) in rabbits, by feeding them cholesterol.

To make matters worse, cholesterol was subsequently found to be a part of the atherosclerotic plaque, laid down inside human arteries.

Such plugged-up circulation has been tagged as the forerunner of strokes and heart attacks - certainly one of our major American health problems. Animal studies do not always transpose accurately to human beings.

The precise functions of cholesterol are still not completely understood. It is known to be a part of the cell wall and of the sheath that surrounds nerve fibers. It is also involved in the production of human sex hormones, and of adrenal cortex hormones.

Large quantities of cholesterol are found in the skin to protect and act as a precursor of vitamin D.

Is this all bad, and should we be so afraid of cholesterol? Of course not! The human being needs cholesterol, and in fact, some is produced by the body itself. The only other way to get it is through the diet, and its distribution is widespread in many foods.

It is in all animal tissue and animal products, such as eggs, yolk, milk, cheese, ice cream, butter, lard. Sea foods - crab meat, lobster and shrimp are also high in cholesterol.

Strangely, it is not found in plants, cereal grains, fruits or vegetables. They do contain similar sterols, but they function differently. Plant sterols and fiber can actually interfere with the absorption of cholesterol while hard dietary fats enhance it.

The polyunsaturated vegetable oils, especially safflower and corn oil margarines, taken in place of butter, can reduce blood cholesterol levels. The amount of human circulating cholesterol can only be derived either from foods or by synthesis in the body, from all tissues, but mostly by the liver.

The diet has a direct effect on the body's own production of cholesterol. Fasting or starvation will lower blood levels. Weight reduction with calorie restriction will have a similar result. Most people take between 500 and 800 mg. of cholesterol daily in their diet.

Today's normal range of circulating blood cholesterol levels is between 160 to 250 mg. This may change tomorrow, however. As research continues, the trend seems to be toward lowered levels and today's normals could be tomorrow's abnormalities.

In people over 65 years of age, new studies do not support a modified fat or low cholesterol diet. The reason is that many older people do not eat enough food anyway to meet the recommended requirements and to further restrict the fat would place them in nutritional jeopardy.

There is much controversy on this question. It is generally thought that blood cholesterol levels increase with age, rising until the 50s, in men, and then leveling off. In women, the levels rise more slowly, but are sometimes higher in their 50s and 60s.

In a four-year study of 137 elderly women between 75 and 95 years of age, a diet high in polyunsaturates caused significant drops in blood cholesterol levels. They developed a tolerance, however, and despite the continuance of the diet, their cholesterol levels eventually returned to their base figures. This leads some doctors to ignore mild increases in cholesterol and triglyceride levels in elderly people, unless they are also overweight.

The New England Journal of Medicine published an article by Dr. George V. Mann (297-644, 1977) that discounted the effects of the low fat, low cholesterol, polyunsaturated fat diets in the management of high blood cholesterol levels and heart disease. He feels that excessive blood cholesterol is not due to a high dietary intake, but rather to an impairment in the body's normal conversion of cholesterol into bile acids. A buildup of pooled body cholesterol then affects the arteries.

Naturally, many physicians and dietitians will refute this claim. Who is right? No one knows yet, but in the meantime, I will suggest the time-tested diet that has worked for me. It remains low fat, low cholesterol, polyunsaturated oils, high nutrition and controlled calories until something better comes along.

Dear Shirley: I don't understand about zinc in cereals - do they have it or not? D.S.

Dear D.S.: In countries where cereals provide most of the diet, the phytic acid in the cereals prevents zinc absorption. Yeast-leavened breads are OK because yeast enzymes destroy the phytic acid. Animal protein and a well-rounded diet provide Americans with ample zinc.

Dental question box

Braces are best worn at an early age

By Ron Rosenthal, D.D.S.

W. When is the best age to start my child's orthodontics?

A. I strongly recommend that every child have a yearly orthodontic consultation starting at the age of seven.

We can straighten teeth at any age, 6 to 60, but there is only a limited time of rapid body growth. It is logical to have the teeth straightened early in this active growth period so that the face can grow around a good dental foundation. In this way we are able to achieve the maximum in tooth alignment as well as the best profile development. In other words, we must take advantage of the growth period, not waste it on the development of bad habits and poor muscle function.

Early treatment permits the teeth to grow into better natural positions rather than allowing them to grow into an abnormal position and then forcing them back to where they started. We can use lighter forces because the bone is softer and the teeth are shorter. Treatment is often complete before braces become a social problem. Cooperation is better in the younger age groups, because the child has not usually developed definite treatment attitudes or become suspicious of adults and adult requests.

The early treatment plan usually involves less pressure, less time, less cost, but a more stable tooth balance, and allows the face to develop to its natural inherited pattern without the insults of malpositioned teeth. In addition, concerns about teeth shifting significantly at a later date have proven to be unfounded.

Do you wear outdated glasses?

One out of every two Americans wears glasses and chances are a good many Virginia Beach residents are walking around with outdated prescriptions.

"I've seen patients come up with some ingenious ways of adapting to subtle changes in their vision," said Dr. George Gillespie, president of the Virginia Optometric Association. "Some hold their newspaper at arm's length. Others sit two or three feet from the television set or squint to read street signs. Some tip their glasses to see better. Then there are those who claim restaurant lighting is too low when what they really need are prescription lenses to read the menu," the optometrist said.

Most people wear glasses to correct nearsightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism and presbyopia (a loss of focusing ability for close work). These conditions can change without warning and without being immediately noticeable. This is one reason why annual vision examinations are important.

The doctor of optometry can pinpoint vision changes and prescribe the proper lenses before squint lines become permanent "crow's feet" or the person begins experiencing early fatigue or headaches. Dr. Gillespie stressed consumers should be wary of quick vision examinations.

"You can't do a thorough, accurate examination in five or ten minutes. If you haven't been for a year, expect the examination to take from 30 to 60 minutes, depending upon your needs," he said. That time is spent not only in correcting your vision but also in examining your eye health and determining whether or not your vision skills — such as being able to see "out of the corner of your eye" — are up to par.

During the examination, the doctor of optometry may also find signs of certain health problems, like diabetes or high blood pressure, that are not directly related to vision but that show up in the eye. Optometrists routinely refer patients with disease signs for appropriate care.

Outdoor light ordinance may be considered

The City of Virginia Beach is considering an ordinance which would control the use of outdoor lights in residential areas.

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. told city council Monday night that someone in the Kempsville Borough has built a tennis court in his yard with lights. There is no ordinance which controls lighting in a residential area, although the city does have an ordinance which requires lighting in commercial areas to reflect away from residential districts.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF PROPOSED RATE CHANGES BY THE CHESAPEAKE AND POTOMAC TELEPHONE COMPANY OF VIRGINIA

Notice is hereby given that on September 28, 1979, The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia filed tariffs with the State Corporation Commission of Virginia which affect the charges customers pay for intrastate long distance service provided by C & P. These tariffs are to become effective on January 1, 1980.

The filed toll changes reprice intrastate toll service and replace toll tariffs which went into effect on March 3, 1979 subject to Commission investigation and hearing: The new tariffs slightly modify the March 3, 1979 tariffs by adding 1¢ to the overtime period rates for intrastate toll calls, 5¢ to the initial period rates for operator assisted and person-to-person intrastate toll calls in certain mileage bands and 10¢ to the initial period rates for person-to-person calls in the 167 to 194 mile range. The Commission has instituted Case Number 20082 to investigate the reasonableness of the toll tariffs filed by C & P.

All tariff material filed by the Company may be reviewed in the Clerk's Office of the Commission and at any Business Office of the Company where bills may be paid as listed in the General Information Section or the Consumer Telephone Guide Section of the telephone directory.

Any formal protest concerning the filed tariffs must be filed with the State Corporation Commission and must comply with the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure. All such protests and any other written communications regarding the filed tariffs must be filed no later than December 15, 1979, should reference Case No. 20082 and be addressed to William C. Young, Clerk, State Corporation Commission, Blanton Building, P.O. Box 1197, Richmond, Virginia 23209. The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia.

EXTRA CASH It's so easy... advertise the thing you no longer need in the classified columns of your hometown newspaper. In practically no time at all, people in your neighborhood will know what you have to sell. You're on the road to extra cash... somebody will read your ad and buy!

MARKET PLACE The classified section of your hometown newspaper is essentially the bulletin board and market place of the community. It locates the interested customer as no other advertising can do. This is because the customers in your neighborhood turn to the classified pages and search out the advertisement for what he or her wants to buy.

Beach to host Conference on Gifted and Talented

The third annual Southeast Virginia Conference on Gifted and Talented will be held October 26 and 27 at Plaza Junior High School in Virginia Beach. The theme of the conference is "Prisms for Potential".

Some 300 educators and parents from 12 school divisions that comprise the southeast region will attend the two-day conference on gifted and talented education. The president of the region is Kathleen Schoonmacker, director of the gifted and talented program in Norfolk Public Schools. Dr. K. Edwin Brown, principal of the newly opened Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented in Virginia Beach is vice president.

The conference opens at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 26, with the keynote address by Joseph Renzulli, professor of educational psychology at the University of Connecticut and author of a major book on gifted and talented education, The Enrichment Triad Model.

Thirteen workshops and general sessions which will follow the address both Friday and Saturday will deal with the three stages of Dr. Renzulli's enrichment triad model - content, awareness, process, and product.

Dr. E.E. Brickell, superintendent of Virginia Beach Public Schools, will make opening remarks at the conference, which is being hosted by teachers and officials of the gifted and talented program in Virginia Beach Public Schools.

Parents of gifted students, teachers, and college and graduate students who wish to attend are invited to the opening session and speech by Dr. Renzulli.

Recently, the Alpha Mu chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, an international honorary fraternity of women educators, presented a certificate of recognition to Dr. Brown marking the opening of the Old Donation Center for the Gifted and Talented. The certificate was presented by Patricia Terry, president of the chapter, a teacher in the Virginia Beach program, and by the state Alpha Delta Kappa president, Lucille Sebren, who teaches in a similar program in Norfolk.

Beach student receives ROTC award

Patricia N. Gurnee, a junior at Virginia Tech in Air Force ROTC from Virginia Beach, has been awarded the Air Force ROTC Vice Commandant's Award after attending field training this summer at Plattsburg Air Force Base in New York.

Miss Gurnee holds the rank of sergeant.

The purpose of this award is to recognize the most outstanding student in each flight. Students were judged on leadership potential, effectiveness in communications and the ability to gain the support of others and direct their actions in both formal and informal situations.

Beach student selected for college soccer team

Joel Butts has been selected as a member of the Averett College men's soccer team, according to Vesa Hiltunen, athletic director, and coach of the team.

A graduate of Frank W. Cox high school, Butts is an art major at Averett. He is in his freshman year.

TCC names new faculty

Eight new full-time faculty members and four others who have joined the faculty from other positions in the college are included in the 1979-80 teaching staff at the Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College.

New faculty members include Pat Hodges, dietetics; James Coble, geology; James E.

Cutchins, recreation leadership; Mary Perry, biology; Craig Nilson, fine arts; James S. Kiraly, instructional television producer/director; and Vivian Natale and Penny Lewis, counseling.

Three former members of the Norfolk Skills Center faculty have transferred to the Virginia Beach campus. Sondria Lamb and Bernard Peters have joined the Business Division faculty, and Maxine Singleton is a member of the English faculty.

D. William Bridges, former Director of Continuing Education at the Virginia Beach campus, is now a full-time member of the community and social services faculty.

TCC grads score above national average

The Virginia Beach campus of Tidewater Community College offers the only training program for respiratory therapy technicians in the Tidewater area, and results of a national certification examination show graduates of the TCC program score higher than the national average.

The certification examination is given to technicians who have been out of school at least one year. According to Dr. Michael McCall, division chairman for mathematics and natural sciences at the Virginia Beach campus, the TCC former students scored an average of 81 points, while the national average was 79.

Dr. McCall adds that 86 percent of the TCC graduates passed the examination, while only 56 percent of all who took the examination nationwide averaged passing grades.

Hotel - Restaurant - Institutional Management

Director of Continuing Education - Tidewater Community College, Virginia Beach

In keeping with the large tourist and hospitality industry in the Tidewater area, Tidewater Community College offers a program to train those interested in entering the field of Hotel-Restaurant-Institutional Management (HRIM). The HRIM program also prepares students for careers in other types of institutions besides hotels and restaurants. The programs for food service management and dietetic technician training qualify graduates to work in dietary programs in schools as well as hospitals, nursing homes, and other medical facilities which provide food services to patients.

The HRIM program consists of three separate curricula: hotel-motel management, food service management, and dietetic technician certification. The total program has grown in popularity due to excellent career possibilities, not only in the Tidewater area but elsewhere in Virginia and all over the world.

The hospitality industry needs qualified employees everywhere, and a career in HRIM often means traveling or being willing to move to another city for a promotion. Faculty members in the HRIM program stress the mobility required in many areas of the field and the fact that young people 19-22 have particularly good career opportunities in HRIM because of their willingness to travel. Of course, travel is not always necessary for the HRIM graduate. Many people have built substantial careers in the field without leaving the Tidewater area.

Career possibilities for HRIM graduates are especially varied. A graduate of the hotel-motel management program, for example, might have options for a career as an accountant, personnel director, food and beverage director, or executive housekeeper as well as hotel manager.

In the area of food service management, a graduate might opt for restaurant manager or food service director in a school, hospital, nursing home, or other medical facility. Many private industries also have their own food service programs where a food service management graduate might find employment.

Today college counts

The Tidewater Community College HRIM program is well recognized throughout the state. Employers from all over Virginia recruit TCC graduates for their staffs.

HRIM students have a number of options for financing their education. Cooperative education is popular with HRIM students, many of whom work in local hotels and restaurants while they attend school. Through the cooperative education program, these working students earn college credit as well as pay for their hours on the job.

In addition to regular financial aid programs available to all students, there are several national and local scholarships awarded to students specifically enrolled in the HRIM curricula.

If you enjoy working with people, if you are excited by the prospect of having a variety of career areas to choose from, and if you like the idea of a career that could enable you to travel, you might consider the HRIM program at Tidewater Community College. For more information, contact any TCC campus.

HIGHER RATES

where such a contract is held by some, Ervin suggested all should be charged the lower rate. As it is, others, who came in later, have a $575 contract with the city and all the others have to pay the present rate of $780.

He said that in subdivisions where the lowest rate charged is $575, all should be charged that rate.

Under the plan, rebates would be paid to all property owners who paid the higher rates.

Using this plan, the Utilities Department came up with the $4,465,555 figure.

If all lots in all projects were recalculated at the $440 rate, according to Watts, the cost would be $5,165,225 for all projects with agreements and $5,498,220 for all projects without agreements.

Hanbury said that under the circumstances the only recommendation he could make would be in for the city to proceed as it has been. The city will recognize signed contracts and others will have to pay at the going rate.

He said, "Council in 1970 had a genuine concern to get people to hook on. Council had legitimate honest reasons. I don't think anyone anticipated inflation would grow as rapidly."

Watts said his figures do not take into consideration the administrative costs for adjusting the fees.

McCoey, presiding in the absence of Mayor Patrick L.

Standing, said, "I think this thing can drag on for years and years and years. I think we should put this thing to rest...recognize the problem. People are the victims of circumstances." He said that the people should not be led on with false hopes. "The time has come to stop this. We're going to have to take the ball by the horns and say we can do nothing more for you."

Ervin said, "I don't think when we made this decision we were under pressure." He persisted that exceptions should be made for people, like those in Ballyllyn, who did not know they were included in a health hazard area and did not have an opportunity to sign up at lower rates. In health hazard areas, residents are given no choice but to hook on to the sewer. In other areas, 51 percent of the residents are needed before the service is taken into the community.

Ervin pointed out that the records in the city's files have not been conclusive about whether the people were duly informed.

Councilman John A. Baum said that in the future the city should send notices and not depend on civic leagues which may not include all the people in an area.

McCoey said, "We've got to politically bite the bullet. You're going to have to stop somewhere."

There were no requests for any further action.

DRUG PROBLEM

increasing support for repeal of laws relating to victimless crimes, the report finds.

Supporting findings in a recent Citizen Attitude Survey made in Virginia Beach found that most citizens were satisfied with law enforcement, the report also concludes that the "allocation and distribution of departmental resources for the enforcement of this particular class of offenses is congruent with the public's demand for enforcement of drug, alcohol and vice statutes."

Statistics are also used in the report to show that clearance rates (offenses cleared by arrest or through exceptional fashion) are higher for violations of narcotic drug laws than for other Part II offenses. Over the study period, this rate is 91 percent while the total for Part II offenses 95.9 percent. The total figures represented in the rates are 5,659 for the narcotics violations and 78,067 for the others.

The high clearance rates, the report concludes, may show that police officers actively seek out and apprehend perpetrators of narcotics offenses and that enforcement practices of this nature may exceed the expectations held by the community.

For the period from 1971 to 1977 the greatest proportion of narcotics — related charges were placed for "possession for use," ranging from 60.8 percent of all drug charges placed by the Detective Bureau involving possession for use over the time frame, 3,670 were made for possession of marijuana (78.8%).

The next largest categories were for "possession with intent to distribute" (10.8%) and "distribution (9.2%). Figures were taken from a report submitted by Maj. C. H. Payne, commanding officer of the Investigation Division, on Aug. 27, a few days after the newspaper article appeared.

During 1978, according to the report, 232,314 persons visited hospital emergency rooms in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake. Of this number, 1030 were drug-related conditions in the form of overdoses, chronic effects or unexpected reactions. Less than one percent (.44%) were for the treatment of drug-related problems.

Hanbury emphasized that not street drugs, but prescription and over-the-counter drugs sent people to the hospital "to the point where I was shocked." He said he was especially surprised over the incidence of aspirin-related ailments — "things you don't consider dying from an overdose of."

From October 1977 to September 1978, four area medical examiners classified 24 deaths as a result of drug abuse. Substances responsible directly or indirectly for the deaths include psychostimulants, barbiturates and non-barbiturate sedatives, narcotic and non-narcotic analgesics, tranquilizers, anticonvulsants/antinauseants, inhalants/solvents/aerosols, and alcohol when ingested with another substance. These same also caused either directly or indirectly the deaths of 11 persons in Virginia Beach in 1978 and the first six months of 1979, according to the report.

The substance abused most frequently by persons seeking medical treatment was tranquilizers, accounting for a little over 25 percent of all those drugs involved in emergency room contacts in 1978.

Since physicians prescribe tranquilizers to their patients, there is only a negligible black market for this particular class of substance, according to the report.

The second most abused class of drugs are non-narcotic analgesics (15.9%) which include aspirin, Tylenol or Darvon. They are available by prescription or over the counter.

All other substances (except alcohol) accounted for another 15.6 percent. These include narcotic analgesics

(3.4%) such as heroin, methadone, demerol and percodan; amphetamines (.6%) including Benzedrine, Dexedrine and Methedrine; all barbiturate sedatives (2.8%) such as Seconal, Nembutal and Phenobarbital; all non-barbiturate sedatives (6.5%) including Quaalude, Somnux and Dalmane; all hallucinogens (.8%) including L.S.D. and P.C.P.; all cannabis derivations (1.1%) including marijuana and hashish, and cocaine (.4%).

Alcohol was the third most frequently-abused drug category by persons seeking emergency room treatment in Tidewater last year when used in combination with something such as non-narcotic analgesic like aspirin or a tranquilizer such as Valium.

Using the figures on the people who sought emergency room treatment in Tidewater during 1978, the report concludes that the overall level of substance abuse is rather low.

The inference from the statistics, the report finds, is that the abuse of some prescription drugs and "over-the-counter" substances account for much of the drug problem which may exist in this area which has been echoed by a number of local medical and hospital personnel.

One emergency room administrator from New York City said that between 1969 and 1971 at one New York City hospital three to four heroin overdoses per shift were not uncommon. Since arriving in Virginia Beach in 1971, however, he says that he has not seen a single heroin overdose in the emergency room.

The report states that "a number of medical officials agree that if street drugs were being abused by any significant fashion, such abuse would be detected by medical personnel. For example, if heroin were being extensively used, there should be an increase not only in heroin overdoses but also a significant number of hepatitis cases resulting from the use of unsterilized needles. These two phenomena have been conspicuously absent in Virginia Beach."

The report admits that individuals may seek some type of counseling for an abuse problem, which would not be reflected in emergency room statistics. In Virginia Beach counseling is offered by the Drug Outreach Center and the Community Alcohol Treatment Services under the jurisdiction of the Mental Health/Mental Retardation Services Board's Comprehensive Substance Abuse Division.

From July 1978 to June 1979 3,315 referrals were made to these programs of which 1,834 (55.3%) were for a wide variety of drug-related problems while the remaining 1,481 referrals (44.7%) were for alcohol abuse.

The report cites the National Commission on Marijuana and Drugs and "alcohol dependence is without question the most serious drug problem in this country today. Although traditionally most members of our society do not consider it as such."

The report further states that from July 1977 to June 1978, 1,793 persons were incarcerated in the Virginia Beach Correctional Center on charges of public drunkenness and driving under the influence of alcohol, while 353 were put in jail during this same period on dangerous drug charges.

From July 1978 to March 1979, 1,334 individuals were incarcerated on charges of driving under the influence of alcohol and public drunkenness while 313 were jailed on dangerous drug charges.

Referrals to substance-abuse programs may indicate, the report concludes, that the public wishes to have substance abuse problems dealt with by agencies other than those responsible for law enforcement and formal, social control.

Beach, blind & boat

Despite cooler temperatures offshore fishing flourishes

By ED LEWIS

Virginia Beach Sun Columnist Writer

Cooler weather has finally moved in to the Tidewater area and is causing both fresh and salt water temperatures to drop. Although many anglers are starting to winterize their boats, there still seems to be plenty of fishing left for those who know where to go.

In the area of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, tautogs are plentiful. Alfred P. Schubert of Virginia Beach landed a 9 lb. 8 oz. citation tog at the first island and Hughey P. Norris of Chesapeake matched it with a 9 lb. 8 oz. one at the third island. Both skippers boated about 30 togs each for the trip.

The bay span is also yielding a few stripper and that action should increase as the water temperatures drop. Trolling for rock can be complicated, but once you have mastered it you will be in for some of the more exciting fishing in the area. As the stripper action picks up, I will bring you tips on what types of rigs to use, when and where to use them and how to use them. So you might want to hold off on winterizing your boat and motor.

Although the bay fishing has slowed considerably, this past week's warm weather has produced excellent fishing around the off shore wrecks and the light tower. Charter and head boats out of the Virginia Beach Sports Fishing Center at Rudee Inlet had excellent luck this past week end on bluefish, tautog and sea bass.

Five anglers from Princeton, West Virginia definitely made their trip worthwhile. Dewell White, Larry Farley, Jay Clatworthy, Jim Dillon and Dell Thump each landed a citation chopper in the area of the Chesapeake Light Tower. The choppers weighed in at 17 lb., 16½ lb., 16 lb., 17 lb. 4 oz and 17 lb. 6 oz. respectively.

There were over 30 citations weighed in at the fishing center this weekend. The majority were for blues, but others included tautog, sea bass and two citation spot. The citation spot were caught right in Rudee Inlet by Robert Muse and Robert Copeland, both of Virginia Beach. They weighed 20 lb. and 18 oz. respectively.

Mrs. Fred Feller at the center told me that there were a lot of blues, togs and sea bass caught that fell only ounces short of being citations. So there seems to be plenty of large fish left in the area. Mrs. Feller told me that they have charters booked up until the first week in December.

Down at Nags Head, things are just about as slow as they are in the Bay. Milton, at Tatem's Bait and Tackle Shop, told me that there are plenty of king mackerel off shore but that the surf fishing has been slow. Milton did say that there were plenty of grey trout being landed in Oregon Inlet. The trout have been running anywhere from 1½ lb. to 11 lb. A few taylor blues have been taken in the surf around the inlet, but the action has been slow.

Milton said that the temperature has been around 80° all week and that has been hurting the fishing the most. He said that once it cools off a little, there should be plenty of larger blues in the surf, along with trout, croaker and spot.

On the freshwater scene things are pretty good. Otis Nelson at the Northwest River Campgrounds told me that everybody that goes out on the river has been catching plenty of Crappie. Otis said that the crappie are being caught on small shiners and a lot of the ones caught have weighed close to a pound. Many of the anglers have been bringing back as many as 30 to 40 fish.

On the hunting scene, dove hunters have been enjoying an excellent season. Ed Kaul of Chesapeake gunned a field off Battlefield Boulevard Friday afternoon and had excellent shooting. Within an hour Ed had his limit of birds. It is top secret information on how many shots it took, but Ed did report that there

A coelacanth, a fish that was thought to be extinct for 60 million years, was caught off the coast of South Africa in 1939. A comparison with fossils showed that it had not changed at all during that time, according to the National Wildlife Federation.

Animals such as dogs whimper when they are upset, but the only nonwere plenty of birds.

Speaking of birds, the marshes on the Eastern Shore's seaside are full of clapper rail. A full moon or good northeast blow should push the tides up enough so that rail hunters won't have any problem in getting their limit of 15 birds. November 4 will be our next full moon, so if you can't wait on the northeastern, try and plan around that time. I will let you know what time of day the high tide will be prior to the 4th.

On my recent boating trip to Florida, I had a chance to observe many types of pleasure craft and how they were operated. I saw everything from huge luxury yachts to small rowboats and some of the ways they were operated would scare the pants off you. The main problem was wake. No matter how small the boat is, it is going to cause wake. If it is under power, and when passing a marina, even a small wake can cause damage.

Another type of negligent operation I observed was small boats (including rowboats) that failed to move over for larger craft that had to stay in the deeper part of the channel. Some of the larger yachts draw five to six feet of water and getting to close to the edge of the channel could result in costly damage. I own a boat that only draws three feet of water, and I always yield to the deeper draft vessels.

Remember safe boating is courtesy, common sense and close adherence to the rules of the road.

Lightning kills an average of 600 people in the U.S., and injures 1,500 more every year, according to the National Wildlife Federation. In addition, lightning sets off 9,000 forest fires in a typical year.

Esprit Modern Dance Company to perform

The Performing Arts Unit of the Virginia Beach Department of Parks and Recreation invites the community to the performances of Esprit Modern Dance Company, October 31 through November 3 at 8 p.m. and Nov. 4 at 3 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center Theatre in Kempsville. All performances are free and open to the public.

The Esprit Modern Dance Company was founded in 1978 by choreographer Susan Long to offer area dancers an opportunity to improve technique, gain performance experience, and develop choreographic skills. The Esprit program, which consists of a company, a junior company, and an apprentice program, offers the Virginia Beach audience the opportunity to experience the creativity of modern dance.

The company's repertoire for this season includes two major works, choreographed by Susan Long, "Billy the Kid" and "Planets"; in addition to several pieces choreographed by company dancers - "King Louis Katz", "Pas de Trois", and "Icarus". A very unusual piece will be presented that must remain a surprise. Reservations are not required for the performances, but it is suggested that you arrive 15 minutes early to insure seating.

VWC plans fine arts expansion

Virginia Wesleyan College plans to double the size of its fine arts facilities by the fall of 1981, President Lambuth M. Clarke told some 300 parents attending Parents Day at Virginia Wesleyan on Saturday.

The Virginia Wesleyan chief executive told the group that the Board of Trustees has approved the preparation of working drawings for an addition to the present fine arts building. These drawings are to be considered by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees in November and college officials hope to have the project ready for bid in early 1980. The cost of construction is estimated at $300,000-$350,000.

The three fine arts departments of art, music and theater-communication have a combined enrollment second only to business/economics. There are five full-time faculty members in the three departments plus four part-time teaching staff. A major is offered in both art and theater-communications. A student may concentrate in music but the college has no major in that field at this time.

Most art and theater-communications activities are now housed in the present 9000 square foot fine arts building. Theater productions are given in the chapel. Some art classes are held in other academic areas. Music is housed in the science center and music programs are presented in the chapel or the Science Auditorium. The expanded facility will bring all these fine arts activities into one location. A major part of the new addition will be a 62 x 62 laboratory theater.

Dr. Clarke told the parents that Virginia Wesleyan had once again gone against a national trend among independent colleges by registering a three percent increase in enrollment this fall. The total enrollment is 804, up from 775 in 1978. About 350 of the students live in dormitory housing. Another fifty are in nearby college arranged apartments and townhouses. About 400 commute. Sixty percent of Wesleyan's students come from the greater Tidewater area. Sixteen states and 14 foreign countries are represented in the student body. Ten percent (10.2 percent) of the student body is 25 years of age and over. The president cited this as a significant trend among small, liberal arts colleges. The number of students in this category has increased by 15 percent at Virginia Wesleyan over the past two years. Dr. Clarke told parents that he did not anticipate any substantial increase beyond the 804 enrollment during the foreseeable future.

"We are extremely fortunate to have had a very favorable enrollment trend during a time of declining enrollments for many independent colleges," said Clarke. "The eighties are projected as a decade for stable or reduced enrollments for colleges and universities as we experience a period which will have a smaller number of traditional college-age students," he reported. Clarke cited the location of the college in a major metropolitan area, the smallness, a caring atmosphere, a strong teaching faculty and the church relatedness as primary reasons for Wesleyan's success in enrollment in recent years. "These same factors will be important for us in maintaining a stable enrollment during the 1980's," he said.

Dr. Clarke repeated his call for substantially increased endowment funds as "the greatest need of the college."

Mental Health Services Board conducts public hearing at Beach

The Virginia Beach Community Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services Board will conduct a public hearing on its draft Comprehensive Plan on Thursday, November 8. The plan deals with mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse services in the City of Virginia Beach. The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, Administration Building, Princess Anne Municipal Center.

The Services Board is the local agency responsible to City Council for public mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse services for the residents of Virginia Beach. The board is holding the public hearing to provide interested individuals in the community, as well as public and private agencies and organizations, an opportunity to express their views on the proposed plan. Following the public hearing, the Services Board will adopt its Final Plan which will then be the basis for its request for future program and funding support from the City Council and the state.

Individuals interested in speaking at the hearing should call 499-3737 to have their name placed on the speaker's list. Persons speaking as individuals will be allotted five minutes, persons representing agencies/organizations will be allotted ten minutes. Persons unable to attend the public hearing may submit written testimony to the Service Board Administrative Office, Pembroke Six, Suite 218, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23462 by Nov. 9.

Copies of the draft plan are available for public review at the following locations:

Mental Health & Mental Retardation Services Board, Administrative Office, Pembroke Six - Suite 218; Outreach Program, 2022 Atlantic Avenue; Wildwood Center, 1876 Wildwood Drive, (off First Colonial Road); Comprehensive Mental Health Services, Pembroke Three-Suite 109; Community Alcohol Treatment Services, 1168 First Colonial Road - Suite 12; All Virginia Beach Public Libraries; Department of Public Libraries, Municipal Reference Division, Administration Building, Princess Anne Municipal Center.

Bedevel your friends with Halloween trivia

When talk turns to the supernatural, as it surely does in Virginia Beach this time of year, bedevil your friends with some Halloween trivia compiled from three respected trivia handbooks, "The 1979 Guinness Book of World Records," "The Book of Lists," and William E. Maloney's "The Worst of Everything."

You can start with the truly earth-moving story of Johann Heinrich Karl Thiem, a sexton and gravedigger of Aldenburg, Germany, who dug a total of 23,311 graves over a 50-year span until his death in 1826. That's a bit more than a grave a day.

In the same vein there is the report of two men in Poland who emerged from a World War II underground bunker - in 1951. Demolished by retreating German forces, the bunker had been buried from January 1945 until June 1951. One man died immediately upon surfacing.

Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard, two unfortunate spouses of Henry VIII; the Vermilion Phantom, who appeared to Henry VI and Napoleon; the Flying Dutchman ship which has been sighted periodically in full sail since it went down in 1680; the Epworth Poltergeist, witnessed by John Wesley's father, Rev. Samuel Wesley; and the Drury Lane Theatre Ghost, said to bring good luck to actors who see it.

Then there's the ghost of Charles Bosmer, whose appearance is said to have started spiritualism in America; the Angel of Mons, a regiment of phantom angels which saved retreating British forces in World War I; the Borley Ghost, a nun who died in 1667; and the White House ghost of Abraham Lincoln, witnessed by both Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

ESP anyone?

Believers in extrasensory perception should be heartened by the performance of Pavel Stepanek of Czechoslovakia, who identified hidden cards with an incredibly small margin of error in tests conducted between May 1967 and March 1968. The odds of his display being pure chance are 100 octillion to one. The results of the tests were so fantastic that they were not published in scientific journals.

Then there is Mrs. Louise Cook, a medium who did for spiritualism what Richard Nixon did for executive privilege. From "The Worst of Everything," in a story titled "The Worst Medium with a Message," we learn that Mrs. Cook held seances for London society people, guaranteeing dancing and talking spirits. During one seance, a customer grabbed a spirit by the wrist and wrestled it to the ground. The unearthly being was discovered to be a very earthly Mrs. Cook in her underwear.

In the just-for-creeps class there is the Kalong bat, a flying mammal that fulfills everyone's worst Dracula fantasies. The bat, found in Malaysia and Indonesia, has a wing span of up to 5 feet 7 inches. There is also Murari Mohan Aditya, a resident of Calcutta, India, who has grown the five fingernails of his left hand to a

Breaking the burial-alive record

For those who are interested in breaking the current burial-alive record, the Guinness book cautions that no more entries in the category will be accepted unless, "the depth of the coffin is a minimum of 2 meters below ground with a maximum length of 2 meters, width of 70 centimeters, height of 100 centimeters and a maximum aperture of 10 centimeters for feeding and communication." The current, though unsubstantiated, record for voluntary burial is 217 days and 37 minutes. Coffins, anyone?

For ghost-sightings, England is the undisputed front-runner, with more apparitions reported there per mile than anywhere else in the world. The English also claim the most durable ghost - a Roman soldier who has been marching around the cellars of the Treasurer's House in York Minster for 19 centuries. According to ghost authorities, the "half-life" of most ghosts is about 400 years. Must be all that exercise.

'Ghastly ghosts' through the ages

Naturally enough, of the 10 most "ghastly ghosts" named in the "The Book of Lists," five reside in England. They are, in order of descending ghastliness,

Green Run SCA officers

Green Run Elementary students recently elected their 1979-80 officers for the Student Cooperative Association. From left, they are treasurer Allen Brelaud, fourth grade; president Danny Haberman, sixth grade; secretary John Zirkle, fifth grade; and vice president Jodi Heine, sixth grade. The Green Run SCA sponsor is fifth grade teacher Lindsay Ditchburn.

Your personality can kill you

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

Gary S. of Virginia Beach was extraordinarily successful, 38 years of age; had a great family, and a wonderful wife.

I said HAD because Gary died of a heart attack. I felt angry at the loss of this outstandingly fine man, the unnecessary grief that came to his family. I have done some homework on what some of the personality factors are that cause death from heart attack in a person like Gary.

What I found out was that the very things that made Gary topnotch in his profession were the very same things that could very well have led to his death.

He was aggressive, ambitious, competitive and impatient. This is the very type of man that heart specialist, Dr. Frederick Richey says is a man marked for an attack.

This man has given his life to the area of heart work and he said that a person who is courting a cardiac disaster is often extremely pressured about being every place he is to be right on time. He is a person who becomes impatient at slow traffic or inept service. He is often someone who is impatient with a person who is slow to make a point. He seldom has hobbies, and he is more often than not uninvolved in helping in keeping the house or home.

In questioning Dr. Alfred Mageoan, I found that he noted almost the same personality traits, but he added that he found that whatever the potential victim is doing, he is also trying to do more.

He is trying to reach a higher state in his lifestyle, and seems to equate accomplishment in numbers.

By now it is traditional that people fall into two caisses. Type "A" persons are the most likely to have the heart attack. This is the kind of person who often speaks forcefully and may clench his fists and pound the desk to make his point. Often his face contorts to express the surging emotion that can be behind his speech.

Planning for retirement

By HARVEY RIDINGER

Field Representative, Social Security Administration

When is the best time to start planning for retirement?

Most people in Virginia Beach would probably have to think before answering the question. Many would probably say somewhere around the late 50's or early 60's.

However, in these inflationary times, with people living longer, the people most likely to enjoy their retirement years are those who start planning much earlier in their working lives.

Although most people can look forward to Social Security as their primary income in retirement, Social Security benefits will not replace all of a person's earnings. They replace about 30 to 60 percent of your pre-retirement earnings, depending on your level of earnings.

This means that people who wish to maintain their standard of living in their retirement years must supplement their Social Security benefits with private insurance, savings, private investments, pensions, and so

Let's talk

The Type "B" person is more relaxed, less precise about meeting the demands of the clock, likes both art and good books, and accepts their limitations. Most important, they accept themselves without envy of others, their accolades, achievements or material rewards.

In discussing the subject with my personal physician, he said that a Type A person is more likely to be an outstanding salesman and go into management. The Type B person is either working in the stockroom or is the president of the company.

Some of the helpful comments I received were the simply commonsense kind of things that help Type A persons become Type B persons. They are such things as learning to eat more slowly, savoring the foods, escaping into books which demand concentration, learning to listen instead of interruption, planning some idleness each day, and learning not to schedule more than can be handled: learning to think of one thing at a time.

The best bit of advice I had was to learn how to make yourself rich inside instead of through your possessions — then you will have a chance to live a lot longer and much more richly.

I wish Gary had known about hearts what I know now. It could have not only changed his life, it could have saved it.

Your number's up forth.

For most people, the choices and options for supplementing Social Security over a working life can be viewed not only in terms of current pay and benefits, but also in terms of potential retirement benefits. While this may be less important when starting a career, it becomes increasingly important to prepare for the later years as time passes.

Insurance, for example, becomes more costly the older one gets. And some investment opportunities may come once in a lifetime.

Authorities say the ideal age for serious retirement planning is in the 40's. This is late enough for you to be stabilized in your career and early enough to make

Voter appreciates Barrow's thrift

Editor, Virginia Beach Sun:

The economic situation of today is one of great concern to each of us. The taxpayer is being hit in the pocketbook everyday by rising rates of essentials as well as bureaucratic unessentials.

Recently the Richmond Times-Dispatch printed an article by George W. Wilbur stating "some state legislators are downright miserly when it comes to spending the taxpayers money on themselves." Only one Virginia Beach representative, Bernard Barrow, was listed among the 14 State Senators and House Delegates returning substantial portions of their office expense allocation.

Bernard Barrow returned approximately 25% of the yearly allowance this past year and did not use his legislative telephone credit card at all. In these times of rapid inflation with no end in sight the taxpayer would do well to send Mr. Barrow back to Richmond to represent the taxpayer's best interest.

whatever changes you may decide upon.

While your income will be reduced in retirement, so will your expenses. It is estimated that the average person will need approximately 70 percent of after-tax, pre-retirement income in order to maintain his or her standard of living during the first year of retirement.

The more you know about Social Security, the more effectively you can plan for your retirement, using those benefits as a base on which to build the level of income you desire. We have a number of informative pamphlets here at the Social Security office you may want to get. One is "Thinking about retirement," which answers many of the questions that come up. In the meantime, there are several points about Social Security you should keep in mind.

Unlike most private insurance programs and pensions, Social Security benefits keep up with the cost of living. When your payment is first figured, it reflects the increase in average wage levels in the national economy over your working life. Once you become eligible for benefits, they increase with increases in the cost of living.

Also, you can continue to do some work after

Beach students graduate from leadership courses

Twenty-eight Virginia Beach high school students were recently graduated from the Junior Achievement and Dale Carnegie Leadership Courses. The students were among a class of 40 young people from the Tidewater area awarded scholarships to attend the 14 week course. Demonstrated leadership ability was the criterion used by Junior Achievement of Tidewater to select the Virginia Beach high school scholars.

The course focuses on various stages of development of leadership skills and abilities, memory techniques, presentations to groups, human relations techniques and group dynamics.

The group included: Cynthia Brown, Melinda Numson, Missy Janney, Michael Mackey, Daniel Brunner, David Butts, Patrick Crowley, Edward Dearborn, Sherri Falkner, Karen Feller, Keith Fitzgerald, Donna Gowers, Valerie Hutton, Troy Landers, Debbie Leary, Carrie McCormack, Julie Morrison, Sally Moynihan, Jana Munson, Rick Murphy, Robert Schulz, Amelia Stubbs, Sherri Sweeney, Jesse Thomas, Steve Walls, Jimmy Woodson, and Kevin Way.

The Dale Carnegie Leadership Course is identical to the one taken by tens of thousands of adults around the world. It was offered in conjunction with Junior Achievement activities in the four city area.

Junior Achievement of Tidewater is a business education organization supported by over 500 leading Tidewater businesses. This year the JA program will let over 2000 high school students organize and operate miniature corporations under the guidance of adult business volunteers. The 15 week program is designed to increase the student's understanding and appreciation of the American private enterprise system.

Marching Marins take 2nd place at ODU

Band members, spectators, and judges were treated to a full afternoon and evening of Marching Band performances presented by 17 high school bands from three states at Old Dominion University's "Marching Band Classic" held at Foreman Field in Norfolk on October 27th.

At the completion of the preliminary competition, the Marching Marins of Bayside High School placed first in the Class B category, which included 14 high school bands from Tennessee, Maryland, and Virginia.

In the finals, the Marching Marins were awarded the 2nd place trophy, a student scholarship of up to full tuition at O.D.U., and a cash award of $100.

New York choreographer joins Beach dance scene

Valerie Tusa, a dance teacher and choreographer from New York City, recently moved to Virginia Beach where she is teaching modern jazz for teens, adults and the gymnastic teams at Gymstrada and the Academy of the Tidewater Ballet.

Her background includes training with such teachers as Merce Cunningham, Luigi, Alvin Ailey and others in New York City. She has choreographed for Hunter College Dance Company and The Big Apple Dance Theatre in New York City and for the San Francisco Dance Theatre and the San Francisco Arts Festival.

Her new piece, Foodloose, will premiere in the November 11 concert of the Tidewater Ballet. The music is composed by Scott Joplin and will be performed by the Ragtime Ensemble, comprised of members from the Virginia Philharmonic.

For information about tickets, performances or dance classes, call The Academy of Tidewater Ballet at 622-4822.

Complete your S.S. application by phone

Since the Social Security Administration moved into its new location at the Federal building in Norfolk, residents of Virginia Beach have had trouble making use of the facilities due to poor parking conditions.

The Social Security Administration has instituted a new "tele-claims unit" to help alleviate this problem. The purpose of the unit is to complete applications for Social Security benefits by phone and mail them to recipients for signature. This eliminates the chore of driving downtown, only to find there are no parking places.

The Administration says with the tele-claims unit, it can provide faster service and process claims more quickly.

Other advantages include the convenience remaining in your own home, avoiding waiting to be interviewed in the office (since in-office business is conducted solely on a first-come, first-serve basis) and the confidentiality of answering questions in private, the office states.

The tele-claims unit handles only applications for Social Security benefits and some post-eligibility matters. Specifically, the phone system handles applications for retirement, medicare, dependents, survivor and disability benefits.

Applications for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or other SSI matters, requests for benefit estimates or general questions about Social Security cannot be handled under this system. General informational questions are answered by calling the main Social Security number, 441-3401.

The phone numbers for the tele-claims system are: 441-3427, 441-3429 or 441-3419.

Internationally known violinist to appear in concert at VWC

Peter Zazofsky, a 24-year old violinist who has won international awards for his playing, will be heard in concert at Virginia Wesleyan College on November 2, at 8:15 p.m. in the Science Auditorium. The concert, which is jointly sponsored by the College's Special

Peter Zazofsky

Events Committee, the Leventritt Foundation, and the National Federation of Music Clubs, is free and open to the public. Reservation should be made by calling the college switchboard at 461-3232.

Zazofsky made his debut at the age of 11 as a soloist with the Boston Symphony and soon afterwards played with the Boston Pops under the baton of Arthur Fiedler. Part of a famous musical family, he was introduced to music at an early age. He is the son of George Zazofsky, associate concertmaster of the Boston Symphony for many years and now a professor of violin at the University of Miami and concertmaster of the Boston Pops. His mother's brothers are famous oboists - one with the New York Philharmonic and the other with the Boston Symphony - and his mother is a cellist. The young artist is a 1972 graduate of Philadelphia's Curtis Institute. He also studied with the famed violin teacher Ivan Galamian.

In 1977 Zazofsky won the 1977 National Federation of Music Club's Young Artist competition. He was the first person ever to be the unanimous choice of the 12-man panel of judges for the Young Artist Award. Zazofsky was sent on a six-weeks tour of Latin America under the sponsorship of this group and played to rave reviews everywhere he appeared.

After winning the National Federation award, the young violinist went on to win the Bronze Medal at the Seventh International Henryk Wieniawski Competition in Poland. He was the first American to win a prize in this competition since 1962. In fact, he so impressed the judges with his rendition of Bartok's Second Concerto that in addition to awarding him a medal, they sent him on a tour of Poland.

Other competitions Zazofsky has won include a gold medal in the Bordeaux Festival, followed by the San Francisco Symphony Competition, which he won over a field of young musicians including, among others, Eugene Fodor. In 1980 he plans to enter the prestigious Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Competition.

Zazofsky's program will include Schubert's Duo in A Major, op. 162; Beethoven's Sonata in A Major, op. 12, #2; Sonata in E Major for Violin Alone by Eugene Ysaye; Stravinsky's Duo Concertante; and Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso by Saint Saens. The violinist will be accompanied on piano by Charles Abramovic.

Virginia Orchestra Group names three to management posts

An operations director, a ticket and subscriptions manager and a public relations director have been appointed to the Virginia Orchestra Group staff as this newly-aligned arts organization plans stepped-up and wider cultural activity in the near future.

These moves were confirmed by the V.O.G. board of trustees after formation of their organization combining the formerly-named Norfolk Symphony, the Peninsula Symphony and the Virginia Beach Pops Symphony.

The naming of Julien Beresford to the operations position, Mrs. Sandra L. Vick of Virginia Beach to the ticket-subscriptions post and Eugene H. Palatsky to be in charge of PR duties was announced by Francis Crociata, executive director of the V.O.G.

Crociata said, "The progressive growth and expansion of symphonic music presentations and musical artists' job opportunities in this Tidewater Peninsula region necessitates a strengthening of staff functions as well."

"These three appointments would upgrade any performing-arts organizational staff in the country," he said.

Beresford had been general manager of the Binghamton (N.Y.) Symphony and Choral Society, overseeing that ensemble's transformation into a professional performing group, and served as a consultant for the New York State Council on the Arts and the New York State Board of Regents. This New Yorker, a cum laude graduate of Princeton University who also attended Columbia University, has worked actively in leadership positions with the American Symphony Orchestra League.

He worked as an intern on both the music program of the N.Y. State Council on the Arts and the theater-district-development project of the mayor's office of midtown planning and development in New York City. He was a staff member of the Amor Artis Chamber Orchestra and Choral in New York City.

While attending Princeton, Beresford sang as a member of the Princeton Tigertones on national tours. His senior thesis recorded "Classical Music Performance in Edwardian England, 1901-1914," which required research in London and other musical citadels in Great Britain.

Mrs. Vick, before her recent managerial appointment, had been employed by the Norfolk Symphony box office for three and a half years. Viewing the "new intensity" of concentration on season's subscription sales for this season, Mrs. Vick said, "The viable musical institution needs talented performers, of course - but requires a committed audience."

"Proff of that commitment," she said, "is planning to attend concerts all season long, not just a single-concert venture now and then, responding to a last-minute decision to take a chance on there being a ticket available."

This native of Portsmouth, majoring in musical studies at Virginia Intermont College in Bristol, next studied voice with Max McClusky and performed in opera workshop productions at Boston University. She is a member of the Virginia Beach Choral, sometimes its soprano soloist, and also sings with the St.

Francis Episcopal Church in Virginia Beach. Mrs. Vick has directed the church's junior choir for nine years.

She is a program ad coordinator for the Virginia Beach Choral, whose director, Walter Noona, also conducts the pops symphonies of the Virginia Orchestra Group. Her husband, Martin Vick, is an electronic engineer. Their children are Leslie, age 11, and Andrew, 9. Her previous employment experience includes being head teller in a bank for three years while her husband was stationed at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, Texas.

Palatsky, prior to his Norfolk employment, was responsible for publicity duties and subscriptions sales for the symphony orchestras of Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, regional acting companies such as the Theater of Living Arts and Drama Guild in Philadelphia.

Expert advice on retirement benefits

By JUDITH G. RHODES

Because of all the new laws which involve Employees Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), many Beach companies have been terminating their retirement plans and distributing the proceeds to their employees. I have had several letters from different parts of Tidewater regarding this subject, and so I sought out a retirement benefits expert.

I am grateful to Richard Bock, Corporate Retirement Services, 1061 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. Bock numbers among his clientele some of the most prestigious Fortune 500 Companies. He has been most helpful in providing this information regarding this area of finance which is becoming more and more prevalent throughout the United States.

If you are one of those individuals who comes under this category, make certain you discuss the alternatives with a reliable source, as one method of investing your funds might be more advantageous to you than another.

Q. Should I take a lump sum payment or a cash distribution?

A. First of all let's define a lump sum payment. A lump sum payment is the distribution or payment within one tax year of an employee's entire balance from all of the employer's qualified pension plans, all of the employer's qualified stock bonus plans, or all of the employer's qualified profit-sharing plans.

The total taxable amount of a lump sum distribution is the portion consisting of employer contributions and income earned on the account. Prior to 1974, the contributions were treated as capital gains, but it only holds true for employees who are 59.5 years of age or older and who opt for cash distribution. If the employee is younger than 59.5 all the distribution from the lump sum payment is taxed as ordinary income. Without the benefit of proper prior planning, employees under this age have been unaware of the alternatives available to them when there is a lump sum distribution.

Individual Retirement Account (IRA Rollover): Under ERISA, if a person leaves a qualified plan and has been a participant in that plan for at least five years he or she can take the funds without paying the current income tax by establishing an IRA Rollover.

The transfer of funds into an IRA must be made within 60 days of receipt of the qualified plan distribution. If assets other than cash are received, the identical assets must be transferred to the new plan and only one such transfer is permitted in a three-year period.

The dollar amount of the rollover is unlimited, but cannot include any employee contributions. It must however, include all company contributions plus earnings.

Distribution of the money in an IRA may not begin prior to age 59.5, except in the case of death, disability or rollover to another IRA. There is a 10 percent premature distribution excise tax penalty if funds are withdrawn prior to age 59.5. Distributions must begin no later than the end of the taxable year during which time the participant reaches the age of 70.5. All distributions from the IRA are taxed as ordinary income in the year the distribution is made.

Q. Once I have my distribution, how do I establish an IRA?

A. Many brokerage houses, savings and loans, and banks offer IRA plans. They also may provide the necessary trust documents for IRA Rollovers, which will eliminate legal fees.

Q. What can I use in my IRA?

A. You can use high yielding government certificates, such as Ginnie Maes (Government National Mortgage Association Pass Throughs). You can purchase corporate bonds, utility stocks or preferred stocks, or quality mutual funds. There are a variety of options open to you.

A beauty makeover can increase your salary

Putting your best face forward may help you get your foot in the door.

That mixture of metaphors sums up the advice Rae Wisely (who conducts "Women in Business Seminars" for Merle Norman Cosmetics throughout the United States), has for women who are about to return to the Virginia Beach job market without special skills. "A person's marketability as a prospective employee can be greatly enhanced by getting a new hairstyle and makeup," Wisely says.

In a recent study by a professor of psychology at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Madison, N.J., "before" and "after" photos were taken of a group of women ranging in age from 25 to 55. Their resumes were sent to various employment agencies and large corporate employers. Either a "before" or "after" photo accompanied each resume.

"The results were truly astounding," Wisely said. "The women whose 'after' photos were seen by prospective employers were offered jobs earning from 8 to 20 percent more than the 'before's." Particularly in the secretarial level, where many women have similar office skills, a beauty makeover can make a substantial difference in whether they were offered jobs and at what salary."

Being well-groomed and fashionably dressed can be a decided plus for women who are reentering the job market after being at home for a number of years, the Merle Norman consultant points out. She offers a number of helpful hints to ease the reentry process:

Invest in a good, basic suit to wear on job interviews. Choose one with a simple, well-tailored blazer jacket and a matching skirt. Check that the hemline is flattering and fashionable. It can range from an inch below the knee to slightly above mid-calf. Navy, burgundy, grey or brown in a solid color or low-key tweed will give you the best mileage.

Security quiz for homeowners offered

A colorful brochure offering suggestions for making your home more burglar-proof is now available to Virginia Beach residents from Honeywell Protection Services.

The brochure, "What's Your Security I.Q.?", was written by Robert W. Shirley, manager of public and industry affairs for Honeywell Protection Services and author of syndicated column on

"There are simple, inexpensive steps that you can take to avoid being burglarized," said Shirley.

"Crime experts say that if your protective measures can delay a burglar for just four minutes, he will give up and try another home."

He added, "If this quiz reveals some weak links in your defenses, I urge you to remedy them immediately."

For a free copy of "What's Your Security I.Q.?", write: Honeywell Inc., Inquiries Supervisor MN12-2118, Honeywell Plaza, Minneapolis, Mn. 55408.

silky fabric. Simple, medium-height pumps, a minimum of jewelry and a tailored handbag will complete your job-hunting outfit. Once you get the job, you can add other blouses, contrasting skirts, and other accents.

Consult a good hair stylist about a new cut and possibly a new color, too. Particularly if you've worn your hair the same way for a number of years, you can benefit from the change. If your hair color is drab, graying or brassy, a more subtle shade will improve your whole appearance.

Treat yourself to a complete makeup lesson. Have your present skin care program evaluated to see if it is still effective. The second, more important step is selecting the right makeup base, both in texture and color. Under harsh, fluorescent office lights, most people tend to look pale and circles under the eyes appear even darker.

Color enhancers -- lipstick, cheek color and eyeshadow -- can make a dramatic difference if they're correctly applied. You'll want to avoid an overly make up look (very dark lipstick and exotic eyeshadow) but should take the time to apply and blend colors subtly.

Your hands can reveal a great deal about you. Go to your job interview with a fresh manicure, but don't have extremely long, flashy nails. Also steer clear of excess rings and jangly bracelets. Keep your hands quietly in your lap (no handkerchief twisting, picking on threads or other signs that you may be nervous).

Your updated image will give you more confidence at your interview and can also yield a larger paycheck. Now more than ever, it pays to be a perfectionist about your appearance.

The U.S. yearly average of household TV set usage per day increased from five hours and 30 minutes in 1965 to six hours and ten minutes in 1977.

Commercial VHF television stations now in operation number 516 and UHF, 210, while educational VHF stations total 102 and educational UHF, 158, says the Federal Communications Commission.

More than a dollar was needed in 1978 to purchase what 60 cents bought in 1970.

Notice to the Public of Proposed Experimental Tariff of C & P Telephone Company

Notice is hereby given that C&P Telephone Company has filed experimental rates with the State Corporation Commission proposing to establish Circle Calling Service. This proposed service option will offer discounted direct distance dial calling. The charge for each message will be less than the normal toll charge. This plan will replace Tele-Plan routes. The proposed date of effectiveness of these rates is December 18, 1979.

A hearing regarding these rates will be held before the State Corporation Commission on November 14, 1979, at 10:00 a.m. in the Commission's Courtroom, the Thirteenth Floor of the Blanton Building, Bank and Governor Streets, Richmond, Virginia.

All material filed by the Company may be reviewed in the Clerk's Office of the Commission and at any Business Office of the Company where bills may be paid.

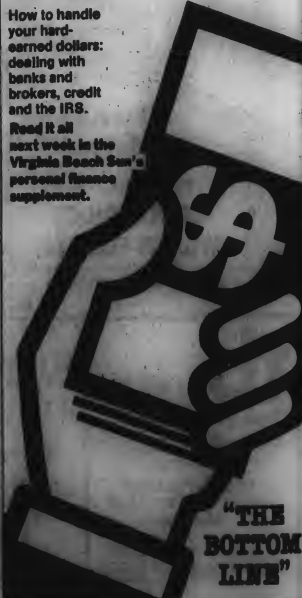

On or before November 7, 1979, all persons who expect to participate at the public hearing at a party, protest, to offer evidence and to cross-examine witnesses, must file a Protest in conformity with the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure, and, at the same time, serve a copy on the Company.

All interested persons who desire to make a statement concerning the proposed Circle Calling Service, and not participate as a party, protest, may appear in the Commission's Courtroom at 10:00 a.m. on November 14, 1979, or mail the statement to William C. Young, Clerk, State Corporation Commission, Blanton Building, P. O. Box 1197, Richmond, Virginia 23209.

A wall of cabinets anchors one end of this bedroom in which the bed itself is placed out in the room instead of traditionally against a wall. This arrangement is particularly adaptable when a room is long and narrow and lacks wall space.

Narrow room can be 'widened'

By BARBARA HARTUNG

Q. We have a long and somewhat narrow bedroom we have created on the second floor of our old home in Lynnhaven. Unfortunately, there is only one solid wall in the room where we can place the bed.

We do not have any space for dressers because we have windows on one other wall, closets on another and the room is not wide enough.

I had thought of placing the bed out in the middle of the room, but I am not certain how that will be. Do you think that would work? —T.L.

A. Yes, that is certainly a good option in your room.

You could place a wall of dressers or chests with stacking wall units on the solid wall. This would give you plenty of storage and even a spot for a small desk.

Provide a space adequate for a traffic pattern — probably at least 36 inches — and then erect a room divider or purchase a headboard that would give you the division you might desire for your bed.

We always seem to think in terms of placing furniture against the walls. That's how furniture often looks best. However, there are times when a room requires a variation on furniture arrangement.

I would imagine that a long, narrow room would best be treated as you had suggested with the bed out from the wall.

Another idea for making your room seem wider visually is to paint the two small walls a darker color than the other two side walls. The dark color will tend to make the small walls come forward, hence widening the effect of the room.

Q. We have recently added a living room to our existing home. It has a wall of used brick dominated by the fireplace.

I have a lovely green, brown, off-white and several colors of orange fabric selected for a sofa.

What colors would you think would be good for the walls, carpeting, an occasional chair and a set of game table chairs which will have upholstered cushions at the seat and back? —M.H.T.

A. The fabric you have selected for your sofa sounds very pretty. Using that and your brick fireplace as a starting point, I would think that off-white walls would be a good choice and a rust or soft orange tone would be very pleasant for the carpeting — warm and inviting as well as practical.

If you have quite a bit of wood in furnishings, an oat-meal tweed or a heavy linenlike fabric would be effective on the chair seats and backs of your game chairs. A warm brown leatherlike fabric or green

Q. In a dining room that has Queen Anne painted chairs, an Oriental-flavored chandelier and both English and Chinese accessories, what kind of window treatment would you suggest for a small window with a rather poor view?

I'd like to avoid draperies because the window is over a small shelf which I can use for plants or serving.

A. Why don't you use a lattice-type shutter that will give you a filtered light and ventilation? This could give a sort of built-in windowbox look to the window.

It should blend beautifully with Oriental and English styles.

Slip the replacement shingle into place and secure it with galvanized shingle nails at least 1-1/2" long. You can use either galvanized siding nails or color-matched nails depending upon your siding/shingles. Do not drive the nailheads into siding or the shingles will crack. Nail

New ruling of insulation information will benefit consumers, home buyers

By LIN J. COOPER
Habitat Builders Association

Consumers can expect some hard information on insulation and its energy efficiency come November 30th. The Federal Trade Commission, which oversees practices affecting commerce, recently published a ruling which will help consumers who are purchasing insulation or buying a new home to fully understand what they may be purchasing.

After November 30, if you're shopping for a new home, ask for an insulation fact sheet. Builders, and installers and retailers, are now required to make one available to you. This fact sheet should explain exactly what R-value means. (R-value is the insulation's degree of resistance to the flow of heat. The higher the R-value, the less heat will flow through the insulation.)

You can expect that the fact sheet will also describe the type of insulation in question, its thickness, and its R-value expressed by number.

There's more. If you sign a contract for a new home after November 30, that contract must contain the following information: a) the type of insulation installed in the structure (if different types in the same structure, the R-value of each and the areas of use must be disclosed, i.e. floors, walls, etc.), b) the thickness of the insulation, and c) its R-value. If your builder isn't sure what type of insulation he'll be installing in the house, he must give you or send you a receipt stating this information as soon as it becomes available.

Look for a change in newspaper, radio, t.v. and other types of advertising too. Builders must be able to substantiate energy-efficiency claims in their advertising. If a builder states the R-value in his ad, the ad must also give the type of insulation and the thickness needed to achieve that R-value. The ad must also contain the statement, "The higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power. Ask your seller for the fact sheet on R-values."

Any statement an ad may make claiming any sort of fuel consumption reduction due to insulation, must also have the statement, "savings vary. Find out why in the seller's fact sheet on R-values. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power."

Also be sure and look for clear labeling about efficiency on all packages of insulation you may be buying to install yourself. Manufacturers are included in the ruling too.

The end result of the FTC's ruling is to allow you to evaluate energy claims and compare performance of different types of insulation and their application.

Ceiling decor can add a lot to Beach apartment

By LESLIE AYERS

As popular as apartments in Virginia Beach, apartment ceiling are often forgotten blank spaces. But they don't have to be.

With a little imagination, the ceiling can contribute much to the decor of each room. If the ceilings are high, paint them a light color. If a tone or two darker than the adjoining walls. This will visually bring the ceilings lower and make the room more comfortable.

You can have the same effect with wallpaper. In selecting wallpaper for the ceiling, choose a non-directional pattern and be sure to echo the color scheme in the rest of the room.

If you really want to bring the room together, paper the entire area, walls and ceiling. However, be sure that you are in love with the pattern since you will be surrounded by it.

Should the room seem to have a ceiling that is too low which makes the walls seem short, consider doing the flooring and ceiling in light colors. To change the room from an uninteresting box shape, try painting the ceiling in squares of decreasing size. Use lighter colors near the walls and darker colors as you move toward the center of the ceiling.

This treatment visually lifts the ceiling and gives the room a more interesting look. To paint this kind of ceiling yourself, you'll need a steady hand and a lot of masking tape.

When making your decorating plans, consider the ceiling just as you would the floor and walls. You'll be surprised at how much interest this can create in your Beach apartment.

Do-it-yourself home repair, popular for a long time now, has received an added boost from the climbing cost of living. As all handy-

Elected

The Virginia Beach Vo-Tech chapter of HERO (Home Economics Related Occupations) has elected its 1979-80 student officers. They are: (front) Allison Jackson, first vice president; Shaun Davis, secretary; Evelyn Wright, reporter; (second row) Mrs. Karen Dodd, Vo-Tech sponsor of the group; Alexis Edwards, historian; Nita Plummer, parliamentarian; Tammy Henson, second vice president; and (in back) James Rudolph, president. (Not pictured is Julie Bigelow, treasurer.) There are 58 students from Virginia Beach high schools who participate in the Vo-Tech HERO chapter. During the year, the group sponsors activities which promote career development in three areas - fashions, child care, and food preparation.

F. C. initiates pilot secondary art program

A pilot secondary art program underway at First Colonial High School this year has been accepted by the Virginia Department of Education, and half of the $16,220 cost of starting the program is being borne by the state.

Only a dozen students are enrolled in the art history advanced placement course at present, but Art Coordinator Dr. Nancy T. Jones says she hopes the course can be taught in all high schools in the future. The pilot course is for juniors and seniors only.

Not all of them are necessarily art studio oriented. The course teacher, Mrs. Anne Chapman, said, "This course also has appeal to those who enjoy and appreciate art, but do not feel that a studio art course is for them."

The art history course, which encompasses the study of art from primitive cave drawings to contemporary works, is the outgrowth of a recommendation of the art curriculum committee a year ago. The study of the art works encourages study of the period in history that influenced the art.

Dr. Jones says the course of study, a 1,000-page curriculum guide, follows the theory that "the study of world history is, in a sense, incomplete, without the study of art." The course includes all types of art, from architecture to calligraphy, and from drawing to furniture design.

After the idea for the pilot course was approved by the Department of Instruction, five volunteer art teachers in Virginia Beach - Anne Chapman, Susie Black, Cynthia Flegal, Karen Haddaway, and Kandice Lucas - wrote the guide. During this year, the guide will be constantly monitored and evaluated by other Virginia Beach art teachers, as well as by a few from Norfolk.

The textbook, "History of Art" by H.W. Janson, has been provided free of charge to the 12 students, since art history is a pilot course. Next May the students will participate in the national advanced placement exams. If they score well in the art history portion, they could be placed in advanced courses when they enroll in a college, and they could even receive college credit for the high school art history class.

Dr. Jones says a class in art history is taught in a few other school districts in Virginia, but there has been no complete course guide available until the one was drawn up in Virginia Beach.

"Virginia Beach's development and evaluation of an art history course can therefore be expected to benefit other school divisions as well as our own," she said.

Word was received by Dr. E.E. Brickell, Superintendent of Virginia Beach Public Schools, in August, that the state had accepted the pilot course and would participate in the funding of the first year.

Democracy Scholarship Program open

"Virginia Beach students win more than awards and scholarships when they participate in the V.F.W. Voice of Democracy Scholarship Program," said Commander C.W. Humphrey of V.F.W. Post 392, in discussing the broadcast scriptwriting program conducted annually for students in the 10, 11 and 12th grades by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Some of the fringe benefits, according to Commander Humphrey are increased self-confidence and poise, experience in communicating with others and valuable training in self expression. For the state winners, there is also the broadening experience of a five-day tour of Washington, D.C., and the opportunity to make lasting friendships with the other state winners.

In the eighteen years that the Veterans of Foreign Wars has been sole sponsor of the Voice of Democracy Program, more than 3,000,000 high school students have participated. Participants write and then tape-record a three-to-five minute broadcast script expressing their views on their role in America's future. From among the state winners, five national winners are chosen to receive a total of $31,500 in scholarships.

Continuing Education programs at TCC

Director of Continuing Education, Tidewater Community College - Virginia Beach

Through its Continuing Education programs, Tidewater Community College is able to provide educational opportunities for all citizens in both formal instructional programs and enrichment courses designed to expand the individual's understanding of the world around him.

Credit courses in degree and certificate programs are scheduled in late afternoon and evening hours to accommodate working adults and others who are unable to attend classes earlier in the day. In addition, many courses are scheduled at convenient off-campus locations, including military bases.

Continuing Education programs provide not only regular credit courses but also special instruction programs for new and expanding industry, in cooperation with the Special Training Division of the Virginia Community College System office and the Virginia Employment Commission. These special training programs incorporate job analysis, instructor recruiting and/or training, financial support for job instruction and an adaptation for continuous training. The special training programs promote more efficient plant production for industry and greater advancement for the employee. Industries interested in establishing training programs may contact any TCC campus for information.

Continuing Education also offers its Spectrum program of non-credit evening courses. These courses provide something for almost everyone. Classes at all campuses feature a variety of worthwhile and fun courses, from sign language to disco dancing. The new winter quarter schedule of Spectrum courses will not be out in November. These non-credit courses are offered at a minimal fee to the student. Spectrum courses are self-supporting and use no tax dollars.

In the Spectrum courses, we attempt to respond to the community's needs and offer courses in which the public is interested. Continuing Education also offers specialized services in response to the community's needs. These services include such things as cultural events, workshops, lectures, conferences, seminars and special community projects of cultural and education value. A TCC Speakers Bureau, composed of qualified faculty and staff members, is available to community, civic, and business organizations for programs and lectures.

All of our Continuing Education programs are constantly changing to keep up with the community needs. We participate in two organizations whose goals are the improvement of Continuing Education programs. As a member of the Virginia Tidewater Consortium for Continuing Higher Education, TCC joins the other post-secondary education institutions in the Tidewater area with the purpose of providing maximum opportunities for the continuing education of adult citizens in the region, including credit and degree programs at both the undergraduate and graduate levels.

Beach teacher named state's 'English Teacher of the Year'

For the second year in a row, Virginia's English Teacher of the Year is from Virginia Beach. She is Mrs. Hazel Jesse, who teaches at Independence Junior High School.

Mrs. Jesse was named Virginia Beach's English Teacher of the Year by the Virginia Beach Association of the Teachers of English, and was nominated by that group for the statewide honor. The announcement that Mrs. Jesse had won for the entire state of Virginia came at the recent Virginia Association of the Teachers of English (VATE) convention in Richmond.

Last year, Mrs. Barbara Hull, who teaches at Princess Anne Junior High School won both the Virginia Beach and state of Virginia awards given by the English teachers.

On both levels, the award is based primarily on teaching experience and on ability and ingenuity in the teaching of English.

Mrs. Mary Barnes, secondary English supervisor in Virginia Beach and past president of VATE said, "I am really pleased that Hazel Jesse won. She deserves it, but I was just a little surprised when a teacher from Virginia Beach was named as the state winner for the second consecutive year."

Mrs. Jesse, currently on maternity leave, will return to the classroom in a few weeks.

Annual College Night set for Virginia Beach students

Virginia Beach City Schools annual College Night is scheduled for November 1 from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Civic Center.

The supervisor of guidance for Virginia Beach City Schools, Mrs. Frances Hudgins, and her steering committee have planned a program involving over 100 colleges, universities, military academies, and technical schools.

College Night affords an opportunity for all junior and senior high school students and their parents to meet and question these representatives.

Students interested in financial aid information are urged to attend one of the financial aid sessions which are being coordinated by local college financial aid officers.

Guidance counselors suggest that each student will benefit more from College Night by visiting the career and college information centers in the guidance department of his school prior to November 1. Each student will then be familiar with names of colleges having an appropriate program for his career choice.

Marine Corps takes part in program to verify ID's of persons seeking military health care benefits

The Marine Corps will start participation next month in a computerized system that will verify the identification of local persons seeking Department of Defense (DoD) health care benefits.

The test is part of a DoD-wide evaluation of the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System (DEERS). All service branches and several other federal agencies will be testing the system.

The Marine Corps will test DEERS among active duty and retired Marines, their dependents and survivors serving or residing in central and southern Virginia and parts of North Carolina. All members of Marine families residing in Virginia (except those living in three-digit ZIP Code areas 220, 221, 226, 242, 243 and 246) must be enrolled in DEERS. All members living within the three-digit ZIP Code areas 275, 276, 277 and 278, of North Carolina bordering on Virginia must also be enrolled for the DEERS test.

Enrollment of active duty and retired Marines living in the test area will be made automatically by computer process at Headquarters Marine Corps. However, enrollment of their dependents or survivors cannot be done automatically. An up-to-date DoD Form 1172, entitled "Application for Uniformed Services Identification and Privilege Card," must be submitted for these persons.

An active duty Marine with dependents in the test area must list all dependents on the form and submit it to his or her commanding officer. The commanding officer will verify the information and send the form to the DEERS processing center in California. Retired Marines with dependents in the test area must submit the same form, listing all dependents, directly to Headquarters Marine Corps for verification and DEERS enrollment.

Survivors of Marines who died while on active duty or in retirement must also submit the form, listing all dependents of the deceased, to Headquarters Marine Corps for verification and enrollment.

Local Marine commanders are not authorized to verify the forms for dependents of retired Marines or survivors of Marines. However, commanders may assist these persons in completing the forms. An extensive mailout program is being made by officials at Headquarters Marine Corps to inform dependents of retired Marines and survivors of enrollment requirements. The mailout will provide forms and instructions for their completion.

DEERS is designed to identify people who are authorized to receive service connected or DoD sponsored benefits such as medical treatment, according to DoD officials. All medical service branches in the test area will begin randomly checking the ID cards of test area participants for 90 days, beginning Feb. 1. If test results prove favorable, DoD will adopt the system for all the armed forces.

Here's how the system works:

Patients at health care facilities will present their ID cards at the admissions desk. If there is a question about health care eligibility, or if a patient forgets to bring his or her ID card, the admissions clerk can contact the DEERS center and ask for a computer check of the patient's eligibility for treatment.

The test is designed to confirm, refine, and validate concepts prior to a nationwide implementation of the program.

Especially with a little thoughtful planning. Like buying U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

So buy U.S. Savings Bonds. They'll put your financial worries to rest.

Fontanilla

Staff Sergeant Anthony H. Fontanilla, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fontanilla of Bonney Road, Virginia Beach, is participating in "Red Flag," a continuing Tactical Air Command training exercise conducted at Nellis AFB, Nev.

Sergeant Fontanilla is an aerospace ground equipment repairman at Langley AFB, Va., with the 1st Tactical Fighter Wing.

The Red Flag exercise series is designed to provide air and ground crews with realistic training while operating under simulated combat conditions.

The sergeant is a 1972 graduate of Kempsville High School.

Fryman

Navy Seaman Recruit Sandra L. Fryman, whose husband, Theodore, is the son of Wayne E. and Ida L. Fryman of Mapelhurst Road, Virginia Beach, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Orlando, Fla.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

A 1974 graduate of Princess Anne High School, she joined the Navy in March 1979.

Venable

Pvt. Benny L. Venable, whose wife, Beatrice, and mother, Mrs. Harlene Venable, live at Authur Ave., Virginia Beach, recently received a Parachutist Badge upon completion of the three-week airborne course at the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga.

During the first week of training, students undergo a rigorous physical training program and receive instruction in the theory of parachuting. The second week they receive practical training by jumping from 34-foot and 250-foot towers. The final week includes five static-line parachute jumps.

Venable entered the Army in January of this year. The private is a 1977 graduate of Bayside High School.

Advice from the Veterans Administration

A. — Yes. But amounts

Sailor of the Quarter

AW2 William E. Wilson has been selected Sailor of the Quarter of Fleet Combat Training Center, Atlantic, Dam Neck, Virginia Beach, for the period October through December. Petty Officer Wilson's recommendation for Sailor of the Quarter cited him as a "dynamic, resourceful leader of the highest caliber." Petty Officer Wilson and his wife Jean live on Stencil Street in Virginia Beach.

actually spent for educational expenses may be deducted.

Q. — I am a former member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Am I eligible for a pension from the Veterans Administration?

A. — No. You are, however, entitled to VA hospitalization, domiciliary and nursing home care and burial benefits provided by VA.

Q. — May incarcerated veterans receive Veterans Administration pension benefits?

A. — No. However, the VA can, upon proof of the veteran's permanent and total disability or his reaching age 65, pay the appropriate pension rate to his wife and/or dependent children.

Q. — I am a World War I veteran with a service connected amputation. Am I eligible for a specially adapted automobile from the Veterans Administration?

A. — Yes, if you meet all the requirements of the law passed last year providing this benefit for World War I veterans. Check with your nearest VA regional office or seek assistance through local veterans service organizations.

Many veterans still eligible for GI Bill education benefits

Half of all veterans who served during the Vietnam War are still eligible for GI Bill education benefits, according to Veterans Administration statistics released today.

Although 65 percent of the 9 million-plus veterans of the Vietnam Era have used the GI Bill, VA estimates that more than five million are still entitled to some or all of the training time they earned. The estimate is based on the number of veterans who have not reached the tenth anniversary of their separation from military service when, by law, their GI Bill education rights expire.

"VA is eager that veterans know that training must be completed within this ten year period," VA Regional Office Director said. "It is a waste to allow this valuable entitlement to slip by."

veterans will lose their eligibility during the 12 month period starting October 1, 1979. This eligibility that could mean up to:

• 45 months of financial assistance for school or college, farm or on-the-job training or a combination of school and job training;

• $725 in earnings a semester through VA's work-study program if the veteran is in college full-time;

• $69 a month not to exceed a total of $828 tutorial assistance if the veteran is deficient in a required subject; and

• $2,500 in low-interest direct loans on academic year, based upon financial need.

Since 1944, when the first GI Bill became law, Americans have invested some $49 billion to train 7.8 million World War II veterans, 2.4 million Korean Conflict veterans and 7.5 million Vietnam Era and Post-Korean veterans and active duty personnel.

VA predicted the total number of trainees under the active bill will surpass the WW II and 42 percent of Korean Conflict veterans used their GI Bills.

VA estimates that by the end of 1984 more than half the veterans eligible today will have passed the ten year benefit limit.

"While many have reached their educational goal and more than one million will train this year, VA said, "we urge veterans with entitlement to start a program early enough to complete it before time runs out."

Veterans in the midst of training lose their right to VA payments ten years after their separation dates and all activities under the current bill cease December 31, 1989.

Burgess

The son of a Virginia Beach couple has been selected to receive specialized training after completing basic training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Airman Mark A. Burgess, whose parents are retired Navy Captain and Mrs. Harold E. Burgess Jr. of Table Rock Lane, studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations.

The airman now goes to Chanute AFB, Ill., to attend the Air Training Command's fuel specialist course.

The airman attended Kellam High School.

Navy Lieutenant Commander John M. Paust, whose wife, Gayle, is the daughter of William R. and Evelyn L. McKnight of Bruton Lane, Virginia Beach, has been awarded the Navy Commendation Medal.

He was cited for meritorious service from January 1975 to August 1977 while serving as an aircraft division officer on the staff of Fighter Wing One. During that period, Paust was responsible for the maintenance control of the F-4 "Phantom" jet fighters operated by the Wing.

The citation accompanying his medal praises Paust for his expertise in identifying and correcting problems concerning the F-4 aircraft, thus increasing its operational and material readiness.

He is currently serving as a member on the staff of Commander, Carrier Group Six, based in Mayport, Fla.

A 1964 graduate of Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Ill., with a Bachelor of Science degree, Paust joined the Navy in May 1964.

Moffett

A Marine Corporal Kenneth E. Moffett Jr., son of Barbara Moffett of 6018 Margate Ave., Virginia Beach, has reported for duty with 3d Marine Division, based in Okinawa.

A 1976 graduate of Laurel Senior High School, Laurel, Md., he joined the Marine Corps in July 1977.

A discussion of aspirin's side effects

By WILLIAM J. GOLDWAG, M.D.

Q. I had a heart attack two years ago and among other things, my doctor told me to take two aspirin every day in the morning and at night.

I don't really understand why he said this since I don't have any chest pain at all at this time. Could you explain what the aspirin is supposed to do?

A. Some studies have shown that one of the effects of aspirin is to reduce the tendency of blood platelets to agglutinate or stick together. The platelets are the very small structures in the blood stream that are needed in order for blood to clot properly.

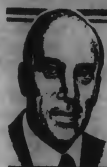

When there aren't enough blood platelets, the person may bleed internally into the inner organs or even in the skin causing many small black and blue spots to appear.

It is believed that these same platelets that are so necessary to life may work against us if there are rough areas or irregularities (plaques) on the inner lining wall of the arteries. The platelets may stick to these areas and then attract other platelets to stick to them and eventually may build up a clot or enlarge the roughened area until the artery gets blocked off. This will cause a heart attack if the involved artery is one supplying the heart muscle with blood, or a stroke if it happens in a brain artery. The aspirin seems to block this stickiness of the platelets.

A word of caution must be added, however. Other studies have demonstrated that the same aspirin also reduces the adhesiveness of white blood cells to the lining of the blood vessel walls. These white blood cells are the ones that fight infection by destroying bacteria that may have invaded the blood stream. The adhesiveness of these cells is an important property in their ability to kill bacteria.

In laboratory experiments on mice, those receiving aspirin after being infected with bacteria had a higher death rate than those not given any aspirin. This would be especially important in patients on high doses of aspirin such as those with arthritis, but anyone taking the drug for prolonged periods of time might be at increased risk from bacterial infections.

It also points up the possible undesirable practice of giving someone aspirin for fever as soon as they get the signs of an infection. It could be actually interfering with their resistance to the developing infection.

You really can't subject your body to any potent drug for long periods of time without some kind of risk and even aspirin, which has been thought to be one of the safest drugs know, may carry some slight risk from its use.

Q. Can you explain a flushing of the cheeks only that occurs sometimes, but always in the evening and definitely after an alcoholic beverage?

I am 48 years old, my uterus was removed 10 years ago. I have experienced "hot flashes." Is the above a similar condition? What would make alcohol trigger it?

Is there a connection with menopause or is this an entirely different matter?

Perhaps the most important information which is not given is the complexion or country of origin of the questioner. Light-haired, blue-eyed people are very prone to flush easily and for that flushing to show up readily on the cheeks.

The ruddy complexion of the Nordic and northern European people is not just fresh air and sunshine, but rather the lack of pigment in the skin that allows the capillaries near the surface of the skin to show through. Any change in the size of these vessels or the amount of blood going through them will change the color showing through the skin.

Many substances cause blood vessels to dilate and alcohol is the commonest. This dilation or widening of the blood vessels allows more blood to flow through them and creates the flush. This situation is usually reversible although in some individuals a more or less permanent enlargement of these vessels may persist.

Menopause is often accompanied by unusually sensitive reactivity of these vessels which is related to hormonal changes in the body. The flush can be triggered by almost anything and often occurs at night when there seems to be no precipitating cause.

Niacin, vitamin B-3, commonly causes a flush although it is apt to occur on other parts of the body as well as the face. It is present in many vitamin preparations and if you are very sensitive to it you could get this reaction if you took it at the same time every day. Some spices can do this, again in people sensitive to the reaction. It is usually no cause for concern.

The Dental Question Box

Teeth are designed to last a lifetime

By RON ROSENTHAL, D.D.S.

Q: "Since I'm going to have to lose my teeth sooner or later anyway, why don't I just go ahead and pull them now and get some dentures?"

A: First of all, there is absolutely no reason for you to have to lose your teeth. Most people seem to think of tooth loss as a part of growing older, but nothing could be farther from the truth. After all, you don't expect to go blind or deaf or lose an arm or leg as a result of growing older. Then why should you expect to lose your teeth? You should not. Your teeth, like your eyes and ears, were designed to last a lifetime, and are only lost through lack of care - either by not taking care of their normal hygiene needs or by repeated exposure to refined carbohydrates such as sugar and starches.

Modern preventive techniques have been developed which make it possible for you to make sure you will be able to keep your teeth for a lifetime of trouble free service.

Secondly, if you knew the difficulties people face with dentures, I'm sure you'd rather keep your own. Did you know that if your dentist made a set of dentures for you, and if they were the best dentures it was possible for anyone to make for you at that time, that you would only be able to eat with them at less than 25% the efficiency you had with your own natural teeth? With dentures you can't begin to eat as well as with natural teeth.

Also, dentures are bulky and tend to alter the way you speak, at least until you get used to them. They also tend to make you salivate more. Dentures are a marvelous aid for those who need them, but if your dentist says your teeth can be saved, when you thought they had to come out, be very, very thankful.

Health and nutrition

Reflections of food we eat

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY

Registered Dietitian

Virginia Beach's kids are finally getting a break! They are going to start limiting the junk foods sold in school lunch rooms. For years nutritionists across the country have deployed the junk that fills the vending machines young Americans often depend on for their noon meal. Strange how unimportant the nutritional health of our children has been in past government circles. No one really seemed to know or even care what the kids were having for lunch.

Not all school lunch programs are bad, of course. Many have well-planned nutritious foods available, but when vending machines have candy bars, doughnuts pastries and pop competing for the child's attention — the junk will win most of the time.

Now, however the Department of Agriculture has proposed a ban on junk food being available until after the last lunch of the day has been served. The ban would cover such items as chewing gum, sodas, frozen desserts and some candies. It would become effective on Jan. 1 and would apply to schools serving federally subsidized lunches, or about 98 percent of the nation's public schools.

Eat yourself slim

The department has spent more than a year working on how to define "junk food" and to propose the new ruling. It apparently does not refer to the banished items as junk food, which was the most popular term used in 1977 when Congress restored the Department of Agriculture's authority to control what they now call "competitive foods" in or near school lunch rooms.

They are currently called "foods of minimal nutritional value," and they fall into that category if a serving portion of 100 calories contains less than 5 percent of the recommended daily allowance of any one of eight basic nutrients. Sugarless products are based on per servings rather than caloric standards.

The federal rule sets minimum standards and each state is free to be tougher if they choose. So, some states will have better food programs than others.

In 1970 Congress gave the Department of Agriculture the authority to regulate these "competitive" foods, but under extremely heavy lobbying by vending machine

Arbor Day Foundation encourages tree planting

The National Arbor Day Foundation is offering free trees as part of its 1979 campaign to encourage tree planting.

The Arbor Day Foundation, a nonprofit organization, is working to improve the quality of life in Virginia Beach and communities throughout the country by encouraging tree planting. The foundation will give four trees to new members contributing $15 or more. Shade, fruit and nut trees will be 3 to 6 feet tall, and evergreens will be 6 inches to 1 foot tall. All trees will be ready for planting and will be sent postage paid.

The foundation says that if the trees are planted according to enclosed instructions they will provide years of enjoyment and will add to the foundation's goal of a greener America.

To become a member of the foundation and to receive four free trees, a contribution of $15 or more should be sent to the National Arbor Day Foundation, Arbor Lodge 100, Nebraska City, NE 68410. The donation should be sent along with a choice of any four of the following trees. Any combination or as many of one variety may be specified:

Red Maple
Silver Maple
Sugar Maple
White Dogwood
American Redbud
White Birch
Tulip Tree
Weeping Willow
Red Delicious Apple
Yellow Delicious Apple
Stayman Winesap Apple
Elberta Peach
J.H. Hale Peach
Belle of Georgia Peach
Early Golden Apricot
Burbank Plum
Colorado Blue Spruce
Norway Spruce
White Pine
Black Walnut

companies, it was taken away in 1972. Since then, it has been up to each state to decide what foods are allowed beyond the served lunches, in and around the schools.

Kids who eat nothing but sugar, fat and water for lunch every day may feel temporarily satisfied, but what of their ability to think? Occasionally nothing will hurt, but on a daily basis, year after year who knows what ultimate damage will occur? Are we setting them up to be obese diabetics? Does our high incidence of cancer have anything to do with a daily intake of junk foods? How about our No. 1 killer, heart disease? Can it begin in childhood with tiny blocked arteries? We are all direct physical reflections of the foods that we have eaten all our lives. Surely our kids deserve the best, instead of junk.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF PROPOSED RATE CHANGES BY THE CHESAPEAKE AND POTOMAC TELEPHONE COMPANY OF VIRGINIA

Notice is hereby given that on September 28, 1979, The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia filed tariffs with the State Corporation Commission of Virginia which affect the charges customers pay for intrastate long distance service provided by C & P. These tariffs are to become effective on January 1, 1980.

The filed toll changes reprice intrastate toll service and replace toll tariffs which went into effect on March 3, 1979 subject to Commission investigation and hearing. The new tariffs slightly modify the March 3, 1979 tariffs by adding 1¢ to the overtime period rates for intrastate toll calls, 5¢ to the initial period rates for operator assisted and person-to-person intrastate toll calls in certain mileage bands and 10¢ to the initial period rates for person-to-person calls in the 167 to 194 mile range. The Commission has instituted Case Number 20082 to investigate the reasonableness of the toll tariffs filed by C & P.

All tariff material filed by the Company may be reviewed in the Clerk's Office of the Commission and at any Business Office of the Company where bills may be paid as listed in the General Information Section or the Consumer Telephone Guide Section of the telephone directory.

Any formal protest concerning the filed tariffs must be filed with the State Corporation Commission and must comply with the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure. All such protests and any other written communications regarding the filed tariffs must be filed no later than December 15, 1979, should reference Case No. 20082 and be addressed to William C. Young, Clerk, State Corporation Commission, Blanton Building, P.O. Box 1197, Richmond, Virginia 23209. The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company of Virginia.

retirement without losing any benefits. How much you can make depends on your age.

People 65 and over in 1979 can earn $4,500 this year and receive all of their benefits. This figure increases to $5,000 in 1980; and $5,500 in 1981; and $6,000 for 1982. After that, it will increase automatically to keep pace with increases in average wages.

If you are under 65 in 1979, you can earn $3,480 and receive all benefits for the year. This amount will increase automatically in future years to keep pace with increases in annual wages.

For earnings over the exempt amount, benefits will be reduced $1 for every $2 of excess earnings.

You should also remember that only earnings from work count for Social Security purposes under the retirement test. Thus, savings, investments, or rental income, for example, do not count.

You should also remember that only earnings from work count for Social Security purposes under the retirement test. Thus, savings, investments, or rental income, for example, do not count.

It's important to remember that knowing what to expect and making plans on that basis, can be the key to successful retirement. It would be the most interesting one-fourth of your life.

Big blues blitzing Outer Banks

Virginia Beach Sun Outdoor Writer

If you have been waiting for those big blues to hit the Nags Head area you can quit waiting and go fishing. This past week the surf along the North Carolina Outer Banks yielded some of the best bluefish action since 1973. Damen Tatem, of Tatem's Bait and Tackle Shop, told me that surf casters were loading their coolers with 20 to 30 blues each and the fish weighed between 12 and 15 lbs.

Damen said that on Monday the blues had moved to Duck, N.C. and that was a good indication that they would be in the area while. With some fair weather, we could expect this action to continue until the first week in December. If you are planning a trip to the Outer Banks this weekend, you might want to plan on fishing the tide.

Damen told me that the action has been the best three hours before the high tide, and on until the tide changes. The tide will be high at Oregon Inlet at 5:55 a.m. and 6:21 p.m. on Friday, you can add approximately one hour per day to determine the rest of the weekend.

Blues aren't the only fish that have been rewarding the Outer Banks anglers. Damen told me that both the Avon and Kitty Hawk Pier have been yielding plenty of channel bass. On Tuesday 30 red drum were landed on the Avon Pier and 26 at Kitty Hawk. The average fish was 40 to 60 lbs.

Oregon Inlet has been yielding plenty of nice trout. Carl Gard of Nags Head caught 24 trout Saturday and several times this past week the blues have run schools of trout onto the Nags Head beaches. Fishermen were walking the beaches and loading their coolers. So there appears to be plenty of trout in the area also.

In the bay, the best action still seems to be with the tautogs. I managed to get out to the first island Sunday morning and despite the cold temperatures and rough sea, Larry Wright and I managed to catch a nice bunch of togs. We fished for four hours and around noon decided that we would wait for more favorable weather conditions. The tautogs action should increase as the cooler weather moves into the area.

Pat McGhee at the Virginia Beach Sports Fishing

Center told me that the boats fishing the light tower area are doing excellent on the blues. Plenty of large blues, many of them meeting citation requirements, are being taken.

Around the wrecks, anglers are catching plenty of sea bass and tautogs. Pat told me that plenty of citations for this fish were also given out this weekend and a lot of the fish fell only ounces short of being trophy.

On the freshwater scene, bass appear to be abundant in Currituck Sound. On Saturday, Chief R. A. Lakoski of the Chesapeake Police Department caught 48 bass within two hours, and released all but eight. The eight fish kept averaged six pounds a piece. Chief Lakoski was fishing the grass beds and was using large shiners for bait. His wife Barbara caught her limit of eight bass on both Friday and Saturday.

Down at the Northwest River Campgrounds crappie seem to be dominating the scene. This past weekend Rowland Marshall caught 15 crappie and 3 bass. Slim Mizell of Chesapeake caught 15 crappie and Junior Gray and L. L. Clark of Chesapeake loaded their creels with 40 crappie. J.C. Fuel of Virginia Beach caught 20 crappie and quit. He said that the fish were still biting when he left, but he had all he wanted.

Spotlighting a crime

Each year you read about some macho hunter getting caught spotlighting deer. About the only excitement a hunter could get out of shooting a deer at night while it is under the trance of a light is when he lies about how and where he killed it to a friend, if he has any.

There is no sport in spotlighting deer at all, it is just some hunter's way of relieving his frustrations because he couldn't bag one during the daylight.

Not only is spotlighting deer or other game a slaughter, but it is also against the law. If you are caught you could be fined up to $500 or imprisoned for 90 days and have your automobile and gun confiscated.

Virginia State Game Warden Sargent Sidney Akers told me that plenty of people are spotlighting this year and both North Carolina and Virginia Game Commissions are stepping up their night time patrols as well as the local law enforcement in an effort to stop this slaughter of our game.

Winter fun for fishermen

Fishing fun doesn't have to end with the onset of winter.

There are many things you can do while awaiting the return of warm weather that will add enjoyment to your fishing next spring.

Trip planning is an excellent winter activity.

Write to tourism and fishing agencies in areas where you would like to fish.

Learn the best time to make a trip for the particular kind of fishing you want to do.

One special winter activity many fishing experts enjoy is building a new fishing rod.

and will help occupy the slow days of winter.

When you finish, you'll have a valuable piece of fishing equipment at considerably less cost than if purchased ready-made.

Many anglers use their time during winter to tie flies, make lures and overhaul their fishing tackle.

Again, fly tying kits, lure kits and books on how to do these things are commonplace items at any good fishing tackle outlet.

Other ideas for winter-bound fishermen include fixing up your boat to be more functional next spring, attending a Virginia Beach course in boat handling and safety, or taking Red Cross first-aid training.

Also, visit your local marine dealer to see what's new and to swap lies about the big fish you didn't catch last season.

Minnows grow to various sizes

Minnows are some of the most interesting fish in the world. Nearly 2,000 species have been identified by biologists.

The fish live in almost any kind of water that will support fish life, and are found on every continent except South America and Australia.

While most minnow species seldom reach a size greater than an ounce or so, and some grow to weigh nearly a pound, reports that at least two members of the minnow family attain great size.

Carp, which are plentiful in many parts of the world, and squawfish, resident only in streams of the northwestern United States, often weigh 40 to 50 pounds and grow to be several feet long.

Squawfish grow as large as 80 pounds. Minnows have strange and varied spawning habits.

Some species are so frivolous that they use the nests of other fish as their spawning sites.

Others simply scatter fertilized eggs wherever they happen to land and swim away ostensibly hoping the best for their abandoned offspring.

Greek and hornhead chubs are a little more concerned about what happens to their spawn.

The male digs a nest in gravel where the female lays the eggs.

bles in his mouth and, one-by-one, places them in the nest.

Presumably this is done to camouflage the spawning site from predatory fish.

Minnows play an important role in nature by providing a plentiful and available source of food for many other species of fish plus many kinds of birds and reptiles.

New regulations in effect for Wheelchair Deer Hunt

New regulations will prevail during the third annual Wheelchair Hunt for deer at Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge this fall.

The hunt will be offered for three consecutive weeks, November 25 - December 1; Dec. 2-8; and Dec. 9-15, with six disabled hunters and their companions hunting each week. The new regulations will allow the disabled hunter and his companion to harvest a combined total of three deer. Previous regulations allowed only the disabled sportsman to hunt while his partner observed and provided necessary assistance.

Two areas accessible to wheelchairs will be available to hunt instead of one as in the past seasons. All applicants for this special hunt must also meet the standard requirements to hunt in the refuge. All hunters must (1) successfully complete a hunter-safety course, (2) pass a shooting skills test, (3) possess a current Virginia Hunting License and (4) pass a written test on refuge regulations.

Disabled hunters have had phenomenal success during past seasons at Chincoteague Island with six hunters harvesting a total of 10 deer in 1978.

For more information about this special hunt, contact the Disabled Sportsmen of America, P.O. Box 26, Vinton, Virginia, 24179 or call Bob Miller - (703) 362-1656.

Boating Tips...

KING OF KNOTS

The "bowline" has been called the "king of knots" for many years. According to the MerCruiser stern drive boatshow crew, no other single knot is so useful on any boat, regardless of size. A correctly made bowline never jams, even when wet. Also, it will not slip. Follow these instructions and then practice the bowline until you can tie it in five seconds. First (A) form a loop of the size required. (B) Then start to tie a common overhand knot, but (C) turn your hand up and to the right, carrying the overhand with it. (D) This gives you a loop in the line with the free end already passed through it. (E) Pass the free end around behind the line, and bring it back through the "hole." (F) Set it up that, and you have a completed bowline.

Lynnhaven Parkway development

New highway to handle mall traffic

By LEE CAHILL

Virginia Beach Sun Public Affairs Writer

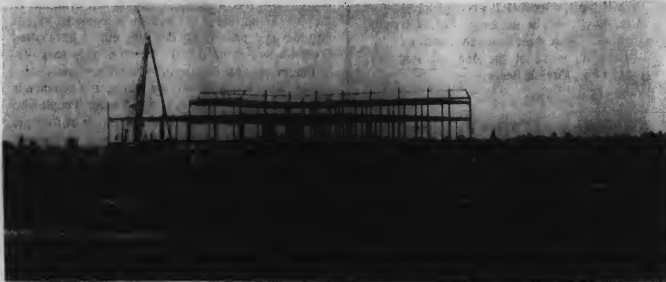

Lynnhaven Parkway south of the Lynnhaven exit of the Virginia Beach-Norfolk Toll Road will be developed into a six lane divided highway to handle the projected 59,000 cars a day expected to be generated by the Lynnhaven Mall.

City Manager George L. Hanbury told council at an informal session Monday afternoon that the developers have agreed to pay for three lanes, rather than the two originally proposed, and reserved enough land for an eight lane road.

Simon and Associates, Inc., the developers also agreed to do all the engineering for the project and to construct the entire six lanes with the city paying its share, which Hanbury said will come to about $990,000. The $990,000 will be included in the new bond issue which will be presented to the voters in January or February.

Simon's share will come to $1.35 to $1.4 million, Hanbury said. The road will extend from the mall to the toll road. North of the toll road the parkway will be continued as a four lane road. Hanbury said that he expected most of the traffic would come from the west of Lynnhaven Park.

Hanbury said that bid specifications for the project will be presented in such a way that the city will know exactly what its share of the project will be. He said that it was a tremendous opportunity for the city to have the road constructed by the developers who will have to go through the same procedures as the city.

The city will be paying for one lane to add to the present two-lane road, curbing and guttering and two additional lanes on the bridge with the developers paying for the other two lanes.

At present 15,000 cars a day use the two-lane road, which, Hanbury said is enough to justify at least four lanes.

Public Works director Oral Lamberts said that the developer is planning to coincide the completion of the highway with the opening of the mall.

Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr. wanted to make sure that the Lynnhaven would not slow up improvement of the Kempsville Indian River Road Intersection.

Hanbury said that it was "not our intention to dump any project in the capital budget."

More beachfront parking space eyed by city

Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon put off for two weeks a decision on spending $420,000 to purchase additional parking space near the beachfront.

City Manager George Hanbury recommended the purchase of property owned by the Fuel Feed and Building Supplies Corporation on 19th Street and Pacific Avenue for $420,000. When the structure which is now on the site is removed an additional 133 parking spaces will be available, Hanbury said.

Hanbury said that another 500 spaces would be available if churches along the resort strip agreed to allow public parking on their parking lots when they are not in use by the church. Several churches do this already, some charging a fee and others providing spaces at no charge.

Hanbury said that another 1000 spaces will be available at the Arts and Conference Center by the use of shuttle buses to the beach, will further improve the parking at the beach.

Sam Houston suggested that the city consider using the old incinerator site on Laskin Road for parking. The city is using the site for water tanks, but the site can still be used for parking, Houston said.

Motel owner Wilson Chaplains said that motel owners have been the culprits of the parking dilemma. Motel owners have been criticized for having illegally parked cars towed out of their parking lots at the expense of the owner.

Wilson pointed out that the people who would benefit from the parking area are residents of sections of the city away from the beach and day users from neighboring cities. He recommended purchasing the land but putting in parking meters or devising some method of making the users pay their way.

Councilman R.L. Riggs said that even with the purchase of the 19th Street and Pacific Avenue property, the incinerator and Dome parking, the city will need more parking.

Action was delayed to give council more time for discussion.

Fishing pier expansion fails to win City Council approval

The Virginia Beach Fishing Pier, Inc., Monday afternoon was denied a conditional use permit to expand its facilities at 15th Street which would involve a further encroachment on city property.

City Council unanimously voted against the permit, overriding the recommending of the Planning Commission for approval.

Opposition to the project was expressed by the Innkeepers Association, the Virginia Beach Erosion Commission and Wilson Chaplain, a motel owner.

City Manager George L. Hanbury also recommended against granting the permit because the renovation on the 3.19-acre parcel would involve westward encroachment on the beachfront, reducing the amount of available publicly-owned beach for recreational purposes. He recommended that any expansion of the pier should be east of the existing structure.

Beach erosion feared

George Langley, of Langley and MacDonald, engineers, representing the Erosion Commission, said the commission was opposed to any increase in the number of pilings placed in the area. Any additional piles will cause a worsening in the beach erosion. If council approves the permit, he said, the pilings should be reduced. In 1962, he said, council had 49 pilings removed. The expansion, Langley said, would create additional cost by requiring pumping beyond the pier to "get away from the semi-permeable ground."

Ned Caton, representing the Innkeepers Association, said that the property involved in the application extends back to Atlantic Avenue. Granting the permit would permit the applicant to build anything he wanted to Atlantic Avenue, he said.

A recent poll shows that 66 percent of the tourists come to Virginia Beach for the sand, surf and sun.

'Flow of sand obstructed'

Chaplain said that the pilings obstruct the flow of sand on the beach. He said that the "shacks and junk" which comprise the fishing pier present a "terrible view from our motel...What is there should be taken down." Sand is trapped by the pilings on one side so that the beach is 50 to 100 feet wider on one side of the pier than on the other, he said.

Councilman W. L. Riggs, saying that the beach must be protected, made a motion for denial.

Attorney Grover Wright, attorney for the applicant, arrived at the meeting too late to present the applicant's side. He had supported the petition, however, on Aug. 30 when the matter was continued.

Virginia Beach woodcarver turns pro

Now a professional wildfowl carver, Harvey Ackiss admires the plaque presented for his pair of fighting turkey gobblers.

By ANNETTE HALL

While most of us attempt to carve our niche in society, a rare few actually pick up a carver's knife to reach that goal. Not so, in the case of Harvey Ackiss, Deputy Data Processing Officer at the Naval Air Station Oceana. He has turned pieces of wood into exquisite wildlife forms with his carver's tools.

Encouraged to show his works, Ackiss has moved from novice to amateur to professional woodcarver in a little over three years. Winning ribbons for his works as an amateur carver prompted him earlier this year to submit his works in the professional category.

Recently Ackiss reached "pro" status in Cajun country. His pair of fighting turkey gobblers competed for ribbons and prize money in the Louisiana Wildfowl Carvers' Exhibition. The piece garnered a first place ribbon, Best in Show for minatures plaque and a $200 check for best in the show. In an impulsive reaction, he kissed the check, his first as a professional woodcarver.

Other pieces shown by Ackiss at the exhibition were also noticed. His flying woodcock took second place in the lifelike stained category; his group of Canadian geese and single turkey gobbler took a second and third place ribbon, respectively.

For all the hours of work which go into a carving, Ackiss feels that turning professional "is very satisfying."

Miniature fighting turkey gobblers garnered awards for woodcarver Harvey Ackiss.

Beach increases contribution to TVDC

Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon agreed to increase its financial contribution to the Tidewater Virginia Development Council (TVDC) to $20,000 from $5,000.

On the recommendation of City Manager George L. Hanbury Council stipulated that if a proposed reorganization of the TVDC does not occur, funding would cease.

The TVDC is attempting a more regional approach in promoting the Tidewater area to potential industrial and business clients. Since most jurisdictions in the council have economic development departments, the TVDC is eliminating its direct local participation with potential industrial clients.

Complaints in the past have been that the council was too Norfolk-oriented.

Hanbury said that Virginia Beach's share is the largest, based on a land and population formula, but that the city "has the greatest amount to gain. Whatever is going to be good for Virginia Beach is going to be good for the surrounding areas, he said. He added that a name change may even be considered to possibly include Hampton and Newport News. Rather than Tidewater, the name may be Hampton Roads.

Mayor Patrick L. Standing pointed out that the council has over a million dollars in assets and a functioning Small Business Development Corporation.

In the 8-3 vote for approval, voting against the appropriation ordinance were Vice Mayor J. Henry McCoy Jr., Councilman W. L. Riggs, and Councilwoman Meyers O'Neil.

Council schedules informal sessions

Starting in January, the Virginia Beach City Council will devote the first meeting of the month (the first Monday) to informal sessions.

Regular agenda items for formal action will be considered on the remaining meeting days, the second, third and fourth Mondays. The fourth Monday also will continue to be a night meeting.

Council will continue to have informal sessions for an hour preceding regular meetings, but will save the first Mondays for in depth discussions of council matters.
